The Old West Still Lives!

THE Old West, so often mourned by old timers, is not, as has been erroneously timers, is not, as has been erroneously reported, dead.

, indeed, there are vestiges of the Old West still remaining on this campus. For was not the cattle trail one of the landmarks of the land of our rough-hewn pioneers? And does not T. C. U. have those same landmarks-those same trails and paths-on its campus today?

"We believe in a pathless campus and a clean campus."

That was one of the resolutions discussed at the meeting of the clean-up committee and club presidents at Jarvis last Tuesday.

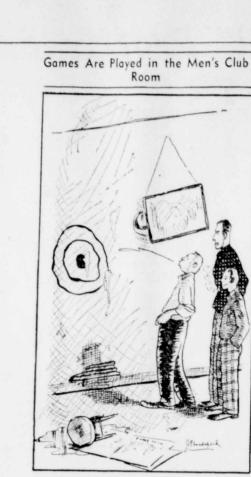

Certainly, it is a project well worth carrying out. Of course, it is practically impossible to eliminate all the paths running across the campus - at least, on a campus as spiritless as this one.

On the average campus, with the average amount of school spirit and personal pride, it would be possible to keep the campus in front of the University buildings free from disfiguring paths and trails

But not so here. At least, not until those students who possess a little pride in their school and in themselves take action. At present, that group, with paths, we can minimize their ugliness. Several suggestions along these lines have been made, including the building of gravel paths in place of the present worn ones.

"If you were sent to a desert island what three books would you take?'

All but the most rugged of ultraindividualists invariably answer immediately, "Well, first the Bible." Conceding that most college students are no exception, one book is considered decided upon.

As for the other two, intensive pondering brings one to the conclusion that outside of textbooks and required reading lists, the majority would have to take two more Bibles, for lack of something to choose from.

For various reasons, some of them good and excusable, the average student does no voluntary reading of any kind, especially during his undergraduate days. He is missing some of the best the modern world has to offer, and while the error may be corrected with some time and effort in the future, it won't be quite like getting it while it's hot.

Senior students with honor grades in a subject should be released from final examinations. PRO:

1. To maintain a high average in a subject is proof that the student knows the material of the course.

The confusion of two different ex-2 amination periods would be eliminated, at least in part, since fewer students would take the finals.

3. Seniors who have worked consistentall year would be rewarded. CON

1. Professors would still have to conduct two finals, for those seniors without honor grades and for other students in the class.

2. Seniors would be free to wander over the campus, probably disturbing underclassmen and prevent them from studying.

3. A three-hour course does not give the professor the opportunity to grade a student's work without a final examination.

The next time that you meet with some club or group where there are 20 of your friends present, shake hands with all of them, because one of the 20 will be killed in the next five years in an automobile accident.

Or list 20 of your friends or relatives. In five years you can strike one name off the list.

These figures are based on the law of averages and are published by an insurance company for the sole purpose of let-ting the people know how careless driving and unsafe driving conditions tend to destro

"Well," asks John Public, "what can I do to stop this mounting figure?'

The answer is simple . . . be ABOVE AVERAGE and escape the law. Being "above average" means that you and the group will obey all the traffic regulations and use your head. Play safe in driving and walking. The largest group of "death accidents" last year were those between the automobile and the pedestrian, with the total per cent of all persons killed in this manner being 41.7.

The automobile manufacturers are, in a way, responsible for a great many deaths. They have given us a machine, faster year by year, that is too far advanced for the average person's management.

To quote from a recent publication on safe driving, "... the first automobiles were affectionately called "Lizzie" or "Henry" and were noisy, likeable and human. Present cars resemble Jeeves, the butler. They are "so inhumanly perfect and silent!'

We watch the speedometer . . . There is much more difference between 45 and 55 than 35 and 45. The danger element is twice as great, yet the meter shows only the same space between the speeds.

Speed might go with brains; but certainly not without!

Patterson McNutt knows all its cockeyed angles. In the Post this week he writes an amusing story of that fabulous land, where turning out a flop picture can even be enjoyable-if you can make somebody else take the rap for it. Watch closely and observe a new Hollywood feature; the double double-cross!

- * DETROIT BUYS A $100,000 ROOKIE. And what hurts, the igers had him earlier on a $5,000 option—and let him go! In One Rookie They Won't Forget, Paul O'Neil tells you about the 19-year-old wonder boy who is still a mystery to major-league dopesters.
- * MARY ROBERTS RINEHART describes a day in the life of a writer; and sums it up for you in three words: Writing Is Work.
- * W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM talks this week about You and Some More Books. He gives you his favorites-this time among writers of France, Spain and Russia, whose stories are worth reading.
- * AND ... three lively short stories, The Cicadas Sang, by Stuart Cloete; Crank Ship, by Richard Howells Watkins, and Mrs. Cupid, by Brooke Hanlon ... * PLUS articles, editorials, fun, and cartoons in the Post this week.

WHAT! Civil War soldiers raiding a tourist camp!

In 1939? Yes, it can happen here. And all because of a honey-colored blonde named Angel, and her vanishing $500 trousseau. Up to then, Prof. Lysander Markham had been sure the Civil War was over. Here's a story one part historical, three parts hysterical.

"SUBMARINE MAIL"

Spain's odd war for stamp-collectors' money

Because freak stamps bring fancy prices, Spain's Loyalists engineered a neat money-raising exploit—submarine mail. A writer who accompanied the first cargo describes that hazardous trip through Franco's plane and torpedo-boat blockade.
