 ten what the previous question was. Helen "Corkey" Shirley said, "What are we voting on now?"

Cornell said they were voting on one thing—congress said they were voting on something else—but no one was sure.

We're just going around in circles—getting nothing done," said Miss Bettie Harbin, freshman representative.

Obviously disgusted, Bob Ross, senior class president, made his way toward the stage of the Study Lounge. The commotion stopped as congressmen watched him step up on the stage beside the bewildered Cornell.

"Mr. Chairman," said Ross, "I rise on the order of personal privilege. I was once in congress myself."

Cornell (and several other congressmen) remarked, "I think you're out-of-order, Mr. Ross!"

Ross ignored the interruptions and suggested that someone get a book called "Roberts Rules of Order."

Carl Graner, sophomore representative, left the meeting and returned with a small book. He sat down in front of Cornell, and throughout the rest of the meeting when any important matter came up Cornell would ask Graner, "Is that in order?"

After this ordeal the corsage situation was taken up again for discussion.

Cornell commented that he was in favor of girls' wearing flowers so that they would have something to put in their college scrapbooks after the dance.

After congress decided that they would submit a request to students rather than a demand, David Allred, lower class representative, remarked, "Even after we make the request, there will still be a few 'odd balls' and 'characters' who will insist upon buying corsages for their dates. But they will feel out of place at the dance."

When the corsage situation was voted upon, Ren Kent, sophomore class president, held up his hand to vote. Class presidents are not allowed to vote in congress, but Cornell overlooked the fact.

Miss Frances Nowotny, sophomore representative, reminded Kent that he was not a voting member of congress but merely a member of the executive committee.

It was unanimously decided there will be no busses at the train station in Austin to carry students on the student body trip to the stadium on the University of Texas campus.

It is a two-mile hike from the train station to the stadium.

Ren Kent said that there is no need to waste money on busses when most students, in his opinion, "will enjoy the walk."

Accounting Students Take Aptitude Tests

Students taking Accounting 422a will undergo special orientation tests, beginning this week, Neil K. Alexander, chairman of the Accounting department, announced Monday.

Tests, which have been prepared by the American Institute of Accountants, will also be given to interested students who are not taking accounting, Mr. Alexander said.

"The primary purpose of the testing program is to help the student learn whether he has the basic interests and abilities for success in the accounting profession," Mr. Alexander stated.

Further information can be obtained from either Mr. Alexander or Henry Key at the School of Business.

an oral resignation to congress. Turner said that he had taken on more responsibilities than he could adequately handle.

Miss Noreen Wilkins from the Harris School of Nursing was appointed to replace Turner.

Cornell announced that congress needs a faculty sponsor. When asked to serve on a committee to select a sponsor, David Allred said, "I don't know anybody. I'm just a green freshman."

Absent from Monday's meeting were Miss Beth Pearson, Miss Pat Owens, D. Melvin Shupp and Dick Ramsey.

Recent Graduates In Local Hospital As Polio Strikes

Two TCU graduates are now in the polio ward at City-County Hospital.

They are Frank Burkett, Fort Worth, and Wyly Edwin Ball, Arlington. Both received B. A. degrees in spring 1950.

Burkett was admitted Oct. 3 and his present condition is reported as fair.

He was associate editor of The Skiff in 1949-50.

Ball was admitted for treatment of the disease in July. His condition is good.

Chamber to Sponsor Rockwood Hayride

The TCU Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a combination hayride, barbecue and dance next Friday night at Rockwood Park, Robert Hopkins, social chairman, announced today.

"This get-together is primarily for School of Business students, but all students are invited to attend," Hopkins said.

Tickets will be $1 a person and are available from all Chamber of Commerce members, Hopkins said.

Trucks will depart from the Quadrangle at 5:30 p. m. and return from Rockwood Park at 10:30.

The hayride is scheduled to run from 6 to 11 p. m.

GLAMOUR Can Be Yours Too!!

Dear Students:

We are interested in America's most charming girls. Our comprehensive program is especially prepared to instruct you in all types of modeling and to enhance your social graces. Do your friends say: "You walk so gracefully," "Your make-up is always just right," "You have that band-box look"? These compliments should be yours, and with a Howard-Eades course they can be yours. Through years of experience we have devised a course to show you how to be more naturally lovely—to realize every young lady's dream.

It is fun being a glamorous Howard-Eades model! For those who qualify, there are fashion shows, television shows, and photographic modeling. We welcome your call requesting an appointment.

New System Of Merits Announced

A system of merits and demerits for the two ROTC units has been announced by Lt. Col. John W. Murray, professor of military science and tactics and Lt. Col. Luther O'Hern, professor of air science and tactics.

Cadets may earn merits through directed extra-curricular activities and functions and by commendations of the ROTC staff members.

Merits count  $\frac{1}{4}$  of a point on the final semester grade. Demerits count  $\frac{1}{4}$  of a point off the final grade.

Demerits are to be assessed for failure to wear uniform to class and drill, not saluting of officers when in uniform, unbecoming conduct, destruction of property, failing to obey orders and other similar offenses.

Unexcused absences also knock points from the cadet's grade. Four such absences count off 10 points and five will fail the student.

Two hours in class and two hours drill per week is required of basic students. Advanced cadets have two additional classroom hours.

A mass drill period for both ROTC units is held each Monday at 1 p. m. at the quadrangle behind the Administration Building. At present the students are learning the fundamentals of drill. Later on more advanced formations and drilling with arms will be learned.

Classroom procedures include moving pictures and slides, lectures and examinations.

The Transportation Corps cadets have been in summer uniform since school began and have been measured for winter uniforms.

The Air Force uniforms have not arrived.

Student Poetry Will Be Posted By English Staff

A different poem written by a TCU student will appear each day on the bulletin board outside of the English department office.

The poems are posted there not only for enjoyment but to remind students that Oct. 15 is poetry day.

On that date a table in the main hall of the Administration Building will display books of poetry written by TCU students.

Also on poetry day the Walter E. Bryson prize will be awarded to a TCU student in memory of the late English department chairman. The prize has been awarded since 1921.

Mrs. W. E. Boswell, 1516 West Terrell, will present the annual Boswell Poetry Award to the TCU Ex student winner.

Smiling Colombian Is Grateful For Local Campus Hospitality

It seems that TCU, Texas and the United States in general has an admiring friend in smiling Manuel Paez, 25-year-old graduate student from Bogata, Colombia.

Manuel who is a biology major at TCU has lived on the campus since he came here as a freshman four years ago. In that time he has returned to his home only twice.

The dark-eyed Colombian has finished a pre-med course at TCU and will apply soon for entrance into Baylor Medical School at Houston. At the present time he is assisting as a laboratory instructor in "Comparative Anatomy."

Coffee is Colombia's chief source of income according to Manuel. "Incidentally, I hate the stuff," he grimaced.

Asked about similarities in customs between the two countries,

Manuel replied, "There is little difference, everything is much the same, except that we put a little more spice in it."

Bogata, a city of 700,000 people and capital of Colombia is much cooler than Texas, the graduate student observed. He added that 60 per cent of the population is Indian.

"One of my ancestors was a general who fought for Colombia's independence from Spanish rule," he said proudly.

"I believe that my country," he added, "is as democratic as America."

"I want to say that I am very grateful," Manuel emphasized, "for the hospitality of the people of Fort Worth and TCU."

Manuel says that when he returns to Fort Worth after being Broken, one eight year jinx. Mended, the Frogs' hopes for a great season. Won, a good, hard-fought ball game. Lost (for only a short while, we pray), Malvin Fowler. Discovered, the "Ghost of 1950," and a supreme will to win.

Two or three grandstand analysts have related their theory of the turning point in the Arkansas game. One said it was the field goal by Flowers in the fourth which put the Frogs ahead and put pressure on the Hogs.

Another thought it was the return of Bartosh to his old form. Still another thought it was the brilliant goal line stand by the Froggies late in the game which broke the heart of the Arkansans.

We believe it was a combination of all three plus a sudden awakening to the fact that they had the best team on the field. The slashing, relentless drive by the smaller TCU line wilted the giant Hog forward wall until it came near a point of collapse in the final period.

Here's what the "Answer Box" had to say concerning this week's games: Can Rice sink Navy? Time will tell. (Time might, but not the Answer Box.) Will Oklahoma bounce back against Texas? The stars say yes. (Bert Clark, Billy Vessels and Jim Weatherall are the Okie stars who say yes in this case.) Is Arkansas ready to trim the Bears? You may rely on it.

Can Trinity keep the score down in their battle with the Aggies? My sources say no. (Who needs sources after last week's results?)

Does SMU have the power to beat Notre Dame? Without a doubt. (There would be no doubt if Notre Dame fails to field an offensive team, anyway.)

Will TCU let down against Texas Tech after the Arkansas victory? Better not tell you now. (That's as good a guess as any, we reckon.)

Frogland Repeats Football History In Past 13 Years

When the nucleus of the Army team was suspended for cribbing this year the question arose—Was too much emphasis being placed on football?

This question may have been new to some people, but according to the records the same problem came to Frogland a number of years ago.

The 1938 Skiff quotes, "Enraged TCU students militantly defend their interest in the nations No. 1 gridiron machine as they arise to shout a defiant 'No!' to the accusation that too much emphasis is placed on football at Frogland."

This might bring up the question—Does football history repeat itself?

Frogs Hogged Honors At Little Rock Game

Gil Bartosh made his belated re-appearance as a football great last Saturday as TCU's Frogs hogged the honors and beat Arkansas 17-7.

The teams were tied 7-7 early in the third period when Mal Fowler, who had led the Frogs brilliantly, reinjured his weak knee and was forced to leave the game.

Bartosh entered the game and after some minutes of futile pounding at the giant Arkansas line, Gil, and the rest of the team with him, caught fire.

The "Granger Ghost" steered his team 68 yards to the Arkansas 13 yard line, from where Keith Flowers booted a field goal to put the Frogs ahead 10-7.

Late in the third quarter, Gil engineered a 38-yard touchdown drive, hitting end Ted Vaught with an 11-yard pass for the score.

This ended the game as far as scoring was concerned, and also ended any Arkansas hope of catching up as Frog defenders stiffened and refused to be scored on.

Fowler will probably be out of action from two to three weeks. His injury is not thought to be as bad as was feared at first.

Bobby Jack Floyd, TCU's jumping jack fullback, broke a bone in his hand in last Tuesday's practice session and is not expected to play in tomorrow's game.

Trainer Elmer Brown says Floyd will probably play against Texas A&M Oct. 20.

Keith Flowers' terrific play at linebacker, coupled with his successful field goal effort, helped materially in beating the Hogs.

Keith says the injury which forced him to leave the game in the third period is simply a charley-horse and he is ready for the Texas Tech game tomorrow.

Flowers, Doug Conaway, sophomore Morgan Williams, and Herbert "Zim" Zimmerman were especially cited for their outstanding defensive play.

Game time tomorrow is 8 p. m. The Frogs and Red Raiders have met 11 times with TCU holding a 7-4 advantage in the won-lost column.

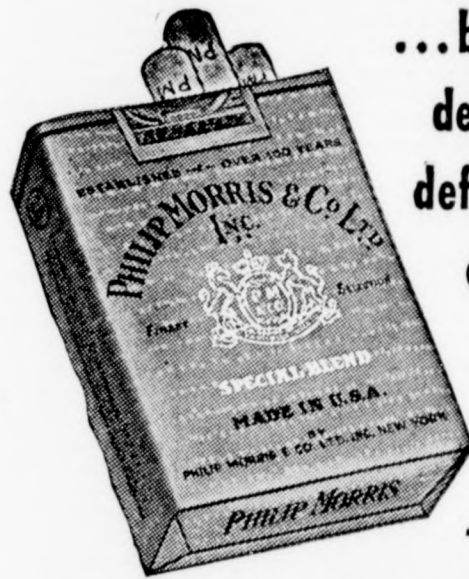

Tomorrow's game concludes the current home-and-home series between the schools.

TCU won the first five games in the series, but since 1935, the Frogs have won only two of six, in 1944 and 1950.

Lots of Hearts and Flowers Among Frog Football Blossoms

BY CHARLES LUDWIG

Clyde Flowers little brother.

How many times Keith Flowers must have heard those words.

But Keith Flowers is no longer a little brother.

He has become TCU's defensive signal caller and linebacker, anchoring what well may be the greatest Frog line in over a decade.

On successive Saturdays against Nebraska and Arkansas, Keith was as great a linebacker as his brother ever was a tackle.

There was seldom a play into which Flowers did not hurl his 200-pound body, smothering the vain attempts of both Cornhuskers and Razorbacks to make yardage.

Four years ago Keith came to TCU after being named to the all-American high school team while playing fullback at Perryton High.

Here he came to follow in the footsteps of his brother, Clyde Flowers, who was named all-American while a member of the 1944 Frogs, the last TCU team to win a Southwest Conference football crown.

Keith easily made the Wog team, but before half the season was gone he injured his right knee and was out for the year.

An operation followed, enabling the younger Flowers to letter at the linebacker post in his sophomore year.

Against Baylor that year, he picked up a loose ball and scampered 40 yards for his only collegiate touchdown thus far.

As a junior Keith's knee continued to bother him. On Saturday he played and on Sunday he could hardly walk. It usually took him until the following Friday to recover completely.

Flowers showed his versatility by switching to safety position last year in the Mississippi tilt and continued to play there capably against Texas, Rice and SMU.

Following the '50 season Keith again had surgery performed on his right knee.

And then it was the fall of 1951 and Flowers was back at his old linebacker post.

Against Kansas in the opener he was instrumental in stopping many of the lightning thrusts of Charley Hoag.

But after the contest Keith was disconsolate over his play. He blamed himself for letting the Jayhawks score on one of those long pass plays.

Besides his defensive magnificence, Keith also kicks off, has successfully converted seven out of eight extra point attempts and clinched the Arkansas victory with a 13-yard field goal.

Against Nebraska and Arkansas, though, the boy from Perryton had nothing to apologize for. He was in the Cornhusker's silk all afternoon and was instrumental in dulling the Razorbacks.

The last time TCU won the conference title was when that other Flowers, Clyde, was playing his last year for the Frogs.

Perhaps this Flowers will continue to blossom forth, and New Year's Day will find the Frogs in Dallas for an afternoon of football.

Wogs Kindle Flames For Aggie Fish Fry

Coach Walter Roach's Wogs have been going extra hard in scrimmages this week preparing for their game with the Texas A&M Fish at College Station Thursday night.

The TCU freshmen are ironing out flaws uncovered in Houston last Friday night when they lost their season opener to the Rice Owlets, 21-13.

The Wogs ground game was slowed to 67 yards rushing, while the Owlets netted 306 yards in this fashion. Coach Roach said blocking was not as sharp as it should have been.

Weldon Dacus scored on a 41-yard pass from Ronald Clinkscale in the waning seconds of the first half for the Wogs. Jack Graf converted for the point after.

Clinkscale cut loose on a running and passing spree in the third quarter to lead a touchdown surge. He hit Dacus twice with passes totaling 35 yards and ran once for 15. Graf pushed through from the one to score but failed in his conversion attempt.

Roach plans to use the offensive backfield combination of Clinkscale at quarterback, E. Mack Watson and Waylon Buchanan at the halfback positions, and either Jimmy Rodgers or Gene Garner in the fullback slots.

Mexican Girl Wants Degree Might Help In Brake Lining

BY JEAN KINGSBURY

Soft spoken, brown-haired Florence Ferrell is a little girl, 5-1, with big ideas.

The 17-year-old freshman from Monterrey, Mexico, wants to return home some day with a degree in business administration and the ability to manage a brake lining factory.

Miss Ferrell, between bites of an over-sized apple, talked shop like a veteran mechanic, and dropped the comment that her uncle, with whom she lives, "knows more about cars than Mr. Ford."

In 1945 the brown-haired Miss was placed in the first grade at the American School in Tampico. She couldn't speak a word of English and describes the situation as "very embarrassing."

Until this fall Florence had been in this country on vacations only; visiting relatives in Texas and surrounding states.

Enthusiastic about the first football game she saw here, Miss Ferrell said, "I've never seen so many people together at one time, and the halftime activities were beautiful."

"Everybody yells 'Hey, freshman!'" she said. "The caps attract more attention than we do," she added.

Asked about the "youall" she uses when second person plural is needed, she replied, "I had mostly Texan teachers in Tampico."

Like many Latin Americans, Florence is appalled at conceptions of life in her country, held by some North Americans.

She feels that "no country is perfect," but Mexico is more modern and civilized than most North Americans realize.

Both of the men studied in France.

"This example is a demonstration of chemi-luminescence, one of the wonders of chemistry," Bob Williams, laboratory instructor, said.

"Chemi-luminescence is the product of two chemical compounds that give off energy when mixed in the form of light," Williams said as he stirred new chemicals into the mixture giving it the appearance of a witches' cauldron.

The light given off at first is similar to that of a fluorescent lamp. The chemicals will glow for approximately 20 minutes. The mixture gradually dims to a yellowish light.

Williams said that the experi-
