

CAP AND GOWN EDITION

WEEK OVERFLOWS WITH COMMENCEMENT EVENTS

This week will prove a busy one, not only for the senior class, but for practically every person connected with the university. With such a variety of events scheduled to follow one right after another, no person hereabouts should experience a dull minute. Everyone will be entertained in various ways, and the seniors will at last realize the peculiar mixture of pleasure and pain that graduation always brings.

Baccalaureate Sermon.

Members of the class will for the first time don their caps and gowns Sunday morning to hear the Baccalaureate sermon. This address will be delivered at the First Christian Church in the city instead of in the university auditorium. This is a departure from the usual custom of having all events connected with commencement week held on the campus. Dr. J. G. Slayter, pastor of the East Dallas Christian Church, will deliver the sermon. (This phase of the commencement week program probably will have occurred before this issue of the paper is off the press).

Reed Contest.

The next feature will be the reed oratorical contest, Monday night. This annual event is of much import to the school orators, and the prizes offered are particularly well worth striving for. Mr. Malcolm H. Reed of Austin, member of the T. C. U. board, awards a gold watch to the winner each year. In addition to this, the victor receives a cash prize of $20 from the university and the coveted "T" ring.

So far four men have signified their intention of competing in the contest. Their names and subjects follow:

- Dewey Lawrence—"Woodrow Wilson."
- Forest McCutcheon—"Education."
- Cedric Hamlin—"A Tribute to France."
- Harry Martin—"Marshal Foch."

One requirement of the contest is that the orations be original.

Varied Program.

The first fine arts recital will be presented Tuesday night. Piano, vocal, violin and oratory numbers will make up an interestingly varied entertainment. Following is the program:

Piano solos—"Two Larks," (Lechetizky); Nocturne (Liszt); Wedding March, (Greig)—Grace Abernethy.

Vocal solos—"Now Slips the Crimson Petal," (Quilter); "The Wind," (Spross)—Beatrix Gibson.

Reading—"The Philosopher in the Apple Orchard," (Hope)—Carolyn Crisp.

Vocal—Aria, "Queen of Sheba," (Gounod)—Grace Whitsett.

Violin solo—Prize song, "The Meistersingers," (Wagner)—Merrill Turner.

Piano solo—Ballade in B minor, (Liszt)—Lucille Durrett.

Vocal solos—"Passing By," (Purcell); "Evening Song," (Gilberte)—Howard Hill.

Reading—"The Resurrection," (Arnold)—Gertrude Davies.

Vocal solo—Aria, "Romeo and Juliette," (Gounod)—Hazel Dean. Miss Lillian Wright and Miss Sannie Andrews at the piano.

PLAN TO PERPETUATE "Y" WORK IN T. C. U.

Mr. E. G. Howe of the Southern Department Headquarters and Robert F. Gribble, State Student Secretary, together with State Secretary Coulter visited T. C. U. last week and conferred with President Waits and the Advisory Board of the Y. M. C. A. relative to the perpetuation of the work as started this year. The need of a paid Secretary was recognized by all and the State Committee offered its services in co-operating with local interested men to raise a sufficient budget to provide for a Secretary for next year. Mr. Gribble was in Fort Worth a short time on Wednesday and with Mr. Eastwood a fair start was made in the matter of getting pledges to the work.

CASH PRIZE AWARDED "ABNORMAL" TREATISE

Announcement was made Friday that the prize of $10 in gold offered for the best paper submitted in the course of Abnormal Psychology would go to Beatrice Mabry. Her subject was "Hypnotism and Its Uses."

The awarding of this prize sets a precedent in the university, no such prizes having been offered in any department before. At the beginning of the winter term Prof. McDiarmid, instructor in the course, announced that the reward would go to the student submitting the best term paper on any subject discussed throughout the course. Prof. McDiarmid and two other members of the faculty, Prof. Bryson and Prof. Wilson, acted as judges of the fifteen excellent papers submitted. The subjects of these treatises covered practically every phase of abnormal

FORMER TEACHER TURNS EDITOR IN FRANCE

All during the war T. C. U. has been fortunate in having at least one very close connecting link with France in the person of Chaplain James A. Crain, formerly a member of the faculty. Chaplain Crain has sent various mementoes to the library, and in every way possible kept "home-folks" here at the university informed on happenings of especial interest to them.

And now Mr. Crain, as T. C. U. people know him, has turned editor. He is responsible for a two page bulletin, called "The Camp Dodge Daily," published by the Transportation Corps at Camp Dodge, A. P. O. 701, France.

The bulletin gives both news of the camp and items of import concerning the A. E. F. A new baseball team just formed at Camp Dodge is supplying entertainment for the non-players. The "Y" is on the job as usual, announcing movies and vaudeville at stated hours.

Following is a clipping from the bulletin concerning Ford's plan to build "Tin Lizzies" in Europe:

"The Ford Motor Company has announced plans for the construction of assembling plants at Cadiz, Spain, Copenhagen, Denmark, and Bordeaux, France. The plants will cost $300,000 each. The Cadiz and Copenhagen plants will be able to turn out approximately 500,000 cars each year. The Copenhagen plant will supply Poland, Scandinavia and Russia. Rights have also been obtained to sell "Tin Lizzies" in the Belgian Congo."

"Robbie, can't you play without making all that noise?" asked his mother.

"No, mamma, I can't. You see, we're playin', picnic, and a storm has come up and I'm the thunder," replied Robbie.

psychology, from dreams to insanity.

According to the judges, although it was not an easy matter to reach a decision, they found in Miss Mabry's paper a concise and accurate review of the history of Hypnotism, theories regarding the subject, and uses in which it has value.

NEW TRIANGLE FORMED WITH BAYLOR-S. M. U.

T. C. U. has another major debate on her hands for next year. The new triangle being formed is between T. C. U., S. M. U., and Baylor. This will mean two big triangles in the field of debate for our University. The past year the school won decisions over Trinity University and Southwestern in what is commonly called the Triangular Debate.

Baylor has not definitely decided for this new organization, but it is probable that she will, and this will be the big thing of the year. It will likely necessitate T. C. U. having about eight speakers, four in this and four in the old contest, but this will be an easy matter because about twenty-five have signified their intention of making a try for a place.

Simmons College at Abilene has challenged T. C. U. for a dual debate next year. No official action has been taken as yet on this matter, but it is more than probable that if the new triangle is formed this debate will be impossible.

Representatives of Oklahoma State University wrote that they would consider a debate with us for next year. It is to be hoped that some kind of a triangle between Oklahoma, Texas and T. C. U. can be formed. In this case we could have one contest each term and come out with flying colors in all.

J. PLUVIUS AGAIN DEFEATS NETSTERS

This foolish Texas weather of the past few weeks has been especially hard on the good dispositions of local tennis enthusiasts. Nearly every time they dress up in their white linens and saunter forth to try their skill, they sprint back to the buildings in about two minutes utterly drenched in a sudden shower.

In what promised to be a real contest with S. M. U. Thursday, only four single matches were played, the visitors taking all.

PRESIDENT ADVOCATES MANY NEEDED REFORMS

DELEGATES SELECTED FOR HOLLISTER MEET

For the first time in her history Texas Christian University is to be represented at the Ozark Mountain Conference for College Men. J. W. Boultinghouse, Cedric Hamlin, Terry King and Forest McCutcheon have definitely decided to take advantage of the great opportunity afforded. Other men who have the matter under consideration are Paul Boynton, Dewey Lawrence and Eugene Douglass.

Representation at this conference marks a forward step in the progress of T. C. U. in attaining the ideals for which our institution stands.

DABBS TAKES PRIDE IN BASEBALL SHOWING

We cannot refrain from printing a note of appreciation received from a former member of the T. C. U. faculty, Howard B. Dabbs, who served in the navy during the war. Following is a part of his letter:

"Say! But T. C. U. looks good through the Skiff. I have enjoyed showing the baseball results to a Baylor classmate of mine here. He says he is not at Baylor any more! I assure him that I am still a T. C. U. man and never shall be anything greater. I must congratulate the Skiff staff this year. The sheet is alive and the paper comes to me regularly—a thing that has not happened before."

Mr. Dabbs also writes that he wants Horned Frogs for both this year and last. His present address is Hitchcock Hall, University of Chicago.

As briefly announced in the Skiff last week, Frank Ogilvie was elected president of the student body for next year. Although a member of the Shirley Literary Society, Ogilvie was a non-partisan candidate and he was supported by members of both societies. Ogilvie was one of several students who won commissions in the army, and then returned to school following the signing of the armistice to complete their courses. He will be a graduate in the department of law next year.

A. S. Douglass, who was elected vice president, is also a returned officer. He, too, will be graduated in law next year. Both Ogilvie and Douglass were two of the strongest athletes in the university this year. Beulah Bell, secretary, will receive the B. A. Degree next year. She is a post-graduate in music and a popular student.

Following is a list of the excellent reforms which Ogilvie pledged himself to support if he were elected:

The inauguration of student self-government.

The establishment of a closer relationship between the students of the university and the business men of Fort Worth.

The encouragement of athletics.

Co-operation in procuring a new gymnasium.

The institution of a big home-coming of students each year, preferably at Thanksgiving.

The adoption of a written constitution for the student body.

PARTING MESSAGE OF DR. WAITS

"I have fought a good fight. I have kept the faith." In a final talk in chapel Wednesday, President Waits asked each student to apply this test to himself as he looked back over his year's work.

"I think the school as a whole has fought a good fight," he said. "When I recall that the work done in this university during the days of the Students' Army Training Corps was pronounced by government inspectors as the best of twenty-five colleges in the Southwest, I realize that every student did his daily duties to the best of his ability."

Dr. Waits appealed to the students to keep their religious faith intact as the trials of life are faced. "Remember, if you have not God you have nothing, no knowledge you might attain," he said.

Miss Lucille Durrett, graduate in the piano department last year, followed Dr. Waits with an exquisite rendition of Liszt's "Ballade" in B minor. She played with the ease and smoothness that characterize the technique pupils of Mrs. Doering, under whom Miss Durrett has studied this year.

"Well, Dinah, I hear you are married."

"Yassum," said the former cook. "I've done got me a man now."

"Is he a good provider?"

"Yessum. He's a mighty good provider, but I'm powerful skeered he's gwine ter git kotched at it."

DEATH ENDS HELPFUL LIFE OF MRS. FOSTER

T. C. U. lost an earnest friend by the death of Mrs. Charles Ann Foster, commonly called "Aunt Charlie," the mother of Mrs. B. E. Ford, which occurred Tuesday.

Mrs. Foster lived near the university nearly twelve years, and was personally interested in many of its teachers and students; and, though she was eighty-five years of age, she took as keen interest in the success of orators and artists, in intercollegiate games and contests as if she were one of the students.

She was brought up in Kentucky and lived to see the growth of states from their early settlements from Alleghanies to the Pacific Ocean. Her husband was a soldier in the Mexican War, and her home was pillaged during the Civil War. Consequently, she took a deep interest in politics and wars, and carefully followed the reports of the recent great struggle in Europe.

Her husband was a faithful country preacher who often sacrificed his own interests in behalf of his higher duties. Often when his ministry called him from home, Mrs. Foster took charge of farm, barnyard and house alike. She reared a son and two daughters, to all of whom she gave a collegiate education. She lived to see the value of such training to her children.

Mrs. Foster was as regular an attendant at the university church as her strength would permit; and often afterwards made thoughtful remarks on the context of the sermon. She had no sympathy with the custom of some in going to church merely for entertainment.

She left no estate, having several years ago divided all her property among her children. She lived with Mrs. Ford, and hers was a familiar face at the "store," where she enjoyed the life and even the levity of the students who came and went. "Aunt Charlie" was loved by many about the university and will be greatly missed by all.

In a Vermont town they tell of a suitor who, after some years of devotion, finally proposed to the lady of his choice.

"But, Henry," protested the lady, "this is really sudden. You had better give me a week to think it over!" "Very well, my dear," said Henry. And after due reflection he added: "Perhaps it would be as well if I thought it over myself at the same time"

A charitable old lady happened one day to be visiting a school where a young incorrigible was undergoing punishment for a series of misdemeanors.

The teacher cited him as the worst boy in the school, with whom she couldn't do anything, and one upon whom she had tried every form of punishment.

"Have you tried kindness?" asked the benevolent old lady.

"I did at first, but I have got beyond that now."

At the close of the visit the old lady asked the boy if he would call and see her on the following Saturday. A boy arrived promptly at the hour appointed. The kindly hostess showed him a lot of pictures, and set before him a delicious lunch on her best china. Then she thought it about time to begin her little sermon.

"My dear," she began, "were you not very unhappy to stand in the corner before all the class for punishment?"

"Well, lady," broke in the boy with his mouth full of cake, "that wasn't me you saw. It was Harry. He gave me a nickel to come here and take your pawin'!"—Country Gentleman.

STORY-TELLING CLASS CONTRIBUTES BOOK FUND

The '19 class in Story Telling, taught by Dr. Wilson, has put itself on record by making a liberal contribution to the library fund for the purpose of purchasing several books containing classic stories for children.

This year is the first time such a course has been offered in T. C. U., and, according to Dr. Wilson, the Psychology of Story Telling is not being taught in any other school in this part of the country. Dr. Wilson put in several years collecting data on this subject for his Ph. D. thesis.

An English lord who had just arrived from England was talking to an American Boy Scout. "My grandfather," he said, "was a very great man. One day Queen Victoria touched his shoulder with a sword and made him a lord."

"Aw, that's nothin'" the Boy Scout replied. "One day Red Wing, an Indian, touched my grandfather on the head with a tomahawk and made him an angel."

DR. CARY POINTS OUT NEED OF MEDICAL MEN

Pointing out that in 1914 there were 28,000 medical students in the United States, whereas there are now only 12,500, Dr. Cary of Baylor Medical College, Dallas, emphasized the imperative need of a young man in that profession in a chapel address last Friday. Other startling figures produced by Dr. Cary were these: In 1914 there were 6,000 graduates in medicine. Today there are only 2,700.

Dr. Cary declared that the service of medical men in the war had raised the profession to a place of dignity it never before had enjoyed. He stressed the importance of thorough preparation, such as that offered in the two year pre-medical course in this university. He also urged that preparatory courses for nurses and pharmacists be introduced in standard schools as a means of encouraging these vocations.

Art Exhibit.

Possibly the most "sociable" affair of the week will be the art exhibit in the art studios Wednesday from 4 to 6 p. m. Mrs. Cockrell has decided to depart somewhat from president this year and have a rather large exhibit of her own work as well as that of her pupils. She will show some of her sketches done in Europe a few years ago and a dozen or more late paintings that have not been exhibited here before. Rugs, mats, baskets and other articles made by the reconstruction classes during the fall and winter will be shown. Refreshments will be served by students of the department. Everybody is invited to attend.

Class Day.

Class day exercises will occupy Thursday evening, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. The program will be given on the campus, with the bandstand as a stage for the speakers. Following is the order of procedure:

- Processional.
- "The Glorious Past."—Thelma Smith.
- "Future."—Shelby Faulkner.
- "To Our Alma Mater."—Grace Jones.
- (Presentation of the senior gift to the school).
- "The Last Tribute."—Presidents of classes: Freshman, Carl Slay; Sophomore, Howard Hill; Junior, Ben Hill.
- "Bequest to the Class of '20."—Thelma Smith, president of the Senior class.
- "Last Will and Testament."—Riley Aiken.
- Funeral Pyre—Class. (Burning of the books.)
- Class Song.
- Alumni Meeting.

A meeting of the Alumni Association will follow immediately. It was planned at first to hold a banquet on this occasion, but, owing to the rather serious illness of Douglas Tomlinson, president of the Association, in a local hospital, the idea was abandoned. A number of former graduates are expected to arrive for the meeting.

Commencement Exercises.

Final commencement exercises will be held Friday morning at 10 o'clock in the chapel. Following an address by Dr. W. B. Bizzell, president of Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College, the degree of Bachelor of Arts will be conferred on twenty-seven seniors in the literary department by President E. M. Waits, who will also issue diplomas to the graduates in other departments of the university, including Brite College of the Bible, numbering fifty-nine altogether. Honors will be awarded at this time, and free scholarships will be presented students with the highest averages in the different classes.

The most economical furniture for the careful buyer is GOOD furniture. This is the kind that is not affected by changes in style and it is the kind of which one does not tire.

Since you must live with your furniture it is important that you make the right choice in selecting it. Unless you have given a great deal of thought to the subject you will need the help of a connoisseur in the undertaking.

During our 42 years in Fort Worth we have placed furniture in thousands of homes, and it is our pleasure to help you decide what furnishings will be best suited for your home. Bring us your problems, however difficult they may seem and profit by our experience of almost half a century.

per factory, but I have the same graduated feeling that they do, only without any expense attached. And they sent me down to the post office after stamps, and I got to buy many dollars' worth. It was the first time I ever bought over three three's and a one, and I flaunted them proudly before the eyes of everybody who was standing near. Incidentally, I have a taste in my mouth from licking those stamps that tastes like I imagine a cow's cud would if she had been eating a diet of onions and broomweeds.

I opened my left dresser drawer while ago and there sat a mouse. We eyed each other, Ethyle, but there was nothing to hit him conveniently with, and so I merely shoed him away. Fine state of affairs, say I, Ethyle, when a body has to sit idly by and know her best—dresser scarfs are being literally eaten into tidbitlets by something that can just run a little faster than she can. Fate is cruel. But all I'm Oh, dearest Ethyle:

The hour grows late. It is fast waxing near the morn, but I decided I just had to write and tell you what a glorious time I have been having. You kno', I have been going with the old girls a good bit all year? Well, my madness showed its method the other night, Ethyle! I got invited to go along with them to a party out at Mrs. Graham's (that's, another town, Senior,) and speaking of larruping times, one was certainly had by all! We got to order our own refreshments, with a waiter and everything, which does indeed beat anything I ever heard of before. Morale: Ethyle, it pays to keep an eye open for whom to assemble with.

But that ain't all. What excites me more'n ever, I've been helping the Seniors send their invitations. I've licked stamps and stuck in envelope flaps until I feel like a p-mouse kindergarten. Some of the girls have found little young pink mice in their hats, trunks, shoes, etc. I prefer the adult active type, I believe. Tho', of course, it's all a matter of personal opinion. If you're very fond of children, you might care more for the younger ones.

Ahd oh, yes! The man I told you about the other day made fun (between the lines) of my letter—well,

I got another letter from him, and he said as soon as they could write to Washington and ask about me, they'd let me know if I was fired or hired. I know very well Woodrow Wilson doesn't know anything about me, even if he is President of the U. S. A. And even if he did, he's not there. Here I'll have to wait until he gets back from Europe before I can find out about my job—unless they may cable over there to see about it. There sure is a lot of red tape in the Government, Ethyle, but I think I'm glad I'm maybe going to be connected with it. And if I am, when I write to you, you'll be corresponding with an executive of the Government of the U. S. A. of America of the world.

The Frogs came out at last (that's our annual, Ethyle, not an animal). I thot I should surely die of being unable to wait before they finally did come, but I've been kinda sorry since, too, after they got here. I've had to cut nearly all of my exams., I've been so busy getting people to write in mine. And speaking of fine looking pictures, mine just simply shines up that whole Freshman page. And what is more, my name is mentioned in the book four times. Everybody looked the very first thing to see what was said about them, and I sure would have been hurt if my name hadn't been in. What bothers me, tho', Ethyle, is just when I am rushedet between exams. and Horned Frog writing, I'll pass by Mrs. Cockrell sitting calmly out in the campus, painting the front of Main Bldg. Just as if the buildings wouldn't be there two or three hundred years from now. I get all stewed every time I see her because I am so busy and she just looks the very picture of leisure, etc.

There was that mouse again. He ran up between our two closets, stopped, and then deliberately chose to hun in mine. I can't understand that, Ethyle.

It is now after one o'clock, that's no lie, either, Ethyle. I must stop now, and outline a book or two for Mr. Wilson for tomorrow. I hope this letter is a pleasure to you, for I am very sleepy and had much rather be fast asleep in bed.

With all fond kisses, I am,
ANNIBEL.

P. S.—More'n likely, this is the last letter you'll get from me here, Ethyle. Oh, it hurts me so to think of leaving this T. C. U. college. I'd be willing most to stay and help be janitress if I thot I could get instituted to stay a while. Ah!—(a great shuddering sob escaped me then. I think I had better stop.) Until we meet again, dear,

ANNIBEL
P. S. the second—I borrowed a mouse trap and caught that mouse. Fate is kind.

Seniors Revel in Social Delights As End of Student Life Approaches

Amid the grand march to the goal, the seniors, have most graciously stepped aside without thought for tomorrow and drunk deeply of social functions.

On Saturday evening Professor and Mrs. Alexander entertained the nineteen, delighting the hearts of all. The arrangement for the evening was entirely in keeping with college activities, but so disguised that all forgot their dignified positions and turned backward, turned backward, just for the night.

First, each one cartooned and wrote a short character sketch of the one to his right. After a careful criticism, Lena Gilbert was awarded a small copy of Rembrandt's famous painting, "The Golden Helmit," in recognition of her skill—Professor Alexander being the one portrayed—in the following lines the class professor saw himself as others see him.

He's lean and lanky,
But not a bit cranky,
He's patient and kind—
The best we could find.

Then next in order was a track meet where rare ability was shown in stunting. Sides were chosen by the president and secretary of the class. In counting points they stood three to twelve, in favor of the secretary's team, and Grace Jones was given a picture of two athletes dashing into contest.

Last but not best and most satisfying to all was a delicious salad course. In short a joyful occasion.

Then Wednesday evening, the senior girls from the city, Myrna Agerton, Marian Booth, Gladys Parker, and Jessie Bardin entertained the class, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander and Mr. McDiarmid at the home of Mrs. Graham.

The desire and will to win started with the evening when some began to "roll 'em bones"—at hearts, and others most vigorously punched pea-nuts. In this game, progression was in order, though some remained at the peanut stand for many intervals, Mr. McDiarmid and Mrs. Alexander remaining at the head table during the entire evening. As a result Mrs. Alexander received a box of real hand-made divinity.

Then as though we were suddenly thrust into Joseph's we were given menus, asked to give our orders please, and served according to our desires. In spite of philosophical reasoning and the quick wits of men, Mr. McDiarmid was unable to interpret his appetite in terms of

FOUR RECITALS FILL INTERESTING WEEK

One more week has passed into the channels of history and as we, the students of T. C. U., think back on our college days we will always remember it as one of the most pleasurable. We can remember it as one week which carried in its wake four delightful and beneficial recitals.

Monday night, Merrill Turner and his well-known "fiddle" held a large audience spellbound for the evening. His renditions of several of Kriesler's numbers were especially enjoyed, and he liberally responded to an encore with "The Rosary." The entire program showed a high degree of artistic skill.

Miss Powell presented Miss Ireta Robison, a post-graduate in oratory, Tuesday evening. Miss Robison read "What Every Woman Knows," by J. M. Barrie. Her portrayal of the various characters was excellent and each type stood out clear and distinct.

"The Witching Hour," by Augustus Thomas was the modern drama interpreted by Miss Thelma Smith, post-graduate in oratory, Thursday evening. Her manner was that of perfect ease, and her impersonation stood out very true to the characters. Her portrayal of the men under their tense mental strain was especially good.

On Friday, Miss Erskine Long, who was a post-graduate in oratory last year, read "The Blue Bird," by Maurice Maeterlinck. Miss Long is a reader of experience and her appearances are always welcomed by her audience. Her interpretations of the little brother and sister, Tytl and Mytl, were unusually characteristic.

Don't fail to see Pauline Frederick in "The Woman on the Index," at the Alps Theatre this week.

the menu, it would seem, for while some nearby were served with Colored Staff (Graham bread) one of the Ark (Ham) and Conglomeration (mince pie). Mr. McDiarmid looked on with a covetous eye then began on his own order of Bostonian delight (beans) and a double-header (tooth-picks).

And yet there was more in store for us. Without attempting an order, brick cream and white cake were served to all alike.
