PROF. LEWELLEN'S WORK

Many Responsible Positions Proved Him to Be Successful Educator.

Texas Christian University has lost a noble character and a valuable worker in the death of Prof. Lewellen, Jan. 4, 1912. The immediate occasion of his death was an attack of cerebral hemorrhage, which occurred on Christmas night. Since that time he had been partially paralyzed and unable to speak. He had been in failing health for several months, often being compelled to suspend work for a week or two at a time. Only his irrepressible zeal for duty prompted any service at all during the autumn. He was 49 years of age, and had spent more than thirty years in collegiate work as student and teacher. He was born in Mississippi and educated in Transylvania University and T. C. U. He received the degree A. B. in 1885, A. M. in 1886 then from T. C. U. in 1896 and 1897 he received the degrees Ph. D. and LL. D. These later degrees which cost then a large amount of non-resident study followed by examinations and theses, have not been offered by T. C. U. in more recent years.

Prof. Lewellen was President of West Tennessee Christian College 1889-93, President of Bellvue College, Tennessee, 1893-1903, President of West Kentucky College 1903-09, and since that time Professor of Biblical and Church Literature in T. C. U. During his labors with the colleges he also usually had care of churches, so that he was performing a double service. His work as President was very successful. He was conservative in expenditures and active in securing incomes. He was indisposed to spend before the means were in hand. He had a great appreciation of the value of a Christian College, and inspired confidence in the minds of others. He looked with disfavor on the lowering of the standards of scholarship or the employment of incompetent teachers. He was careful in the management of students, and always maintained a kind but firm discipline. As a teacher, he sought accuracy of scholarship, faithfulness of service.

LEWELLEN THE MAN.

There are two splendid tributes paid by the master genius of the ages to the sterling characteristics of ideal manhood. The first is Hamlet's reference to his father:

"He was a man, take him for all in all, I shall not look upon his like again;" and the second is Mark Antony's famous characterization of Brutus in the closing scene of "Julius Caesar."

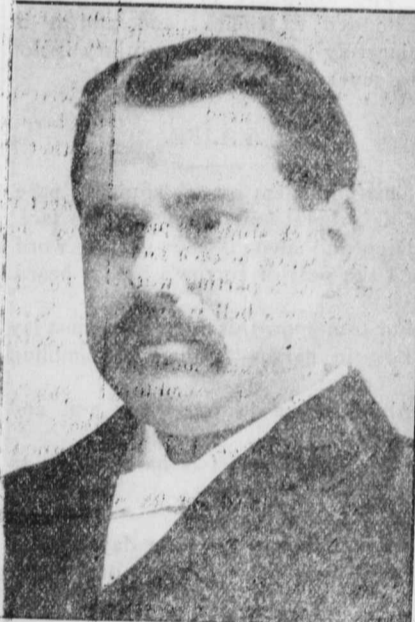

"His life was gentle and the elements So mix'd in him, that Nature might stand up And say to all the world, 'This was a man!'"

The highest and best thing the Danish prince could say of his father was that he was a man. Antony, with characteristic emphasis, reiterates the same sentiment, and in addition defines the term. To be a man is first of all to be gentle—that is, kind, forgiving, courteous; and second, to possess such harmony of mental and moral qualities that no discord can mar the perfect symmetry of life. Perfect harmony of soul, tinged and suffused by kindness and courtesy, is therefore Shakespeare's definition of a man. No better definition has ever been given. Our good old word "gentleman" conveys precisely this idea.

No man of my acquaintance lived up more completely to this conception than did G. A. Lewellen. There was none of the eccentricity of abnormal genius about him, but there was the perfect sanity of an exquisite common sense. No man had better judgment upon any matter within his field of observation. Even in the closing days of his life, his mind rang true upon every question, and his thought was clear as the noon-day sun. Of deception or trickery he had none; his word carried with it the assurance of perfect candor; and he was above any sort of political manipulation for effect. His faith in the Scriptures and in their Divine Author was implicit and firm. Like Paul, he could say: "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto pose of his friend from the time he first took up his work in T. C. U. was to provide a home for the ministerial students, which purpose so successfully culminated in the erection of Goode Hall. Another characteristic touched upon was Prof. Lewellen's ability to become a close personal friend to so many individuals. This, he said, was remarkably true of the students in the University. The life of this educator, as the speaker showed, was also marked by a rare consciousness which kept it in close touch with its Creator. "Kindness that was plainly genuine" was mentioned as a fourth guiding principle.

"Indeed, every day of his life," said Dr. Lockhart, "reminded one of a good book, every page of which contains a beautiful lesson." President Frederick D. Kershner of Texas Christian University then arose "to cast," as he expressed his purpose, "a few flowers of tribute upon the bier of this successful man." He continued: "First place the blood-red robe of industry, that fitting emblem of work. This characterized our friend's whole life. He toiled, toiled

PROF. LEWELLEN AS A FRIEND

"He was MY friend" is the feeling of everyone whose privilege it was to know Prof. Lewellen. And his departure from among us to that eternal rest which we know is his, causes us to mourn the loss of one of the best friends with whom our lives have been blessed. It has not been my experience to know any man who so nearly imitated the example of our Master in being a friend to everyone as did our beloved Prof. Lewellen. With no thought of reward except that of seeing the lives of those he came in contact blessed by his friendship, he was untiring in his efforts to help and encourage all.

Well do I remember that first friendly talk we had together: at his invitation after the dismissal of our class in the Life of Christ one day of my first year in T. C. U., which, too, happened to be Prof. Lewellen's first year with the University. And when I left the room that afternoon, I felt that there was at least one person in the world who had a personal interest in me and my future, and that there was at least one man in whom I could put perfect trust and call MY friend. But this experience just related is in no sense peculiar to myself; it is common to all young men, especially to those who have had the privilege of being in Prof. Lewellen's classes.

While he was all that could be asked for as a personal friend, yet his friendship was larger and broader than the mere personal friendship of the circle of his acquaintances. He was a personal friend to the young men of this great State of Texas and the whole Southwest, and especially was he a friend to the young men preparing themselves for the Christian ministry. How he labored and worked, and even gave his very life's blood for them, as is told in the story of his untiring efforts to build Goode Hall that the young preachers of Texas might have a comfortable home for practically nothing while going to school.

Nor shall I ever forget his words and feel the presence of the friendly love he had for those who were to receive the benefits of his labor as we together would walk over the building, which now stands a monument to his memory, talking and planning for the future when Clark Hall shall have been erected and Goode Hall turned over entirely to the ministerial students. When the clouds were around me thickest and there seemed not one bright ray of hope, I could go and lay before him my troubles and they would disappear one by one.

LOSS OF A RARE FRIEND

Prof. Lewellen's Great Soul And Sympathetic Nature Hard to Replace.

The death of Prof. G. A. Lewellen has fallen as a heavy blow upon the students and faculty alike of Texas Christian University. Personally, I feel the loss of his friendship more than I can tell, and that I have lost something that can never be replaced. One's life can be both brightened and strengthened by contact with a few great souls, and his was one of those lives which make human association and experience worth while. I valued his friendship because it was genuine and unselfish, and because he was never too busy to enter into the warmest fellowship with me in my worthiest moods. He was intensely sympathetic and had a heart-power that was indeed rare. One could converse with him by the hour and never tire. Too often do we meet people who know not how to receive us. They talk us down, either to impress us with their personality or learning, or both; or else because they are lacking in the finer, truer feelings. We have to talk back at them and through their words if we are heard at all, and we shudder instinctively at both their rudeness and coarseness. Such was not Prof. Lewellen. He was one of Emerson's "great souls," and our conversations and communions were never finished. They simply stopped because we had to part. For a score of reasons like unto these, I feel that I have lost heavily since he went away.

Prof. Lewellen was an honest man, and thoroughly despised everything little, mean or contemptible. I never knew a man who had a higher notion of the integrity of man and the virtue of woman than he had. I never heard an unseemly word fall from his lips, and I never left him without feeling the uplift of his generous and open nature. To me it is little wonder that he was sought out and loved by all who knew him. He was well fitted for his work as a scholar and as a student, but it is in a higher sense that his place will be hard to fill. His great soul, his honesty of counsel, his sympathetic helpfulness—these are true qualities hard to replace.

Wise, patient, tender, truthful, faithful, brave, fearless of any man in the consciousness of his own rectitude; loyal, self-sacrificing, fair and square, even to the end—such are some of the terms I love to apply to him. We have all seen in the pro-

IT WAS WORTH WHILE.

Many students were impressed with the funeral services of our late Professor Lewellen. One of them said, "I am a much better boy after hearing the tributes that were paid to his virtues." To live such a worthy life as did this man costs much in self training, self subjection and obedience to duty and principle. It costs more than most people seem to care to pay, for such a life is rare, and we are forced to say with "Reuben": "When, oh when, will come on earth another?" Yet we all agree that the reward that awaited him was more than worth the price. So often we each determine to pay the price, but as often we allow some unworthy matter to divert our attention, allow ourselves to be caught off guard and give under to base desires, exclaiming: "Oh, what's the use!"

Because of its rarity we admire such a life, its loyalty, its high purposes, and its industry. And the student body of T. C. U. is more loyal, determined of purpose and industrious on account of Prof. Lewellen. This is indeed worth while.

NO NEED OF ALARM.

Some of the patrons have been fearful of danger of an epidemic of meningitis, but judging from the most authentic reports, there is no need for alarm. There are only a very few cases of this disease in Fort Worth. We are well quarantined, being so far from the city and even from any settlement. The students are being urged to keep away from the city as much as possible and the school authorities are keeping a close watch upon the situation and are in position to get in immediate communication at any time with the leading physicians of Fort Worth. Reports are secured from these physicians often and announcements made to the students.

PATRONIZE ADVERTISERS.

The advertisers of the Skiff have been very liberal through the year so far,—and what would have become of the paper if they had not been? They have paid up very well, too; much better, we could say, than the subscribers have. But that is not the point here, for it is not the aim of this article to score the subscribers. To keep this generous patronage of the business men of the city, T. C. U. must keep up her old reputation of supporting her college organizations. Any business man is glad for you to let him know that you are attending the university and that you saw his advertisement in the college paper. It will not be considered forward by the clerk in the majority of cases, for he knows too well that such is important information to his employer. It will not be amiss, then, but will be altogether in order for any student to mention the Skiff when he or she goes shopping.

CHANGES IN THE STAFF.

It will be noticed that Miss Wilks has taken the place on the staff formerly occupied by Miss Hackney. She is a close observer and will make a successful Social Editor. Miss Hackney had to drop the place on account of heavy work. Also, Miss Hanson takes the place of Fred Simpson as Editor from the Business Dept. The latter has now very little work in that department, and for that reason is dropping the place. Miss Hanson, on the other hand, takes a complete course in the C. O. B. and is well known to every student in the department.

PRES. KERSHNER, THE AUTHOR.

Pres. Kershner has just received a few copies of the book, "The Religion of Christ," of which he is the author. The book aims to state the essential elements of the Christian religion, showing at the same time the position of the Disciples of Christ. It thus promises to fill a long-felt need. A review of the book will appear at a later date in the Skiff.

Trade with our advertisers.

If you notice an ad in the Skiff or the Collegian of a certain firm, mention it to the clerk in that store the next time you visit it.

Some of the vital problems of life, and some of the things that go to make up real character and constitute a knowledge of extreme importance are untouched in the class room and other places. The need of an organization that can supply these demands is a great one. Aside from a confidential talk between friends, the Y. M. C. A. is the only organization that meets this demand. You are missing something if you don't attend.

If you want to hear an interesting program—something really worth while—attend Y. M. C. A. Friday night. Attend once and you will come again.

MISS GIBSON IS INJURED

Situation Looks Serious But Patient Is Under Care of Competent Physicians.

Wednesday morning about 9 o'clock Miss Kathleen Gibson was performing an experiment in the chemistry laboratory when an explosion occurred and a piece of glass cut a gash in one eyeball. Miss Gibson was taken immediately to Dr. Kookan, a specialist, where the wounded eye was bandaged. The doctor stated that there was very little hope of saving the sight of the injured eye.

The explosion occurred when a lighted match was brought too near the hydrogen gas which was being generated.

Dean Parks took Miss Gibson to Dallas Wednesday evening, where her people met her and where she remains under treatment. Miss Kathleen's sister, who was also attending school, accompanied her.

The sympathy of the students is extended to their friend and it is sincerely hoped that the injury is not so severe as at first appeared.

A LIFE.

Slow and silent is each student's pace
Grief, regret and sorrow in each face;
Deep and silent is each parting word,
As the peal of sorrow's bell is heard.

For tomorrow this great man must lay
Low in narrow walls of crumbling clay;
Although he is free from toil and care,
Aye, but the grief is hard for us to bear.

Oh, you mystic bards in days of old,
Oh, why sang you thus of worries bold?
Did a life like this ne'er 'peal to you,
One stamped deep with virtue rich and true?

One that gave its all for God's great cause,
Toiled both day and night, nor did he pause
Even though weak fevers o'er him crept,
Toiled while you and I, dear brother, slept.

And that we might grow he gave his life,
Honest, smiling, e'en thru toil or strife,
Never boasting of his goodly deed,
But in silent love he healed our needs.

Oh, each head is bowed in reverence low
When God calls a man like this to go:
A religious, pure and loving brother,
When, oh when will come on earth another?

PREPARATION FOR DEBATE

Add-Ran Team at Work on Question Submitted by Shirleys.

Recently the members of the Add-Ran Literary Society chose their debating team, consisting of John Bate-man of Eddy and Charles Bussey of Hutchins, with Roscoe Brinson of Timpson as alternates. These men make a very promising team, the first two named having had more or less experience and the latter being recognized as a careful student. The Add-Rans have much confidence in their men and expect to assist them in every way possible.

This team is scheduled to meet the Shirley team, consisting of J. W. Cockrill and Clifton Ferguson, on the evening of February 21. The contest is one of the three annual inter-society contests and counts toward the winning of the Dr. Gough silver trophy.

The Shirley team have submitted the subject, "Resolved, That government ownership of railroads would be of greater value to the people of the United States than corporation ownership," to the opposing team, and are anxiously awaiting the announcement of their choice of sides.

Bertrand Camp left Wednesday for his home at San Gabriel to see his brother, who is very ill.

hard, and so long, and for others, Goode Hall was built, partly at least, of the life of this man.

And the last sentence fitted so well with the quotation used by Rev. Waits, "Look around you and you see his monument," and with the words that had fallen from the lips of Dean Parks in prayer, "We thank God that as the glow of the setting sun remains upon the clouds, so remains this man's influence with us to brighten our pathway."

President Kershner, as his second tribute, wished to cast at the foot of the body the "spotless lily as an emblem of the purity" of the soul that had possessed it. "Why, friends," he spoke earnestly, "I looked into his eyes and I saw his soul." The speaker told how Prof. Lewellen had been able to inspire business men and donors to the Goode Hall fund with confidence in himself and his cause because of this plainly evident purity of his life.

As a last tribute, President Kershner gave the "little violet of fidelity" as a memento to the steadfast faithfulness of his friend to his own high purposes and to his God. He affirmed that if any man other than Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith," it was this our brother.

clearness of instruction, and personal attention to students. He was open-minded, investigative, sane, sensible. He was a progressive conservative on almost all questions; for while he wished ever to hold to the true and tried he desired never to reject the good because it is new or opposed by some one else.

In his pupils he endeavored to develop the highest ideals of manhood and womanhood. He found his supreme ideal in the Christ, whose masterful lessons and life always won his admiration and devout homage. Hence in teaching he dwelt upon the more striking features of the Gospels with enraptured heart. With this highest inspiration burning in his own soul, he sought to inspire his students to the highest usefulness.

He was an untiring worker. While he was in the field raising money for the building that now stands on the grounds of T. C. U. a silent witness of his faith and endurance, he often traveled when his weakness warned him to desist. More than once through the heat of summer he remained on the road, when he should have been in the mountains or on the seashore seeking recuperation.

Two weeks before his death, when a new book came to his table, he gave it a careful study as if he were not already standing on the verge of the grave. No doubt such unremitting labors hastened his final relapse. He loved to take an opportunity for good rest, if passed, it return no more.

But he has laid aside all earthly labors. He will be sadly missed by all who are connected with the University and by a large circle of other friends. His life will remain to all who are left behind him a sweet memory and a shining example.

Prof. Lewellen as a Friend

Yes, and more, too, would he do, because he was a friend in need. As an instance, he remained at the University all afternoon when too ill to meet his classes in order to meet with the Board of Trustees, when they could get time to hear him, as intercessor for the Ministerial Association with a plea that their needs in connection with the new building be given the proper attention.

What a friend he was! Not only to me; not only to those who came in direct contact with him; not only to the University; not only to the church, but what a friend he was to all humanity! Therefore it is not proper that I write,

"Oh, how I shall miss him," but, voicing the sentiments of all that knew him, let me write:
 "Oh, how WE shall miss him!
 In school, at chapel, in church;
 To know him was to love him,
 Our friend, so kind and true!"
 GROVER W. STEWART.

Lewellen The Man

Him against that day."
 For a man like G. A. Lewellen, there is no death. He lives in that truer life which we enter alone through the portals of mortal dissolution. He has become a member of that immortal "Choir Invisible," whose "music is the gladness of the world," not only of time but likewise of eternity.

THE ART DEPARTMENT.

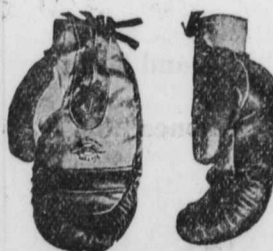

Miss Rayte Wilcox of Polytechnic is now head of the Art Department. Miss Kate Jackson was not able to return this year.

The following students have enrolled for art: Josie Cannon, Ethel Brown, Louise Anderson and Sue Webb.

The art students are delighted with the course in art history offered by Dr. Kershner.

In a recent letter from Liverpool, Mrs. Cockrell asks to be remembered to all the Brushes, and says she would like to be with them at their meetings.

Some new furniture has arrived for the Art Department.

The lovelorn youth can always figure out that two can live as cheaply as one, but it's hard to prove it afterward.

A T. C. U. preacher declares that a preacher needs legs, lungs and liver. He might have included bread, brains and beefsteak.

A Marion County judge considers an attempt on the part of a man to dictate what his wife shall eat, good grounds for divorce. Here is where the woman has the advantage. She simply sets out on the table what she pleases and lets her husband take his choice.—Exchange.

Pity the man who puts on skates to show the youngsters how it was done when he was a boy.—Exchange.

Are you down on your luck or grouchy about something? If so, you are missing something that belongs to you. Get in a cheerful mood, come to the meetings of a cheerful organization and be a cheerful worker.

Don't knock, be a live wire—come join the Y. M. C. A. Every student is cordially invited to attend our meetings. We need your co-operation in this work.

When you see a muff coming down the street, look again. Nine times out of ten you will find a girl behind it.

Don't get mad at the man who tries to make a fool of you. He can't do it, unless you're one already.

LEWELLEN AS I KNEW HIM.

(Chalmers McPherson.)

Since Brother Lewellen has been in Texas, I have been thrown much with him. I ask the privilege of mentioning three things which impressed me most favorably.

1. When he came into our midst he came as factor in the work which the brethren of the State were attempting in the name of the Christ. HE MOVED HIMSELF—body, mind and heart. He at once became one of the working forces. He was not an alien in a strange land; not one of the fellows of the lesser sort who see nothing worth while except those things for which they happen to be receiving a salary, or with which they happen to hold some official or other prominent position. He was BIG in all that goes to make up real human greatness.

2. He was a man of unflinching faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and of unfailing loyalty to the Bible as a revelation from the Almighty God. He did not belong to the class who deem it as an indication of greatness to doubt that which was found on the pages of the Book. Neither did he believe it blindly. He had a reason for the faith which was within him, and this reason he stood ready to give to his students or to others. Young people who sat in his classes did not go from the walls of the institution questioning the Divinity of the Man of Galilee, or handing out their doubts concerning some of the great truths of the Bible or placing interrogation points in connection with those things of which Jesus Christ spoke confidently as being records of historical incidents. When the Son of God spoke this was sufficient evidence for him, because he knew in whom he believed and why.

3. He had intense sympathy for the young man who was trying to overcome difficulties that he might suitably prepare himself for the ministry of the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. Goode Hall stands as a monument to what was in his heart. Is there not something approaching the Divine in a sentiment such as this? Can you refrain from thinking of Him who gave His life that others might be helped?

When I sat in the audience during the funeral services, as others were speaking of the great loss which was ours and the family, my mind fastened itself on the passage from David—"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints." That which causes our hearts to ache is a delightful thing to those of the Home Land; that which looks so dark to us adds luster above; that which brings tears to our eyes wreathes the face of the Father in smiles. Let us praise the name of the Lord because He prepares a royal reception for those who have shown themselves to be saints down here.

"There is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel"—one great in his faith, great in his love and great in service.

LEAP YEAR.

The first and best evening of entertainment of this year was given in the rooms of Misses Potter, Wilkes, McNeil and Reeves last Saturday night.

On the arrival of the last guests the hostesses announced that it was time to prepare for the feast, so the entire assembly made toast, salad, tea and sandwiches, also fresh country sausage which was brought by Miss Shirley from her home, was cooked. The eat was made complete by serving cream and Christmas cake which the girls brought from their mother's pantry.

Messrs. Luther Parker, Clarence Hall, Bertrand H. Camp, Oscar J. Wise and Will Massey were the honored guests. On account of such a delicious feast, and the excellent way in which the girls entertained, the boys came away feeling that they had been highly honored, and each congratulated the other on having received such a treat.

OLD STUDENTS WED.

The report has come to us of the marriage of Mr. Bill Bailey of Holland and Miss Ida Foster of McKinney, both of whom were at one time students of T. C. U. The happy couple will make their home in Holland. The Skiff wishes that many New Years will bring to them such happiness as did this year 1912.

PROHIBITION LEAGUE.

There is in Texas Christian University an organization known as the Prohibition League, which perhaps is known only in a very limited extent among the new students of this organization. The purpose of this league is to instil in the minds of young men and young women some idea of the underlying principles of what prohibition really means.

It is also the purpose of this league to send an orator to a State Oratorical Contest that is held some time at the first of April. The man that wins the local contest is given a very beautiful gold medal by Mr. Lackey of this city; then he is sent to the State, if he is fortunate enough to win first place there he receives another very beautiful diamond medal and a sum of money amounting to $50. The man who wins second place gets $15. If he should win first place in this contest he is sent to the inter-state contest; if winner there, he goes to the national. So you see there is no end of honor to the winner in this contest.

Some young man from some University in Texas will win this prize; why can not that young man be you? There are brilliant men in this institution who have neglected their talents year after year. Now is the time to awaken those dormant faculties. Do something, be something. If you believe in right, and you know that you are right, do not be indifferent, but give your help and your influence to a worthy cause, for you are needed.

A woman in the Belleville postoffice is said to have given up her husband rather than lose her job. Husbands can be obtained without a civil service examination.—Selected.
