"No Dessert" Is Plan to Aid Campus Fund

War Stamp Booth Will Be Featured on Fridays—Clubs
Are to Take Turns Selling

A plan is under way whereby a meal minus dessert will be served in the Cafeteria some day in order that the money usually spent for this may be given to the Frog War Fund.

If possible, this will be carried out Wednesday. If not, it will be done at a later date.

Sponsored by Les Grenouilles this week, the war stamp booth is open today in the main hall of the Administration Building. This booth will be open every Friday from 8 a. m. until 1 p. m. Next Friday members of the Bryson Club will be in charge of war stamp sales.

After football season the band will give concerts at the various Fort Worth high schools, with the price of admission the purchase of a 10-cent war stamp. This is being sponsored by the war activities committee.

Miss Lenora Salmon has been appointed director of the dancing for the "Girlsque Show."

The Frog War Fund now has $9.70 in its treasury. This money came from the Homecoming Dance and the "Radio" class.

Brushes Wins Decoration $25

The Brushes Club won the $25 War Bond for the best Homecoming decoration last week-end.

They built a purple and white shelf over the door of the Auditorium in the Administration Building. It had a big purple and white frog in the background with tiny forms representing other schools around it. A sign was placed in the back saying "Best of the Bunch." Miss Elizabeth Patterson was in charge of the decorations.

The prize was awarded to the club at the dance Saturday night.

A called meeting of the club will be held sometime next week, but no definite plans have been made for it as yet, says Miss Vesta Lee Newsom, reporter.

President Sadler and Dean Hall's friendship began at a meeting of the association when Dr. Sadler was dean of Lynchburg College and Dean Hall represented T. C. U.

This same year Dean Hall was president of the deans' conference and President Sadler was secretary of the conference.

Dean Hall was president of the association in 1935.

Voice of the Editor

by
Lois Jeane Cayce

This corner seems a little on the complaining side this week but believes the readers will agree with one of The Skiff's pet peeves.

First of all, it is only fair that a desirable place to spend spare time between classes be provided. By tradition the Girls' Lounge is one of these places, especially occupied by town coeds. This lounge is rather shabbily furnished, has poor lighting, and isn't conducive to good care on the part of the girls.

This year the girls who live on the campus have a new dormitory with the best of furnishings and facilities. Foster Hall is indeed the nicest addition to the campus in some time.

But why go on the assumption that the girls can or always want to go to the dormitory in their spare time? They need a desirable place where they may relax, engage in social contacts or study if they don't want to go to the library.

With but a small sum spent, the present lounge could be remodeled into one of which the girls would be proud and one that visitors might be shown without apology.

Now for congratulations—to the students, exes and faculty members for making this year's Homecoming the best held in a long, long time. Every organization cooperated in the splendid decorating of the campus. The yell leaders planned the best pep rally of the year. Each student had a maximum of school spirit. And last—but with a rating of first—the football team lived up to the trust everyone had in it and played the best game anyone could ask for. Orchids to everyone!

Under the sponsorship of the war activities committee and through administration by campus clubs, a war stamp booth will be open every Friday. A dime or a quarter won't be missed too much, and think of the good both you and your government will derive from this small expenditure. Save for victory!

Subscription Rate $1 For Year's Skiff

The Skiff may be received for the rate of $1 a school year for those not enrolled here. This announcement is printed since many requests have been made as to how a person may get the paper. Subscriptions may be given or sent to the editor or to Prof. J. Willard Ridings.

29 Schools Represented— 57 Transfers Are Drawn To TCU; Foster One Reason

T. C. U.'s new dormitory for girls and the war's making it necessary to stay closer to home are two of the reasons why there are 57 transfer girls on the campus this year.

N. T. A. C. has the most representatives, with seven girls including Misses Carolyn McDowell, Dorothy Jo Hawkins, Lois McDougall, Maurice Northcut, Margaret Elizabeth Ball and Jeanne Gracey.

There are six girls who decided to come to T. C. U. from Baylor this year, including Misses Mayme Connor, Jerry Marie Turner, Miriam Clark, Katherine Day, Dot Harrington and Betty Petty.

Next is T. S. C. W., with five. Misses Madge O'Neill, Frances Madelyn Walthall, Teddy Gail Delaney, Betty Eastland and Jean Engleman.

The different junior colleges have a large representation, too. There are four each from Tyler Junior College and San Angelo. From T. J. C. come Misses Helen Marie Anderson, Janet Anderson, Janice Conley and Winifred Main. S. A. J. C. sent Miss Jean Guthrie, June Hudson and Wilma Faye McGlothlin.

Misses Rose Ann Pearson, Margaret Corbett and Jackie Hurst transferred from Gulf Park.

Miss Mary Helen McClendon and Miss Eva Virginia Moore come from O. L. V. Two also are in T. C. U. from S. M. U., Misses Armina Schenck and Betty Lou Whitehurst.

Hillsboro Junior College and John Tarleton have two representatives each in Miss Myra Bob Branch and Miss Ann Campbell, and Miss Alta Lee Armstrong and Miss Latha Hilliard.

Band Will Play At Rice Game

The Horned Frog Band will leave at 11 o'clock tonight for Houston to play for the T. C. U.-Rice game at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

The band will arrive in Houston at 7:50 a. m. tomorrow and go to the Rice Hotel, where they plan to play a swing program.

The band sweetheart, the twirlers and the yell leaders will accompany the band.

Dean Shelburne Accepts Mirror for Foster Hall

The parents of Miss Olga Atkinson, freshman, have instructed Dean Elizabeth Shelburne to have a mirror made and presented to Foster Hall as a gift from them.

Dean Shelburne has already had bids from various architects and designers, and has chosen one to design and make the mirror. It is to hang above the fireplace in the Foster Hall parlor when it is completed.

T. C. U.'s Legend Of Library Steps Still Holds Jinx

There's a legend that follows T. C. U. students around to the effect that it is impossible to graduate without having fallen down the Library steps at least once. The truth is obvious, and can be easily proven by past experiences.

David McKee, for instance, has fallen down those treacherous steps innumerable times under no special circumstances, but in several "special ways."

Miss Virginia Tomme evidently took the adage at its face value, because she didn't wait until she was a dignified senior to guarantee her diploma. She took the quick way down, her first day as a freshman.

It's one thing to fall down steps, but quite another to fall up them. Miss Dorothy Dees has done just that, and more than filled her quota by falling down them three times besides.

Miss Dana Hudson blames her one mishap on rubber-sole shoes and rain, while Miss Vesta Lee Newsom proudly claims she has never been the victim of circumstance or tradition.

Maybe she needs a push—just to be sure she graduates, you know!

Others from junior colleges are: Misses Nettie Bennett, Centralia Junior College in Washington; Mary Ray White, Hockaday; Vida Bevil, Lamar Junior College; Jean Duckworth, Hardin J. C.; Hallie Mae Eaton, Decatur Junior College; Barbara Henry, Pasadena Junior College in California; and Gale Heyden, Colby Junior College, N. H.

From out of the state come Misses Maxine Moore from Graceland College, Iowa, Maryanne Smith from Colorado College, Mrs. Bernice Tanner from University of Nebraska, Mary Ellen Butts from the University of Oregon, and Georgia Collins from Ward Belmont.

Also Misses Mary Katherine Elliott, National Park; Betty Hannifin, Mary Washington in Maryland; Judy Hill, Abilene Christian College, and "Peg" Hopkins, Kerksville Junior College in Colorado.

Misses Martha Campbell from W. T. S. T. C. in Canyon; Louise Williams from McMurray College; Bettye Nail from Millsap, and Cleo Boaz from Decatur Baptist College.

TCU Hasn't Been 'As Is' Long—

Ziegler Records in Pictures Past Campus Improvements

With T. C. U.'s enrichment program progressing rapidly, it is only fitting that there should be a record of past improvements on the campus. Prof. S. P. Ziegler has made a record in pictures of these improvements.

He follows the growth of the institution over a period of about 14 years, starting with a picture of the campus as it was in 1919. There was a tennis court in front of the boys dormitories with shrubbery around it. Between the court and the dorms, a street, always filled with early model cars and laughing students, ran the length of the campus.

Then came the building of the Memorial Arch, in honor of T. C. U.'s men in World War I. There was much excitement over getting the money from the various students, both old and new, for the Arch fund. Dr. Edwin A. Elliott was student body president then.

The Library, across the street from the Administration Building, was next in line, with its steel and concrete foundations. For many years it has been the beauty spot of T. C. U.

A deep ravine where the Stadium now stands could be seen from the Art Laboratory window. Prof. Ziegler painted his impression of that ravine while the Stadium was being put in its place. He caught the miracle of the filling in of this depression and the gradual rise of the Stadium, as it looked from his window.

He also pictured storm clouds forming over the Stadium, in another picture. This one was printed in the Texas University yearbook, the Longhorn, not long ago.

Finally, comes the latest addition to the campus, Foster Hall. This is also a picture of the building as it looked when it was being built.

This was the last in the series of improvements, but, as a finishing touch, Prof. Ziegler added a portrayal of how T. C. U. looks from Arlington Heights. He calls it the "Texas Acropolis" because the campus out on the hill reminds him of the ancient Acropolis of Greece.

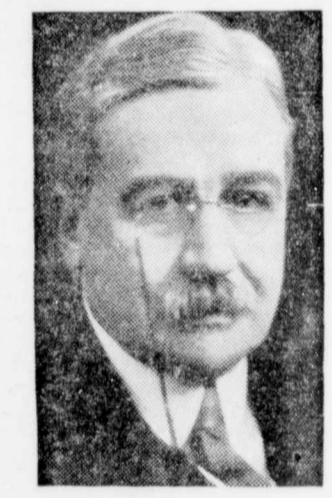

All of these pictures can be seen in the little gallery of the art department.

"To Thine Own Self Be True"

"Honesty is the best policy." Time has proven this to be true. The adage has stood up through the centuries. It has been proven by case histories, records of criminals, experience. It has been quoted until it is trite. Yet, someone on this campus has forgotten to believe it. They have forgotten that society believes it. They have forgotten that the students believe it. They have forgotten authorities must make them believe it. In fact, they have forgotten a good many things. One thing that they have forgotten was learned in Sunday school or in Bible 130—"Thou shalt not steal."

It is both embarrassing and humiliating to think that someone among the students is borrowing and forgetting to return. It is a touchy subject and something T. C. U. would like to ignore but for the seriousness of the situation.

When books and clothes are missing from rooms in the dormitory, they are often misplaced property. But when money is taken, it passes beyond the point of chalking up to a student's carelessness.

There couldn't be a thief on the campus, but there might be a victim of kleptomania. It is up to everyone connected with T. C. U. to help this victim.

Precaution will help. Doors should be locked, and money should be put in the Trust Fund Bank or kept in a safe place.

T. C. U.'s reputation is at stake. If everyone will be true to his own self, maybe the poor victim can be doctored and the situation can be remedied. It is not pleasant to think that something drastic might have to be done.

Youth to Be Post-War Leaders

American youth, along with youth of England, China, Russia and other countries, will be called upon to assume a large share of the world's post-war leadership. Worldwide moral strength must be regained. Survivors of the war must take steps to remove the conditions which would breed new wars. There must be a stronger form of international government and greater co-operation of educated youth.

In order to bring this about, there must be an increase of mutual knowledge and understanding among the people and institutions of all countries, and more consistent educational solidarity. This may be accomplished by exchange of educated personnel among the countries.

European and Asiatic schools, under trying conditions, have emphasized education as best they could during the past few years. American "educational lend-lease" to China has been going on for years. Cultural interchange is in its nature fundamentally reciprocal. If the United States has much to contribute to other countries, then it also has much to receive. Students for exchange in South American countries are chosen because of leadership and scholarship.

Educational preparation is an essential part of the war effort to establish a post-war peace with responsible leadership.

Ask Miss Fixit, She Should Know!

Dear Miss Fixit: Chuck and I are in love. He is going overseas soon and may never return. Should I marry him now or wait and take the chance of never marrying?

Dear Worried Mind: Shame on you! You've been asking Miss Fixit's advice for 10 years. Do you want her crystal ball to vanish from overwear?

Daily, in newspapers and over the radio, the "fixits" are giving advice on war marriages. Hundreds of letters concerning the war bride question and the accompanying advice have come to the knowledge of the public.

"Lovelorn" columns are popular. Everyone likes to "air" his troubles, and advice is usually a good thing. But when it comes via the lovelorn route it may not fall into the "good" category. The advisers seldom know all of the facts, and without complete knowledge in a question so important as marriage during the war, the advice and forthcoming results might prove to be poor.

Solomon probably would have been a great admirer of the lovelorn column, but he survived without it. And so can others!

Don't Ruin Reputation

T. C. U. has always had the reputation of offering one thing that many of the larger schools in the state can not boast of.

The larger colleges often have graduate students in full charge of some of their classes. Many students taking English never even see a real English professor.

In the past when a course was taught at T. C. U., it was always under the direction of someone experienced. Just because there is a war going on, this reputation should not be lost. Of course, the problem of a shortage of teachers confronts the Administration, but if a competent professor is not available for a course, it should not be offered.

Some students are complaining of having professors who know little or nothing about the course they are teaching. A student usually feels that his professor should be able to do anything he asks his students to do, and do it better. If the professor cannot do this, the student often loses all respect for him. And then, a student who really tries to learn hates to spend his time and money on such a course.

TEX, The Frogette-made steer, was duly roasted last Friday night and again on the gridiron Saturday. Holding it in the picture below are Misses Nancy and Jane Dunkle who helped make it.

THE SKIFF SALUTES
MARSHALL MASON

By Martha Mellown

"Come on now, gang, let's yell!" This sentence characterizes Head Yell Leader Marshall Mason to a "T" just like the purple one on his sweater.

Marshall has been active on the football field for two years and in that time has put enthusiasm and pep into the spirit of the student body.

Leading yells is not the only thing in which this 5 foot, 11 inch junior is right in the midst. He is majoring in philosophy and teaches a junior high Sunday school class at the University Christian Church. He likes to work with junior and intermediate boys and girls.

His interests are varied, for Mexican food, football (his 185 pounds helps the intramural teams) and music are some of the things he finds fun. His taste in music is swing on the one end and Schubert on the other.

Marshall enjoys dancing and his green eyes light up when Bettie Flo Baker is mentioned. He makes good grades and finds time to belong to Timothy, Mellorist Club and B. C. B. "Come on, gang, let's yell loud for Marshall Mason."

The Readers Say ...

Dear Editor and Students: I am certainly in a thankful mood this week, for you have given me something to be thankful for. Many people have congratulated me on the beautiful service flag that we have bought and on the Homecoming activities, so I want to put the blame on you.

The co-operation of the students on both of these counts was wonderful. The service flag will be paid for shortly, thanks to you and the execs. The Homecoming has been acclaimed as the best in a decade, thanks to you.

Be sure to drop by the "War Stamp Booth" and get your stamps for this week, and then see if you can make it one of your regular habits to purchase stamps every week.

Thankfully,
Dunny Sims.

Homecoming Decorations Linger in Postoffice

It's not often that the remnants of Homecoming linger on for another week.

Students gathered this week to gaze at the clump of balloons on the Postoffice ceiling. Could it be that the Postoffice employees were having a prom all their own? Or maybe they were going in for surrealist decoration.

The mystery of the balloons was finally explained. They were an after-dance gift to Miss Bernice Bell from Max Humphreys.

Dr. C. K. Holsapple flew to Washington, D. C., Monday morning for a two-day conference with the Civilian Pilot Training officials. He returned yesterday morning.

Colleges, Universities Feel War Effects, Are Now Standing at Fork of Road

By VIRGINIA TOMME

First came the family, then came business and in 1942 another American institution comes face to face with the war. This institution is higher education.

More than a year ago colleges and universities felt the effects of the war by reduced enrollments and the competition of defense plant jobs. Now, with the army and navy demanding 18 and 19-year-old boys as the most desirable fighting men, these institutions face what Dr. Homer P. Rainey, president of Texas University, has referred to as an "educational blackout" as an alternative to drastic readaptation to wartime methods.

These institutions are standing at the fork of a road, with two paths leading into the future. They may just stand, and not venture down either of the trails. If that is the choice, then many colleges and universities will be in a complete blackout and close their doors.

The larger institutions will not be so hard hit by such a change. Universities with the scientific facilities of a Chicago, a Johns Hopkins or a Harvard will merely provide all kinds of special training for the government. Enrollment drop will not affect their financial program since in such sites of higher learning the tuition fees cover only 20 per cent of the costs.

But the same path is not only to the smaller and more numerous colleges and universities. They do not have the same scientific facilities.

Their tuition fees play one of the leading roles in the financial program. With two such handicaps, many may be forced to close their doors.

If these doors of knowledge are to be kept open, then there are two paths for the leaders to take. First, the government can take these institutions over and provide specialized training. That, however, follows the old adage of easier said than done. For such a path is not without its ruts.

One way such a move could be made is by a revival of the Student Army Training Corps. Although this measure was not very popular with the administrators and teaching forces of American colleges and universities as a result of the World War I experience, it is interesting to note that the idea is being revived by the educators themselves.

These ideas are revived in a hope of being prepared for the dislocation of higher education that is to come. For if the 18 and 19-year-old youths are allowed to complete their academic year in educational institutions, things will be more or less normal for six more months. But just as the question arises—after war, what?—so comes the question—after those six months, what?

The Gallup poll, in a recent popular estimate, shows that the war will last two and one-half years longer. If that estimate is true, then it is held by some that the colleges must plan a severe readaptation of their curricula to intensive training pointed for early military service. That is, if these institutions are going to contribute more to the winning of the war than would be contributed by wholesale drafting of the teen-age youth.

Then there is the problem of just how long this training should be to obtain maximum efficiency without holding students so long that the war will be either won or lost before they go in active service.

Some advance this course, which they believe to be the practical one. That is, trial and error, beginning on the assumption that there should be intensive training of college youths for service within a short time. Then, with the passing of the months, if it becomes apparent that the war will be a long drawn-out one, the courses could be readjusted to allow for wider training in the technical fields that they believe must be developed as an aid to the winning of a long war.

Many of our educational institutions are now taking on the appearance of army camps and naval training schools. They are being swept into total war.

But must higher education as it is commonly understood be abandoned for the duration? This is the second path. "Liberal arts also makes a contribution" is the highway number.

Even in the face of the brutally grim necessities of war, can the country afford to let an entire generation grow up without liberal education, without training in certain professions, the social sciences and humanities? What of trained men and women for the future when the highest possible degree of education and intelligence will be in urgent demand?

President Hutchins of the University of Chicago says:

"If the entire intellectual power of the country is drawn off for any considerable time into engineering, research in the natural sciences and the execution of military operations, the contribution of the United States to the organization of the world will be less significant than our part in the war would lead us to expect. We must have technology; but we must have something more. It is indispensable that we maintain strong centers of moral and political thought from which may radiate some light which may assist us to see the aims of the war and the nature of the peace."

Obviously colleges must be retained as great training centers for future needs. At the same time, they are denied large numbers of students who are needed at once for combat and other forms of military duty or civilian work.

It has been charged that colleges could become refuges for draft evaders. But neither colleges nor many students want that. Colleges are as patriotic as other institutions.

Like all others, they must contribute manpower where it is most in demand and can serve best. The principle of selective service has to apply with colleges as elsewhere.

To keep colleges from becoming devices for escaping military service, President Hutchins, who has opposed even the exemption of divinity students, would like to see the development of "some plan for the discovery and training of those who should go to college in the present emergency. Those who can serve their country best by going there."

Or, in general, they can continue what they are doing now and on a larger scale, so far as the student reserve plans may permit.

There are those that favor the idea of "one-third to one-half of the most promising graduates of our high schools" for "special combined army and navy training corps" in the colleges and universities, with all expenses paid by the government. Various forms of nonmilitary training are provided for now by limited government aid.

Undue assistance to any economic group would have to be avoided. Where students are not virtually a part of the military services, aid should be restricted absolutely to cases of need.

An all-over program is awaited. The time is 1942. American colleges and universities are at the crossroads.

T. C. U. started beating Texas in Lubbock Nov. 7. How is that? Just this. Beecher Montgomery played at Tech and called a good game at quarterback...

Last week this column got all the games right except the Rice-A. & M. tie. For the first—and probably only—time, bragging can take place. Here goes for this week-end and the Thanksgiving games.

How about this for pass defense? Only one pass a game has been completed against the Frogs in their last three tussles, with Baylor, Texas Tech and Texas. One of these was a hideout play and another one was good for but one yard...

Here are a few Frog statistics through eight games. T. C. U. has 106 first downs to 54 for opponents. Rushing—1167 for T. C. U., 641 for opponents. Passing—834 to 555.

Beecher has broken into the lineup in only 17 of these 20 games, and his maximum playing time was 20 minutes against Kansas this year.

Campus "Fad-shions" Convert to War Styles

By EDLEEN ARMSTRONG and MARY ALLEEN INGRAM
Style with no frills, no pleats, no nothin' is becoming the current college "fad-shion." In "The Pre-War Era in Fashion" coeds existed who would not be seen at a dog fight in a pencil-slim skirt with no pleats, or in a shirtwaist dress with no fullness in the sleeves.

War time finds the college girl with both feet on the ground and principles of thrift implanted in her delightfully level head. The current crop of coeds are going in for long-wearing clothes, designed for the dual purposes of utility and comfort. Patchwork skirts and scarfs are new in the "fad-shion" picture. They are worn as a badge of patriotism. One of the thriftiest ideas of the year is that of stitching leather patches on the worn elbows of a tweed jacket. It not only assures additional wear, but gives the dashing look of an English hunting jacket.

Style designers have memorized ration requirements, and as a result, whipped up all straight stuff, with no nonsense. Short sleeves and 80-inch skirts have been deemed essential to the war effort. The college boy, now with only memories of the zoot suit which loomed on the fashion horizon, is adjusting himself to the thought of the "decuffed trouser and the depleted slack." Accessories probably will continue to be brilliant, with "knock-out" ties, talking sox and press-agent shirts in the limelight.

Pre-war fashion fads are definitely on the decline. War fashions are here to stay for the duration, and it is time for no-one to be vague about vogue.

625 Stars Tell of T.C.U.'s Part— 1917-18 Service Flag Hangs In Library Magazine Room

Hanging on the west wall of the magazine room in the Mary Coats Burnett Library and almost covering it is a flag on which 625 stars shine.

This flag is a symbol of T. C. U.'s contribution to an earlier world war—each star representing some T. C. U. student in armed forces of his country in 1917-18.

Seven of the 625 stars are gold, meaning that seven T. C. U. students made the supreme sacrifice while defending their country. Eight of the number are silver, a sign of wounds received in action.

Toadattler by Mary Allene Ingram and Edleen Armstrong

Everyone is still walking on clouds since the victory over Texas was repeated. Here's hoping we all feel the same tomorrow after we take on those Rice Owls in Houston. There will be a number of students making the trip and on hand to boost the Froggies.

Among those planning to go are: MIRIAM CLARK, GERLYNE SCHMIDT, the WRIGHT sisters and VELMA POOLE.

Since we won the game Saturday, RALPH PORTER says he is replacing the two teeth he knocked out with "gold teeth set with diamonds and engraved 'Champions of '42.'" Members of the football team showed good taste in their selection of a Homecoming sweetheart, BARBARA BUNDOCK.

There has been an epidemic of long-distance telephone calls lately. CHARLIE HOGUE talked to the boy friend at Fort Benning, Ga., last week, and WANDA YARDANOFF gets a weekly call from an aviation cadet in Lubbock. MARTHA BURNHAM also received a call from her boy friend in Longview, but gave him a hasty "goodbye," and not even your Tattler knows why!

15 Foster Girls Answer to 'Jean' Sooner Than 'Hon'

What's in a name? Opinions may make varied answers to that question, but none-the-less there must be something in the name "Jean." Statistics show that "Jean" is the most popular name on this campus. Out of the 172 girls in Foster, fifteen, or approximately one out of every eleven, are named "Jean."

"Betty" and "Mary" gave "Jean" a close race, since they tied for second place with fourteen votes each. Various combinations with "Ruth" made that name the third-ranking with thirteen girls to its credit.
