Cotton Bowl Group To Host Delegates

TCU is the host in the Cotton Bowl Jan. 1, but the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association is the super host!

The association, a nonprofit, non-stock corporation which is wholly controlled by the Southwest Athletic Conference, sponsors a 3-day festival, which will be terminated by the big game between the Frogs and the Air Force Academy Falcons.

A student group from each of the conference schools and the visiting school is given a treat like unto the winners on "Queen for a Day."

The groups are composed of five members. Representing TCU are Miss Pat Miller, Cotton Bowl Queen; Paul Youngdale, Student Congress president; Pat Beckham, editor of The Skiff; Joel Hurley, head cheerleader, and Dale Walker, captain of the Frog football team. The last four are designated as TCU representatives to the SWC Sportsmanship Committee.

The student representatives, along with their dates, will begin the party as guests of the Dallas Downtown Club, at 6 p.m. Dec. 30. For after-dinner entertainment, the group will be provided with tickets to the State Fair Music Hall Show, "Li'l Abner."

At noon the following day, the Sports Hall of Fame luncheon has been scheduled at the Statler-Hilton Hotel, and at the same time a Neiman-Marcus style show and luncheon has been planned. The men will go to the former, while the women attend the other.

The Statler-Hilton will be the scene of the regular meeting of the Sportsmanship Committee at 2:30 p.m. the same day. The Gold Room has been reserved at no cost to the committee.

Students from all colleges are invited to attend the 9 p.m. dance at the SMU Student Center. Euel Box and his Orchestra will play. There will be a floor show fea-

Sharpshooters Go For Rifle Trophy

By JOHN SHIELDS

Eight TCU sharpshooters recently won the first round of the Southwest Rifle Association matches, and now are preparing for the second round in the spring semester.

By winning that second round, TCU would cop its first SRA trophy, of which Baylor University currently has possession. However, for Baylor to retain their prize they must compile more points in the second round than did TCU in the first.

Under the instruction of their coach, Sgt. 1/c Walter Bradley, the team continues to practice on the firing line.

"We feel we have our best chance for the championship this year," said Bradley, "and we want to work hard in preparation for winning it."

Bradley is assisted by Cadet Capt. Gerald Shamburger, Tyler senior, who is team captain.

"The team is open to any student enrolled in the University," commented Capt. E. L. Murphy, Army ROTC instructor, "whether he is in the ROTC program or not."

The sure-shots have plenty of experience behind them. Shamburger is a 4-year member of the team, and was selected to be one of five members on the Fourth Army's ROTC Rifle Team.

The remaining seven members of the team are Ted Lange, Dick Spell, Joe Huddleston, Dave Ryon, Chester Sullivan, Ray Leuty and Gaylord Tate.

Lange, also a senior member, compiled the highest score in summer camp last year with a mark of 236 out of 250.

"This adds more depth to the team," stated Bradley.

The week prior to the second-round firings will include the William Randolph Hearst Matches. Murphy explained that this will be a postal match. The team receives the numbered targets from the Hearst officials, and after firing the required shots the targets are sent back to be compared with the results of other entrants.

This meet is open to high schools and junior and senior colleges.

"We finished tenth in the nation last year," Murphy stated, "and I believe our chances are better this year."

Yule Drama To Be Given

A Christmas play and Nativity scene will be presented at the Christmas Convocation, Dec. 16, in Ed Landreth Auditorium.

Stephen Vincent Benet's "A Child is Born" will be presented by Alpha Psi Omega, honorary drama fraternity, as an integral part of the Convocation.

The drama, played by a 15-member cast, concerns the birth of the Christ child as seen by the innkeeper and his wife Harold Blackwelder, Fort Worth graduate student, is cast as the innkeeper, and Catherine Davis, Berger senior, will play his wife.

The Nativity presentation resembles a life portrait with actors holding one position for approximately five minutes.

The Convocation is under the direction of Dr. George Fowler, associate professor of religion, and is sponsored by the United Religious Council.

"Sam, You Made the Pants Too Long!"

We get a lot of customers asking us what the proper length is to wear their pants.

There is only one proper length for pants at the present time, and that is just reaching the shoe, without any "break" in the trouser cuff.

Now, of course, we'll make your pants longer if you insist, but at the CCUS we will sincerely tell you about the proper length, and advise you on any other style question you may have.

Football Tuesday

DG's, SPE's Plan Battle

The TCU campus comes alive again with gridiron fever as Delta Gamma accepts Sig Ep's challenge to a "powder-puff" football game. The event is scheduled for 4 p.m. Tuesday on the intramural field, and all students are invited.

All participants of the game must observe the following rules:

- Men:
1. Must use opposite hand when passing.
 2. Defensive player must walk and not run until in the opposing backfield.
 3. Players must keep their hands down when blocking and there will be no shoulder blocking. Failure to observe this rule will result in the player's expulsion from the game and a 50-yard penalty or one-half the length of the distance to the goal line.
- Women:
1. Pinching, biting, pulling hair and general unladylike conduct not permitted.
 2. No flirting with the opposing players.
 3. No use of feminine charms to confuse the players.
- Other penalties:
1. Offside, 5 yards.
 2. Clipping, 15 yards.
 3. Unsportsmanlike conduct, 15 yards.

Memo to a Clod

In the "good ole days" on the Hill, students staggered sleepily through the weeds to classes in the Administration Building. The only traffic they had to worry about was in the form of two mules that pulled a little-used lawn mower.

Today the weeds are gone, but many a motorist would swear the mules have learned to carry books.

Any driver foolhardy enough to buzz down University Drive during a class change, invariably is met with a solid wall of inconsiderate humanity. He can either stomp the accelerator and get to town on time (while boosting the county's auto fatality rate), or he can come to a dead halt under a barrage of "I ain't worth a hoot till I've had my morning coffee" glances.

The situation reached its ridiculous peak some weeks ago when an emergency ambulance with siren blaring and red lights glaring was forced to come to a complete halt while a campus clod ambled across the street.

When you stop to think, it's amazing that more students aren't getting that cup of coffee right after their thermometer in a hospital bed.

Bah! Humbug!

Happy? Smiling? Looking forward to the holidays? Well, forget it!

The fact is that behind that glittering facade of tinsel and eggnog lies the perennial bane of the college student—semester's end.

The end of a semester means many things, most of them being exams.

Exams, in turn, mean study.

Study means work.

And work is just what hundreds of students will be "getting down to" very shortly.

If you're behind in a course (and who isn't?) the time has come to shift into high gear and catch up with the pack, or at least with the textbook.

In the meantime: Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year (yuk).

The Ponies' Plight

Sincere condolences are here offered to the valiant Mustangs of Southern Methodist University.

They were told the price of a ticket to the Sugar Bowl, and they tackled a job to earn the fee. The Ponies did their job well in pounding out a victory over Southwest Conference Titlist TCU—as will testify anyone who was in the Cotton Bowl on Nov. 29—only to learn that their ticket had been purchased for a lesser figure even before they had finished making their bid.

If SMU's 7-3 record against admirable opponents was not sufficient evidence of its showmanship, the performances of its 1-man circus, Don Meredith, should have been enough to merit a spot in any New Year's Day spectacular in the country.

Which still leaves the question: Why was SMU, the obvious choice, banned from the New Orleans Classic? Could it be that the Sugar Bowl brass chose not to risk an upset of the local heroes—the national champion Tigers of Louisiana State?

ARKANSAS—

The panty-filching craze has started again.

Nine Arkansas students were arrested out of a band of 500, following a nightly raid which netted them only three pairs for their trouble. The panty purloiners were charged with disturbing the peace, fined five dollars and released on $135 bond.

Comments and feelings pertaining to the residents of the women's dorm brought this statement from one coed:

"I was frightened to death when I heard them. I locked my door when it started."

Hey, Maggie! There's only eight of us here. Unlock the door and let Jim in.

This wasn't the only caper the fun-loving Arkansas crew pulled during this week of madness. This message was left on the blackboard when their English teacher failed to arrive:

"We is come, you did not come, we is gone."

TWU—

Speaking of panties . . . the Women's University down Denton way is now holding a laboratory nursery, conducted by the child development divisions of the College of Household Art and Services.

In this colorful little haven, the cute little tykes are allowed to play as they please, which comes under the heading of "progressive play" and "free development." The free-wheeling toddlers are observed by student teachers who help them learn new skills and develop their interests. This picturesque description, taken in part from the Daily Lass-O, should certainly serve as "pabulum for thought" to future mothers and fathers who are considering progressive education for their children:

"Upon arrival at 9 a.m., the children have a free play period. They paste, cut, color, string beads, look at books, build with blocks, work with clay, work with carpentry tools or play 'house.'"

"Excursions are often made across campus to view the construction work and collect scraps for building materials."

We thought that sandpile was a strange location for the library.

TECH—

Functions we're sorry we missed.

The Raider campus was the scene recently of the annual beauty contest, and from this comment by the yearbook editor, it must have been quite an exciting if not unusual affair.

"Entrants," he said, "will appear only briefly in bathing togs."

No doubt followed by a brief appearance of the Lubbock vice squad.

Sandy Stokes, the pretty blonde cheerleader who makes you want to cheer, urges everyone to attend the pep rally in Ed Landreth Thursday. It's for the Cotton Bowl game, and will be the last football cheering session of the year. Let's get with the cheerleaders, who are doing such a good job, and back the Frogs.

Next week The Skiff will publish a take-to-the-game paper with three-deep rosters of both the Frogs and Falcons printed full one-half page on the back. The paper also will carry numerous Cotton Bowl features, and will be based on a Christmas-Bowl combination. Be sure to pick up an extra copy (on Thursday) and carry it to Dallas with you. And don't miss the game. It is rated the top attraction in the bowl picture.

Even freezing temperatures couldn't stop 70 to 80 spectators from venturing forth Wednesday to view the faculty-student football game.

The Weevil Bowl fans didn't go away disappointed. A tight game with an 8-2 faculty victory kept the shivering onlookers on the sidelines.

Congratulations to "The Hosses" and the faculty team for a good game which added proceeds to Campus Chest. However, the frigid weather must take the blame for not having a better turnout.

It certainly wasn't the fault of Professors Ben Procter and Comer Clay. These two promotion men should try to sell some Cotton Bowl tickets on the LSU campus. Actually they probably would be able to sell Sugar Bowl tickets at SMU.

New Science Brochure Due

A brochure on the summer institute for senior high school teachers of science and mathematics, to be held at TCU this summer will be published around the first of January, says Dr. Joseph Morgan, chairman of the physics department and director of the institute.

The brochure will describe in detail what will be included in the institute, which begins June 8, 1959, and continues for six weeks.

He returned this week from a meeting of 85 directors of summer institutes held in St. Louis Dec. 5 and 6.

The institutes are sponsored by the National Science Foundation of Washington, D.C.

The directors discussed types of institute courses, publicity, selection of participants, and visiting and local staff.

TCU, with its $92,400 grant, represents one of the largest of the 350 summer institutes held in 255 educational schools.

TCU Named Host School For Region IX Convention

The Region IX meeting of the Association of College Unions held last weekend resulted in TCU being named the host school for next year's convention.

TCU sent 20 delegates to the convention this year held in Weatherford, Okla.

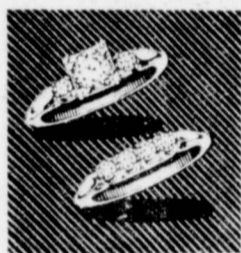

At various workshops held, Bob Burn, Amarillo senior, and Miss Anne Matlock, Fort Smith, Ark., junior, headed two groups. The case study method was used in some instances, and also the problem study method.

Every school shared opinions and discussed problems. Out of these discussions came ideas for the improvement of student union programs.

A highlight of the convention was the appearance of the first all-regional talent show, which was held on Friday night. Schools from an area including Texas, Oklahoma, Mississippi and Kansas were represented in the show.

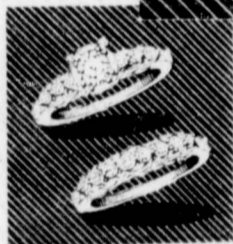

TCU's representative was Miss "Tootie" Davis, Borger senior, who captured first prize. Miss Davis did pantomimes to Spike Jones' "Wild Bill Hiccup" and "Cocktails for Two."

Memo to a Clod

In the "good ole days" on the Hill, students staggered sleepily through the weeds to classes in the Administration Building. The only traffic they had to worry about was in the form of two mules that pulled a little-used lawn mower.

Today the weeds are gone, but many a motorist would swear the mules have learned to carry books.

Any driver foolhardy enough to buzz down University Drive during a class change, invariably is met with a solid wall of inconsiderate humanity. He can either stomp the accelerator and get to town on time (while boosting the county's auto fatality rate), or he can come to a dead halt under a barrage of "I ain't worth a hoot till I've had my morning coffee" glances.

The situation reached its ridiculous peak some weeks ago when an emergency ambulance with siren blaring and red lights glaring was forced to come to a complete halt while a campus clod ambled across the street.

When you stop to think, it's amazing that more students aren't getting that cup of coffee right after their thermometer in a hospital bed.

Bah! Humbug!

Happy? Smiling? Looking forward to the holidays? Well, forget it!

The fact is that behind that glittering facade of tinsel and eggnog lies the perennial bane of the college student—semester's end.

The end of a semester means many things, most of them being exams.

Exams, in turn, mean study.

Study means work.

And work is just what hundreds of students will be "getting down to" very shortly.

If you're behind in a course (and who isn't?) the time has come to shift into high gear and catch up with the pack, or at least with the textbook.

In the meantime: Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year (yuk).

The Ponies' Plight

Sincere condolences are here offered to the valiant Mustangs of Southern Methodist University.

They were told the price of a ticket to the Sugar Bowl, and they tackled a job to earn the fee. The Ponies did their job well in pounding out a victory over Southwest Conference Titlist TCU—as will testify anyone who was in the Cotton Bowl on Nov. 29—only to learn that their ticket had been purchased for a lesser figure even before they had finished making their bid.

If SMU's 7-3 record against admirable opponents was not sufficient evidence of its showmanship, the performances of its 1-man circus, Don Meredith, should have been enough to merit a spot in any New Year's Day spectacular in the country.

Which still leaves the question: Why was SMU, the obvious choice, banned from the New Orleans Classic? Could it be that the Sugar Bowl brass chose not to risk an upset of the local heroes—the national champion Tigers of Louisiana State?

Texas Group Of Scientists Invited Here

The Texas Academy of Science will be invited to hold its annual meeting here at TCU in 1960.

A delegation of professors and students who are in Houston today to attend the 3-day conference will deliver the invitation. The meeting, held at Baylor Medical Center, began yesterday.

Five of the group will speak to the academy.

The University has not been host to the group since 1952, when the Science Building was opened. Dr. Willis G. Hewatt, chairman of the biology and geology departments, was at that time president of the academy. He is on the board of directors at present.

Four from TCU will address the senior division of the academy. Jim Martin, Fort Worth senior, will speak to the junior branch.

Dr. Sanders T. Lyles, associate professor of biology, will present a report on his cholera research. Dr. Neil Hulings, assistant professor, will report on marine studies. Mrs. Danny Hemlay, graduate assistant, will discuss her studies on the feeding habits of certain starfish.

Also on the program of the senior division will be John T. Falkenbury, Fort Worth freshman, who will represent Fort Worth Children's Museum with a discussion.

Martin, a math major, in addressing college and high school students of the junior division, will give a paper and demonstration with soap film showing how to solve problems in the calculus of variations. He entitles his discussion, "A Demonstration on Minimal Surfaces." Martin is president of the Parabola Club.

Also attending the meeting of the senior division will be Dr. Earl W. Gardner, assistant professor of biology, and Dr. Hewatt.

Youngdale Cited By Rotary Club

Paul Youngdale, Beaumont senior, is the student guest of the Fort Worth Rotary Club for December. Each month, the Rotary Club selects an outstanding student to be an honorary member.

He was invited by Dr. Otto Nielsen, dean of the School of Education.

Nothing seems to succeed like the appearance of success.

Kansas Hosts Debate Meet

Three TCU teams are debating in the Southwestern College Debate Tournament at Winfield, Kan., today and tomorrow.

David Matheny, sponsor of the debate squad, and Brooks Alexander, Dallas graduate student, will act as judges for the debates.

The man who thought nothing of walking ten miles a day now has a grandson who doesn't think so much of it either.

Volbach Names Cast

Dr. Walther Volbach, director of opera, has announced the cast for the opera "Orfeo" by Gluck to be presented in May.

The cast includes Virginia Seelig, Fort Worth special student, in the role of Orpheus; Ruth Kruger, Fort Worth special student, playing Euridice, and Linda Loftis, Fort Worth freshman, as Amor.

Minor parts will be selected later.

From the Sideline

By LEE GRIMSLEY

There's a real, live, honest-to-goodness barracuda on campus. It's not the variety of fish, but this barracuda's natural habitat is water.

The barracuda in question is a petite, 18-year-old junior from Fort Worth named Linda Prinz, and for the past 13 or 14 years, water has been her natural habitat.

The barracuda tag came about two years ago when she was a student at Sophie Newcomb College in New Orleans.

"I was on the swimming team there and one of the Barracudas," says Linda. "The Barracudas are members of the synchronized swimming team."

LINDA PRINZ . . . Barracuda

Linda began swimming back in San Diego at the age of four or five.

"I learned with a pillow case in the ocean with a girl who was a teenager then," she explained.

"I'd wet the pillow case, then run along with it until it was full of air. Then I'd tie it up and use it as a buoy to keep me above water."

"But the air, of course, would come out of the pillow case," she laughed, "so I had to learn to swim."

She started entering swimming meets when she was 10, and participated in the Texas meet at Tyler when she was 13.

After that, Linda began to lose interest in the sport until she started at Sophie Newcomb two years ago.

"I first started on the synchronized team," she said. "But then my sorority told me I had to swim on the competitive team."

Since transferring here this fall, Linda has discovered that there is much less interest in swimming as a sport at TCU than there is at Sophie Newcomb.

"And you have to be able to swim to get out of school down there. Unless, of course, you get a statement from a doctor saying, 'I don't want this girl near the water'."

Not only is swimming a sport, but it's a favorite pastime of students at Tulane and Sophie Newcombe.

"When the spring comes, nearly everyone goes to the coast to laze around on the beach or swim," she says.

"Once I went wading out in the ocean and there was this big sign out there. I waded out for awhile, and then decided that the water would start getting deep and decided to swim the rest of the way."

"Well, I swam all the way out there," Linda continued, "and do you know what the sign said? 'Sudden drop off.'"

"Then I started to turn around and swim back and my feet touched bottom. Why, I could have walked all that way."

FLOYD

Floyd recalled. "He was really sold on this place and after he talked to me I just wasn't interested in anything else."

While he was musing over the season, the big tackle did a little Monday morning quarterbacking of his own on the Frogs' ride to the top of the Southwest Conference heap.

"Coach Abe Martin gets most of the credit for our success," he said.

What does the future hold for Don Floyd?

"More football," he drawled. "First, we've got to beat Air Force, then there's another season with the Frogs, and three or four years of pro football, I hope. After that, coaching somewhere. Football's been mighty good to me and I'd like to give it my all."

Girls, maybe? "Nope, just football," he grins. And that's what Frog fans will be seeing in the Cotton Bowl New Year's Day—Don Floyd playing more football.

Woods and Waters

By GEORGE GOULD

On December 1, the quail season got off to a warm, slow start. The first three days were fairly good, because hunters had not had a weekend to spook them. They were flushing fast, and if you stood in the middle of them when they went up, you were too "shook up" to shoot—straight anyway.

Bob Spengler, Fort Worth senior, and this writer went out last Wednesday to see what we could do about taking a few birds. We were handicapped without the efforts of a dog, and as we found out, it was almost a necessity to have one.

We never put up a bird in the open field, so we moved into the heavier cover. There they were! Bob yelled, "Bird up," turned and shot. At that moment, about a dozen quail went up all around him. We were both taken by surprise, but managed to get two birds out of the covey. One was down and out, but the other was a sure cripple and it took us ten minutes to find him.

Walking them up is hard work, but pays off in rich dividends if you know where to look. This year, Texas is being plagued by a little monster commonly called a cotton rat. He's in every field and bush by the hundreds. This is probably why the quail have taken to the heavy cover, and some have even been found in trees. With this cotton rat problem, the hatch will be affected next year and quail hunting may be slow.

The director of game and fish information reminds us to send in any aluminum bands found on the birds they kill. These bands can also be turned over to the local warden. He also requests reporting the killing of any Coturnix quail (whether banded or not) to the wardens. This is an effort to find out if there is any wild reproduction of these transplanted birds in Texas.

The duck shooting remains slow and unproductive. Hunters on Possum Kingdom Lake are taking a few birds, but it just isn't worth sitting in a blind all day for a couple of shots. A few small flocks of pintails have been seen out on Benbrook, but no one seems to know the secret of knocking them down.

With the weather still warm, fishermen are out every day by the score, which makes hunting difficult. As soon as some good, cold weather moves in, and stays with us, we'll be getting better shooting.

'Greatest I've Ever Coached,' Says Brannon of Dribblers

By ROY STAMPS

During the past 10 years that Byron "Buster" Brannon has headed the Purple forces in Frogville, many great teams have passed by. Those years boasted three championship clubs, and All-America Richard O'Neal. Yet of the 59 Frogs Brannon says, "This is the greatest team I have ever coached."

Kirchner, the 6-10 post man, has come far in the past nine months. He had his share of the points last year, but due to his size, he appeared clumsy and slow. This year, he moves about with the agility of a ballet dancer.

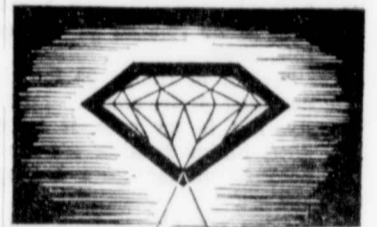

Stevenson, top scorer for the '58 team is still a steady performer.

Bobby Tyler, the small man on the team at 5-10, last year was a playmaker. This year he's an all-around man with his accurate outside shooting.

Kenneth King, cool in the hottest situation, is a deadly shot, and holds the Purple attack together when the going gets tough.

The Frogs play the University of Utah Friday and Saturday at Salt Lake City. The games will be broadcast at 9 p.m. over Radio Station WBAP 320 or 570.

Floyd: 'Foes, Prince and Abe Helped Me to All-America'

By BOB SCHEFFER

Opposing linemen may grumble under their breath when they read this, but big Don Floyd, the Frog's All-America tackle says they're the ones responsible for him being selected to the honor team this year.

"It's hard to say what makes a good football player," Floyd said as he relaxed in his room this week.

"A lot of things go into it—coaching, desire and natural ability. But in my case, if I am a good player I think it's mostly because of the guys I played against.

"I've just always been able to play harder when there was a challenge on the other side of that line, and believe me, there have been some pretty rugged ones. There wasn't anybody this year that you could push around."

"Yes, there was, and I'm the one who did all the pushing."

The voice came from Bobby Prince who plays behind Floyd in the Frog line.

"If you want the real story on why Don made All-America, ask me," Prince needed. "Why, with me playing behind him, you might say I pushed him there."

The conversation was all in fun, and Prince is the first to admit Floyd is one of the most terrific linemen to cover the Frog trenches since I. B. Hale and Ki Aldrich.

"It's just like coach says," Bobby confided, "Don never makes a mistake."

Possibly that is the secret to Floyd's success. Not a colorful football player in the likeness of Norman Hamilton, who was in all places at once while he held down a tackle slot several years ago, Floyd throughout the season just took care of his own business, and took care of it in such fashion that week after week during the fall campaign Abe Martin would comment:

"Don was our outstanding ball player."

And so he was. It boiled down simply to this: Don Floyd had a job to do and he took care of it better than anyone else could. It was this steady, unfaltering play that prompted sports writers to nominate him to a host of post-season honor teams.

The Don Floyd story began in Midlothian, where he grew up the second of three children. His mother operates a tourist stop there, but from the sixth grade Don began spending more and more time with a football.

First it was on the sandlot teams, then the grammar school touch games and finally organized team play in junior high.

At Midlothian High School he found time for other sports, too, and picked up letters in basketball and track. He played four years on the football team starting at the same position, tackle, that he now plays.

He was picked to two all-district teams in high school, and college coaches began camping at his doorstep.

"But it was old Bobby Jack Floyd (former Frog fullback) that finally got me to TCU."

19 Teams Open Third Annual Delt Fracas

The third annual Delta Tau Delta Basketball tournament began Thursday in the Little Gym, with the Delta Tau Delta "B" Team playing Sigma Chi of TCU, and the TCU Kappa Sigs playing Pi Kappa Alpha of SMU in the opening rounds.

There are 19 teams entered in the tournament. They are Delta Tau Delta teams from Texas Tech, Kansas University and TCU; Phi Delta Theta teams from Texas Tech, TCU and SMU; Phi Kappa Sigma of TCU; Lambda Chi Alpha of TCU and North Texas State; Phi Kappa Alpha of SMU; Kappa Sigma of TCU and SMU; Sigma Chi, TCU and Oklahoma University; Sig Eps of TCU; Phi Kaps, TCU and North Texas; and Theta Chi from North Texas.

Pre-tourney favorites were SMU's Phi Delta Theta, led by grid star Don Meredith, and the Delta Tau Delta team of TCU.

The SMU team won the previous two tourneys, and it is expected it will have the same powerful shooting team. The Deltas expect to field a more experienced team than in previous years and may challenge the champions this year.

Two of the grid stars who will be in action for TCU teams will be Jack Spikes and Marshall Harris. These men will be out to see if the passing arm of Don Meredith is as accurate on the basketball court as on the gridiron.

Trophies will be presented for first, second and consolation winners. Small awards will be presented to the 10 men who are picked for the all-tournament team, as well as to each of the players that start for the championship team.

HERE'S HOPING HABIT STICKS

"This guy is a real winner," might have been a scouting report when TCU was in the process of recruiting Justin Rowland from Arlington State.

For example, in two years at Arlington State the Rebs lost only two games, and journeyed to the Little Rose Bowl in California both seasons and came home with victories in each of the trips.

If Rowland's record holds up it means another bowl victory. Let's hope his winning ways stick around. And remember, don't ever call the guy a loser—he has the facts to prove differently.

ment are Linda Childress, Dallas freshman; Sharon Louise Thompson, Houston freshman; Gayle Meyer, Fort Worth senior, and Margaret Lane Gorman, Fort Worth senior. These women will present the trophies to the winning teams after the final games Saturday night.

SWC Gridiron Champions Start Cotton Bowl Workouts

By GORDON PYNES

Coach Abe Martin's Horned gridmen are back at work this week in preparation for their New Year's Day Cotton Bowl clash with the Air Force Academy's Falcons.

With all hands in top shape, the first four units have been running in sweat suits the past few days. They've spent most of the short sessions working on offensive plays and regaining timing. Next week will find them working on a defense to stop the Air Force's top-notch aerial game and assortment of offensive patterns.

Varsity subs and the freshman team have been busily engaged in scrimmages. Martin plans to use these few weeks of Cotton Bowl preparation to familiarize the frosh with their elder varsity mates before spring training. They may also be used to run Air Force plays to give the first team an idea of the Falcon's offensive arrangements.

Freshman Coach Fred Taylor and Student Assistant Bill Culpepper, who scouted the Falcons in their 20-14 victory over Colorado, were highly impressed with the academy's team.

"Big, strong and as full of spirit as any team we saw all year," were the scouts' words after seeing the game in Boulder two weeks ago.

They were especially awed at the variety of offensive formations used by the Falcons. Ben Martin's undefeated, but once tied, club came out with a T, double wing, various winged-T setups and used an unbalanced line.

Culpepper warned of several outstanding boys on the service team. He had regard for All-America tackle and team captain Brock Storm.

"The guy is big (220 pounds) and reacts quickly to the opponents' moves."

He also pointed to the work of Quarterback Rich Mayo who is a fine punter and completed 98 passes over the 10-game schedule. It was Mayo who several times led the Falcons to last-minute victories with his long throws.
