The committees behind these drives are not relaxing, constantly keeping the projects before the two student bodies. Every sort of event, social, education or sports, is being used to further the cause.

Here, the Student Council, hub of the campus, is sitting back and whiling away the time. No effort, no motion has been made to again renew the memorial drive-only a proposal to use the money already raised.

Two events—the Intramural Open House and the spring training intersquad football game-would have pushed the night. Timekeeper Bill Padon had campaign along the way to success. Both departments behind his troubles ringing the bell-the these events would have co-operated.

The bowlegs of the old-time cowpunchers may not be visible, but the whiskers, Levis, cowboy boots, 10-gallon hats, shirts that scream at you, spurs, bandanas, and Bull Durham will suffice. Ranch Week must stay, along with the Fighting Frog spirit and other fine T. C. U. traditions.

Open the Polls, Richard!

A college campus is a place where they run the poll into the ground and then run up the flag with the results on it.

It is little wonder, considering the average college student's background. In the first grade he began answering questions for polls-"Did you wash behind your ears this her first Ranch Week: "Horses ment office of foreign affairs.

By the time he reaches college age, there are a few things he wants to find out for himself, such as "Who is the most maroonable with on a desert island?" A poll of fellow students gives him the answer.

The latest big college poll splash involves cheating on examinations. Coming up is "How many students cheated on the poll questions about cheating on examinations?"

If subject matter ever gets low, a nationwide survey might show whether professors pick their teeth two-to-one.

So far this year, T. C. U. has kept the poll skeleton locked up in the closet. But those behind-the-panel rumblings aren't thunder. Richard is getting ready to open the door and drag out some surveys.

600 Frog Club Members, Expecting to See Battle Are Thrown for Loss by Drizzle

A slow, cold drizzling rain caused Head Coach Dutch Meyer, of the T. C. U. Frogs, to cancel the scheduled game yesterday afternoon

"Too many of the boys have colds and with the numerous flu' cases around the schools, it is too much of a risk to put the boys out in the rain," Meyer said.

So the rain cheated approximately 600 members of the Frog Club out of a chance to see the potential 1947 first stringers battle the second team. Happiest of all were the footballers, many of whom left for home after the game was
