EVENT OF THE YEAR

Seniors Hold Their Annual Banquet at the State House, Wednesday November 18th, '08.

Every person understands that a university does not produce each year a graduating class of the highest standard. The same is true in the lines of football and baseball. Again, in the trend of life, all years are not bright ones. To reach a bright goal, much preparation and effort is necessary. A team must work together, an organization must strive harmoniously, in order to gain best results. So it has been with the Senior Class of '09. For four years we have planned, toiled and pulled together, always with our heads pointing to the top notch, and now that we have almost reached that end, we have a right to feel proud. Who would not?

From our original number of thirty-six as freshmen, there are eleven remaining. Eleven! Who have pushed aside the attractions of a busy world, and placed their goal in a field of deeper learning.

True, others have joined the number, some as strangers, others having fallen backward one year, but in the end, we all stand together. We are a jolly crowd of boys and three ladies, thoughtful and considerate at proper times, yet we abhor the title "dignified." We prefer "jolly," for where is a class more congenial, ready and willing to start something?

Start something! They are always going so. It was but ten days past that "function" was mentioned in a class meeting. Committee appointed, they got their heads together and had things ready. Not the usual affair that enters the minds of arrangement committees, but something of a higher order, demanding thoughtfulness and considerable arranging. The Seniors heretofore have been quiet and mute, individual and bordering on selfishness. Not caring to bother themselves during their easy year, they were content with the good treatment of the Juniors, along the "free good will time" line. Forget that idea in connection with the Class of '09. They gave to the Seniors of last year, but now they realize more fully the necessity and good of sharing these luxuries among themselves. So thought the "function" committee. After one minute of discussion, nothing but a banquet would be thought of. Plans made, readily materialized. The hour gradually drew near.

Wednesday, no school work at all. McFarland spent the entire day, borrowing and getting things together. "Hebe" seemed to have some trouble in getting a collar since he had to cut Middle English. Chaplain Welch was getting nervous, and spent the entire day in library reading "Etiquette," trying to solve the problem of meeting his lady friend from Riesel at train, and escort her to banquet hall without sitting upon his frock. Fortunate was one, Bonner Frizzell, who stood at ease, and watched with amusement the capers of younger and greener ones. Gleams from topics of that day tell us that a considerable stir was aroused among the ladies. True it was a short warning. But picture the Barnard boy, who had no warning that he was going, until the seven o'clock mail of that day. He fixed, and was there too.

At nine o'clock fourteen joyful Seniors with their favored mates, accompanied by their honored Class Professor and wife, tripped gleefully across the walk into the State House. A few minutes of fixing, "how do I look, McFarland," "Greene(loan me one of your buttons," a few more minutes of social chat and all was in readiness for the festival.

Led by President N. C. Perkins with Miss Loraine Maloney, all marched into the beautifully decorated dining hall, arranging themselves around the one T shaped table. So far, McFarland was the only misfortunate one, but as they were seated, the laugh came on Scott, who forgot to arrange the "claws" as he fixed himself in his chair.

Once quiet, one had to forget the usual a moment and look upon the beauty and good taste of the decorations. Suspended from the four corners of the hall, bunting of maroon and old gold met in the center of the ceiling, directly over the table. From that junction, hanging low, was a large flag of the Stars and Stripes. Upon the walls, covering the piano and over the table were college pennants of every kind. Last, but not least, in attraction, was directly before us. A luxurious abundance of cut flowers and ferns adorned the table. So many were there, that it was almost impossible to see the fellow on opposite side. With these surroundings, and in that choice crowd, who could not have enjoyed life?

The menu, too, was not less elaborate than the decorations. Where was the soul who, when after having finished, could not have said, "There was food enough for all. The many courses were served in rapid succession, each one fingering and indulging according to his own taste and manner. It might be said that all seemed at ease but Welch and Collins, they having tried to "clean up" everything and hold their turn in the social game. Knight became excited when Miss McNeill whispered something, and turned over his glass of water. McFarland in one of his explosive outbursts of enthusiasm and amusement broke the button he had borrowed, and to redeem matters in the peculiar situation, he say fit for his collar to trouble him, relieving the irritation with a suspended napkin. Rogers and "Hebe," much could not be heard from them. Miss Shannon entertained as no one else could, in her own way.

With the last course, Toastmaster Perkins rose, and with few chosen words characteristic of the real "Cy," introduced D. D. Rogers with his toast "To the Dewey Monument." Mr. Rogers' response was one worthy of much praise. He was master of the subject, and presented the whole scheme of the Dewey Monument in an amusing and forcible manner. We were proud to have accomplished the building of that grand edifice.

To say that the Senior Girls are the best in school is not flattery. To have heard Miss Shannon with "To the Senior Boys" you could not have thought otherwise. With words and rhyme scheme of her own, she properly characterized every young man of the class, all the while bringing forth volumes of laughter. Probably she hit Scott the hardest by calling him the "Ladies' man."

THE LAST GAME.

Tuesday Varsity and the Scrubs lined up for the last scrimmage of the season, and "thank the Lord" Varsity came out of the mixup without injury. This in itself augurs well for a Thanksgiving victory tomorrow. In only two games this season has our team been in the best of condition. But the fact that no one was injured combined with the very probable return of Captain Thomas to the game insures us a lineup that cannot be excelled.

And aside from physical fitness our boys will have the spirit that cannot be downed. An almost unbroken series of victories has given them confidence in their ability to win. But be it said here that they are not too confident. Far from it. They have played too much football for anything like that to happen. Their confidence is the kind that comes from a knowledge of what they can do. It is the kind that, combined with the fighting spirit which has so often won games seemingly lost, will spur us on to victory tomorrow. For this spirit plus the physical strength and knowledge of the game which our team possess make a combination that, barring accidents and flukes, will be irresistible.

But it might be stated that Baylor has confidence, too. Saturday's victory over Tulane has braced the team up wonderfully. So depend on it they will give us the toughest scrap of the season tomorrow. They have the advantage in weight and (very probably) in playing on a grassy field to which they are accustomed. Punting honors will be about evenly divided, but place kicking chances will be greatly in our favor; our ends are faster down the field and our backfield is not to be duplicated over on the Belt Line. Neither, for that matter, can our line.

But although we figure the "dope" to our advantage, remember that followers of the Green and Gold do the same thing. And they have some grounds for their prognostications. There is no need for a recapitulation of these, however. Anyway, who ever wins, the conflict will be a battle of giants from start to finish. Both squads are game to the core, both have valuable stars, who are fast, aggressive players; both have a good line. And so whoever wins will be forced to battle valorously for supremacy and the defeated will need have no feelings of humiliation because the score is against them.

It is useless to urge you to be there. We know you will be present without the influence of anything we may say. Already old students are coming in. They will be here by the score. The present student body will be unanimous in attendance. And we feel sure that all will yell and sing and that enthusiasm will run riot in support of our representatives on the gridiron. For the team deserves nothing less. It has fought a hard, successful season, without internal dissension or anything else to mar its machine-like efficiency, and tomorrow will witness no let up. Then, too, five men on the field are representing Varsity for the last time. They have played hard, earnest ball, ever sacrificing self for the glory of their alma mater, and we should be there to give them all honor and to cheer them to victory in their final contest for the Purple and the White.

It has been announced that the University band would give a concert in chapel next Wednesday, December 2. However, Prof. King developed a high fever yesterday and it is doubtful if he recovers in time for practice to be resumed and the concert held on the date given above.

The University calendar is a beauty. Don't fail to get one.

THE RALLY TONIGHT.

Tonight the biggest football rally in the history of T. C. U. will be held in chapel. Promptly at 6:30 o'clock the band will open the festivities. Then comes speeches, yells and songs in rapid succession. Let every one be there and help the spirit of the occasion. We need you there in order that every one will know the songs well tomorrow. Don't forget the hour, 6:30 p. m. Let every one come.

Thanksgiving day has rolled around again and once more the weary "student" finds a day's surcease from the monotonous round of study and theme writing. This, be it known is what Thanksgiving means to some. Others, if asked for a definition of Thanksgiving would probably say "turkey;" to others it means the football game in the afternoon and still other's interest will center around the president's reception. True, these, in a way, are, material blessings and we can of course be thankful for them. But there are other things that enter into the spirit of the day, and let us not neglect them, and—, but we didn't intend to preach any sermon, so will close with the injunction that all be bright and happy and enjoy the holiday to the full.

FACULTY RECITAL.

College of Fine Arts Entertains Monday Night.

Monday evening, before one of the largest, most appreciative audiences of the year the fine arts faculty gave their annual recital. The platform was prettily decorated with roses and other flowers and presented a pleasing appearance. Long before the hour for commencement the hall was well filled and although the program was both long and classical, never did the audience lose interest.

Prof. F. W. Wimberly, director of the department of music, showed himself a master of tone and technique in the interpretation of his numbers. Prof. Wimberly becomes more popular with University lovers of music at each appearance and his numbers are always a delight to the audience.

Miss Jennings, as ever, delighted the audience with her rendition, in which she displayed musical skill of a high order. The same might be said of Mrs. Parks and Miss Wallace. Their interpretations were excellent and their numbers were sources of pleasure to all those present.

Mrs. Hunter, sang most engagingly. Her numbers showed to the full the wonderfully flexible qualities of her voice. She was encored again and again, the enthusiastic applause showing that the audience greatly appreciated her efforts.

Mr. Willis C. Hunter was not be-

THE T. C. U. CALENDAR.

As announced in chapel the University calendar, recently issued by the Young Women's Christian Association, is now on sale at the University office, and also down in town.

To attempt to describe the calendar in a way that does justice to its beauty and excellence is beyond the power of mere man. However, suffice to say that from the cover—printed in purple on white paper all the way through to the back it is a model of neatness and beauty. The various sheets—six in number are embellished with pictures—actual photographs—of various things of interest around the University and also in Waco. There is a picture of President Lockhart, followed by new and charming views of the University grounds. Then there are scenes of beauty near the campus and pictures of Carnegie Library and Carroll Chapel.

The calendar is a good reminder of the University. It is good to send to home folks. It is a nice thing to keep for yourself. Get one or more and help the girls out—and you'll get value received.

The Y. W. C. A. girls are to be congratulated upon the successful issuance of this new and charming memento of our school. It is a token of enterprise on their part and the entire student-body will no doubt concur in appreciation of it.

THE Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. met at the regular hour Sunday evening, the subject for discussion being, "Deceptions." Quite a number of young men were present, the majority of whom made helpful talks, and gave interesting illustrations relative to the subject.

Let more of the fellows come to these meetings, for they are practical, helpful, and offer to one the advantage of expressing himself upon his feet, before an audience. Be on hand next Sunday evening.

NO CLASS FOOTBALL.

At a meeting of the athletic council Tuesday it was decided that the association football supplies would not be given out for use in class games. This practically means that there will be no class football this year. It is understood that this action was taken on account of the conduct of several players in the Junior-Freshman game last season. However, we do not see why, if the class games were properly organized, that all undue roughness could not be eliminated. For instance, a representative could be appointed from each class and the committee so formed could have complete charge of the games. They could arrange a schedule—one would probably be best in which the loser dropped out; they could impose penalties for improper conduct on the field and in every way look after the conduct of these engagements and see that nothing went wrong or no ungentlemanly conduct was allowed—thus remedying the impression left by the game mentioned above. A Fresh-Soph game would be peculiarly appropriate, it seems to us.

PRESIDENT'S RECEPTION.

Tomorrow night comes the annual reception tendered by President and Mrs. Lockhart to the faculty and students of Texas Christian University and to their friends. Rumor whispers that this occasion will be distinctly unique. But anyway, the President's reception is always the social event of the year, and every one who comes may be sure of a royal time.

We are sure that the literary societies take great pleasure in loaning the use of their chairs to all who can get through the door or over the transom and carry a chair into the "roost." The two front rows upstairs are really the only ones from which spectators can get a decent view of the stage, but still that is no reason for privateering chairs from the society halls and blocking the view of those who are seated in the aforesaid two rows.

GLEE CLUB TO ENTERTAIN.

The regular term concert of the Glee Club, assisted by the orchestra and Miss Reeves, will be given in chapel Friday night, December 11th. To all who have attended these concerts the mere announcement is sufficient to insure attendance. However, for the benefit of those who have never heard our boys in concert, we will say that this is by all odds the most enjoyable entertainment of the year. The Glee Club alone is splendid. The Glee Club and orchestra together give an entertainment that can hardly be excelled. The two musical organizations, with the assistance of Miss Reeves, insure an evening of pleasure to all who attend. It is a privilege to be able to attend these entertainments. Only three times yearly does the Glee Club appear before the University public and their appearance is always heartily welcomed by the students.

ORATORY NOTES.

Miss Gladys Hudson gave a recital at Valley Mills recently, under the auspices of the Christian church at that place.

Bryant Collins is the latest matriculate in the oratory department. Mr Collins has entered the department to receive training for the New Man's Contest between the Shirley and Add-Ran societies, which will be held in the near future. It is understood that the men who contemplate entering this contest are doing some good hard work toward that end.

Mrs. Hart will read at the C. W. B. M. this week.

THE DEBATE.

The debators—Frizzell and Rogers for the Add-Rans, Tomlinson and Sturgeon for the Shirley's are working earnestly upon their arguments. Time is short, since this contest will be on Friday night, December 4th, and the societies will begin work stirring up enthusiasm for the contest immediately after Thanksgiving.

The contest is sure to be hard fought, as the Shirley's hope to even up matters, balancing the debate against the Declamatory, which was recently won by the Add-Rans. The Add-Rans, on the other hand are confident that they will win this contest also.

Ellen Beach Yaw will sing at Carroll Chapel tonight. Admission to students, 50 cents. It is said that our entire musical population will attend in a body, and probably others besides. Mrs. or Miss (we don't know which) Yaw is said to be able to reach higher notes than any other singer in America. This statement has aroused considerable interest among the boys and several of them who are not even musically inclined have stated their intention of going just to see how she does it.

BASKET BALL PROSPECTS.

The girls of the basket ball squad are training steadily, both on the court and in the gym, and some of the players are developing into veritable "wonders" in their positions. Prospects are growing brighter for games with outside teams and the hope of representing the University in these contests are stirring the girls on to renewed endeavors.

AT OTHER SCHOOLS.

Both "State" and A. & M. claim to be crippled for tomorrow's game. A. & M. is short Leggett, quarter, and Rugel, half. Texas may have both Duncan and Estill out of the game.

Syracuse has never before been accused of having an especially strong team, but the way they defeated Michigan by a score of 28 to 4 would seem to indicate that they could give Yale and Harvard a tight rub.

And Harvard beat Yale. Did you ever notice that Yale is ranked as invincible in the minds of nearly every one. And Harvard, with no athletic reputation of any sort, defeated Yale in the three major sports—rowing, baseball and football.

It is estimated that three thousand old students of the University of Texas will be in attendance at the anniversary exercises at Austin this week. Every department has some place in the scheme of entertainment and the intention is to make this home coming a splendid success.

The frats of Texas have organized for inter-frat football games.

THE EVENT OF THE YEAR.

Mr. Frizzell gave us what we always expect of him—more than the ordinary. "When Freshmen First We Came to College," was a topic of interest to all. The speaker briefly reviewed the class history, placing most emphasis on the Sophomore-Freshman Class fight. He seemed to have remembered the part he played there, forgetting not that he was one of the five unfortunate Sophs.

That the Class of '09 is proud of its Class Professor, no one can doubt. To feel toward him as we do, and know how he regards us, causes feelings of close relationship. In his toast "To the Class of '09," he caused more than one heart to feel what true friendship was, and how we should regard one another. To recall his words concerning the day of graduation, causes one serious thoughts, for how many of us will not really be empty handed out upon the world. Another suggestion or rather truth he offered, and we all agree with him, "While here, seek out your choice for your home, and strive to win that choice."

As Toastmaster Perkins stated "The Creator ordained that night end the day, so Knight would close the occasion."

In his toast "To the Class Professor," Knight spoke just what the class feels—all holding the highest regard, and esteeming him their sturdy friend. As for the matter of the stolen turkey of four years past we were glad that Dr. Eskridge was willing to laugh that away.

After a final toast by President Perkins to all those present, the ladies gathered flowers, and the assembly broke up. Half hour of music and "amusement" on part of some added to the occasion. At twelve o'clock all were ready to leave the place of mirth and plenty, with the one desire that the same might come again.

Successful forward pass and a few line bucks sufficed to work the ball to the center of the field, but there they were forced to kick. Then, during the greater part of the first half the game consisted of an exchange of punts, the ball being continually in Baylor's territory. But finally Fouts went down and secured one of "Robbie's" long punts, a variety of plays, including a successful forward pass and a good sized gain by Robinson around left end, advanced the ball to within ten yards of Tulane's goal. There the Olive and Blue stiffened and two mighty bucks availed Baylor nothing. On their last chance Puett passed to Robinson right on the goal line. Farrell touched the ball and in the ensuing fumble Duncan, a guard, secured the ball behind the line. Puett was tackled before he made the pass, and had he been thrown no score would have been made.

No further scoring was done. During the second half the ball was almost continuously in Tulane's territory, the only exception being when Dreyfus secured a Baylor pass and ambled off down a clear field. He did all right for awhile, but slowed up when he struck the tall grass and was captured on Baylor's fifteen yard line. Tulane was held for downs. Robinson immediately punted far down the field and within a few minutes it was again in Tulane territory. It seemed that Baylor might have scored again during this half, but they persisted in practicing Robinson on field goals. Robbie missed two and Tulane came through the line in a body and blocked another one. The feature of the game was the punting of Robinson, the big half back booting the ball as much as sixty yards. Both teams were able to hold line plunges consistently.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES.

The meeting last week, led by Mary Bain Spence was a report of the convention at Dallas. Una Jackson and Ada Culpepper, who were delegates, gave entertaining accounts of their trip, and told us things that brought us into closer touch with the state association work. Miss Nancy Lee Swann, the State Bible and Mission Study Secretary, has promised to visit our association soon after Christmas.

The Y. W. girls will move into their new home this week. There will be no meeting on Thursday evening, but there will be a Thanksgiving sunrise prayer meeting at 6:15 a. m. in the new hall.

T. C. U. calendars will be on sale before Thanksgiving at the office, Girls' Home, and downtown at Holt's. They will also be on sale at the game.

To the returning students of T. C. U. we need only to say: we are in business at the same old place and are prepared to take care of your wants in the photographic line. Thompson, the Photographer.
