'Foreign' Femmes Replace Texas Males

Frogland Going to the Girls

By PAT BECKHAM

For the first time since Delilah took charge in the Year 1, or thereabouts, the femmes have taken power.

Three of the top campus posts already have been spoken for in next year's political setup. Editors of The Skiff and Horned Frog, as well as Activities Council director, won't be contested. There is a lone candidate in each race—all women.

Add to that the fact that they all hail from states other than Texas. Arkansas, Colorado and West Virginia are represented.

Of course, something could go wrong in any or all instances ere fall, but don't count on it. Three of TCU's top five student leader posts in 1959-60 will be run by women.

Texas males held each of the three jobs this year. The other two jobs were split: Paul Youngdale, the Congress prexy, is a Beaumont senior, while Congress Veep Jerry Johnson is a junior from Decatur, Ga.

Miss Anne Matlock, Fort Smith, Ark., junior, looks like the replacement for Joe Dulle as AC director. Miss Judy Galloway, Denver, Colo., freshman, is John Cantwell's protege, and Miss Beth Morris, Ansted, W. Va., junior, is heir-apparent to the shoes of this humble scribe.

Well, really, it wasn't a totally uncontested ascension for all the aspirants. Although Misses Matlock and Galloway drew no competition, Miss Morris did. However, she drew her "free walk" when two other candidates for editor of the newspaper were judged by the Publications Committee not to fulfill the necessary eligibility requirements.

Each of the offices will be listed on the ballot with the lone names, along with names in 40 hotly contested races, during spring elections which begin next Wednesday.

And, just for a clincher—candidates for the office of Congress secretary, many of the representative seats and a majority of cheerleader candidates are members of the "fair" sex.

Then there's TCU Sweetheart—probably a girl.

College Bowl Quiz Show Is Party Premiere Feature

By BETH MORRIS

One of the best features of the Student Center's fourth annual Birthday Party will be the premiere of the TCU "College Bowl." The new quiz show will be a battle of the wits between a faculty team and a student team.

The event is scheduled for 7 p.m. today in Room 203 and Jim Koch, Austin freshman, will emcee. Refreshments will be served during the "half-time."

The birthday celebration lasts Monday through Thursday.

The faculty team consists of John Haltom, instructor in government; David Matheny, instructor in speech, and Dr. W. C. Nunn, professor of history. Those comprising the student team are Robert Carr, Dallas junior; Dayle Casey, Dallas senior, and Gary Hamrick, Dallas sophomore.

The idea for the show was taken from the popular national television program featured on Sunday afternoons, but the pattern for tonight's show will be simplified somewhat.

The emcee will ask a question and either of two teams may volunteer to answer. If both teams are unable to answer, the question then will be offered to anyone in the audience.

There will be two judges to determine the validity of the contestants' answers.

Questions are guaranteed to be tough ones and will include subjects about ancient history, mythology, Buddhism, architects, the Academy Awards, the Nobel Prize for literature and the present chief justice of the Supreme Court.

If sufficient interest is shown and the "Bowl" proves to be a success, it will be continued next year, possibly making an appearance twice a semester.

There would be a defending team which any group of students could challenge, and in the future, several teams would be developed. The program would then be extended to regional schools such as SMU, TWC, Rice, Texas Tech, etc., to stimulate intercollegiate competition.

This show, as well as the rest of the party, was co-ordinated by the Activities Council's forums committee headed by Clark Lindley, Pecos senior. The co-chairmen are Misses Jo Rita Johnson, Tia Juana, Venezuela, sophomore, and Jan Jones, Greenville freshman. Others on the staff include Ray Brewton, Mineral Wells junior; Brice Harbert, Houston freshman, and Eloise Snell, Fort Worth freshman.

The "Grand Slam," scheduled for Thursday night, will include a free movie, "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," and a dance afterwards.

Seven Candidates Omitted in Paper Due to Late Filing

Names of seven spring election candidates were omitted from the list published in the April 17 Skiff because they failed to register with John Tyson, election committee chairman, after paying their filing fee.

The candidates and the offices they seek are Miss Janeen Cunningham, secretary of Student Congress; Jim Schunke and Joe Blackwell, Add-Ran College representatives; Dennis Megarity, Jerry Spearman and Miss Sharon Thompson, sophomore representative, and David Griffin, cheerleader.

DOCTORS NUNN AND POTTER
Just the Right 'Twist'

Profs Pun, Tears Run

By J'NELL ROGERS

A laugh every minute is no exaggeration—in fact it's an understatement when referring to the uproariously funny "Snide Lights on Texas History," by Ananias Twist. Mr. Twist is the pen name for two TCU history professors, Dr. Marguerite Potter and Dr. W. C. Nunn.

The book starts out at the beginning of Texas history when the Good Indians and the Bad Indians roamed the plains. Soon most of the Good Indians were dead because everyone knows the only Good Indian is a dead Indian. The Cherry Keys and Shy Anns were a couple of the tribes.

Next the conquistadores came on the scene. Then from France came LaSalle Hepatica who wandered into Texas by mistake.

Nor do the professors omit mention of the famous men in the state's past, Davy Crocker, Sam Galveston or Stephen, Exhaustion.

The famous mission, the Ala Mode, shrine of Texas independence, isn't neglected in the treatment of Texas history either.

Typical chapter headings are "The Uncivil War," "Sax et Larut an Secruoser" (Texas Natural Resources spelled backwards), "Pools of Petrol" and "The Lone Shark Republic."

Of course, the book doesn't leave out infamous Texas outlaws such as Billy the Kidney and Sam Pass. Judge Soy Bean and his Law West of the Pecos is described along with a whole lineage of his family—Lima, Red, Snap and String Bean.

The idea for the book came from Dr. Nunn, who started it and showed some of the work to Dr. Potter. They decided to work together and spent spare moments over a period of a year on the book.

Ken Holder drew cartoon illustrations which are scattered throughout the book.

"Snide Lights on Texas History" is not a first book for either of the professors, though their previously published work has been of a more serious nature.

Dr. Potter is the author or co-author of several books and publications on Missouri's history as well as portions of British and Texas history.

Dr. Nunn's "Escape from Reconstruction" appeared a couple of years ago. A new book, "Carpetbaggers and Texas" is ready to be sent to the publisher.

Dr. Hendricks To Speak At Geologists' Meeting

Dr. Leo Hendricks, professor of geology, will speak to the Abilene Geological Society at their April meeting at noon Thursday in Abilene.

His subject will be "Sedimentary Environments of the Pennsylvanian Rocks Exposed in Parker County, Texas."

DSF 'J.B.' OK

A small but interested audience rejected the usual Sunday night TV pap for the more serious and sturdy fare of "J.B.", the Archibald MacLeish drama in verse of a modern Job, very capably presented by the Disciples Student Fellowship in the Fellowship Hall of University Christian Church.

The dramatic-reading version of the play was more than sufficient enough to project MacLeish's controversial treatment of the God-man relationship.

Space does not permit acknowledgment of the personnel involved in the production. They were good, and the spectators' response to this offering by the dedicated student drama group was a sustained applause that brought the players back for well-deserved curtain calls.

It was a rewarding evening. It was good fellowship. You had to be there.

Chemical Society Meeting Concluded

A smorgasbord dinner and a speech by a Texas A&M professor highlighted the April meeting of the Fort Worth-Dallas Section of the American Chemical Society which was held on the second floor of the Science Building last night.

The smorgasbord, set up in Rooms 207 and 208, preceded the speech by Dr. A. F. Isbell, associate professor of chemistry at A&M. His subject was "Some New Aspects of Organo-Phosphorus Chemistry."

His talk covered the solution of problems created by the synthesis of a number of new alkyl-phosphonyl dichlorides.

Dr. F. M. Lisle, professor of chemistry, was chairman of the program. Dr. E. R. Alexander, professor of chemistry, is president of the Fort Worth-Dallas section.

Student Loans Are Available

Applications for the national defense student loans to cover summer school expenses are now being received in Business Manager L. C. White's office in the Administration Building.

The loans are available to students who plan to take at least six semester hours of work in summer school.

The applications must be picked up and returned to Mr. White's office.

The amount each student may be loaned should be announced not later than May 5.

"Those who had loans for the spring semester must apply again for summer school," Mr. White said.

What To Wear at Select Series

You will see all sorts of get-ups at the Select Series events, from sport shirts up, but the outfit should be more uniform, and better looking.

A dark suit, with white shirt, tie, oxford shoes, is the acceptable outfit. Even sport coats are a little too informal.

Being well dressed is essentially wearing the proper thing at the proper time. It is as bad to wear sports clothes to a concert or lecture as it is to wear a tuxedo to a football game.

For Better Methods

Teacher evaluation time for the Evening College has rolled around again.

For the third year, the Evening College Council's evaluation committee will distribute and collect printed forms to Evening College students who will rate their instructors.

The object of the evaluation is not to get teachers fired, as some people think. The ratings are compiled and analyzed to inform the instructors of their strong and weak points. This helps the teachers strengthen and better their instruction.

The Council's evaluation thus improves the teachers, and thereby helps the students learn more.

Student Congress may do well to initiate a similar evaluation program in Day School. Even professors with Ph.D.'s are subject to improvement from time to time.

Edison Turns in His Grave

Candles and kerosene lamps have long since disappeared from the home front to be replaced by Mr. Edison's contribution to mankind—the electric light bulb.

However, not all inventions are perfect, especially electrical systems that fail and plunge dormitories and classrooms in darkness for hours at a time. The number of times power failure has occurred this year on campus isn't very favorable, and surely Mr. Edison would be most embarrassed to witness the shenanigans going on today.

Local merchants are making a small fortune from customers who buy candles, flashlights, batteries and kindling wood for bonfires, just so they can see enough to ruin their eyes studying.

But even with this small tragedy in life, the student takes the incident in stride and says to a neighbor with a candle in her hand:

"It will be interesting to see what I've decided to wear by the time I get to a place that has some decent light."

Room for the Buggies

Future Froglanders will have no trouble finding a parking place on campus—that is if they don't mind walking a bit.

Dean of Students Laurence C. Smith says, concerning student and faculty parking in the next 10 years, that even though the University is gearing for 10,000 students, the parking situation is well in hand.

The solution is relatively simple—the Stadium parking lots will be used in coming years. This means that students will have to walk a little, and they will have to arrive a few minutes earlier in order to make classes on time. At present, the Stadium lots are used only occasionally, usually for football games.

The dean pointed out that one or more buses might be used to take students from the lower Stadium lots to distant buildings on the east side of the campus.

With room on the University land and surrounding streets for 20,000 cars, TCU can continue to grow without fear of turning students away because of lack of space for their vehicles.

SW Campus Confidential

By JOHN SHIELDS

TEXAS—

In a recent Daily Texan column entitled "Hairy Tales," the writer slammed the Austin police force for giving too many parking violation tickets to students.

"Now ole Hairy realizes that each patrolman has his quota to fill, but shouldn't the gang down at City Hall look into this matter? After all, where would Austin be without Forty Acres?"

Don't feel bad, Hairy. It's best you have a force on the ball rather than one that sits around stuffing themselves with fried fish.

Hairy continued, this time about the annual Round-Up:

"Well, Hairy has noticed it's that time again. Hairy likes Round-Up. He can get drunk, pinch girls, cut classes and generally raise hell and get away with it."

Know just how you feel, Hairy. I recollect something of that nature at TCU.

TECH—

More facts on last Tuesday's food strike in Sneed Hall:

"Dormitory dietitians stated they knew nothing about a planned boycott of dormitory food. Sneed residents admitted the actions at morning and noon were planned and a 'more effective one' was planned for Tuesday night. Officials, however, averted the planned riot."

Who was that prophet that once stated, "A word to the wise is sufficient"?

SMU—

What with the current collegiate fad of cramming humans into phone booths and foreign cars, a femme columnist wrote:

"I should be studying, but . . . I dreamed I was with 34 Kappa Sigs in a Renault wearing my Maidenform."

Well, at least the large crowd kept her from a draft and possible cold, with such flimsy costume on. Subtitled: Did everything come out all right?

ARKANSAS—

A note in passing that appeared in The Traveler:

"Thirty-seven South Dakota State students squeezed into an outhouse here Tuesday to claim a new world's record. The students said they will sit on their laurels and let the nation challenge them."

We didn't know they were called "laurels."

A&M—

From The Battalion:
 "A 1959 version of TV's Paladin stalked the campus Sunday night, seeking revenge over evil-doers. It began Sunday at noon when a senior accidentally got a blot of catsup on a freshman's white shirt. Someone at the table suggested the fish get revenge.

"He did. The senior woke up when a cold can of water hit him in the face. The senior chased his villain but never caught him. He returned to his room to find tacked on his door—

"Have Can—Will Travel. Wire Fish . . . Dorm 2."

Words fail at this point.

THE SCORE

Of Grapes and Gaul

By PAT BECKHAM

Of course, the Yankee publicists hate us! They still think they won the Civil War.

Sour grapes and no burnt offerings—let's throw away the humble pie. I fully agree with a recent letter to the editor published in The Skiff; the Southwest has been and still is being coarsely snobbed.

Yeah, yeah, sure—only a few years back it was unheard of for a "genuine" All-America to come from these parts. Now there's one every year in football, and the same number each decade in basketball.

It's a big country, someone else mumbles. Sure it's big, and so's the Southwest. And where do you think the states around us who don't have much in the way of athletes come for their hosses? Right to Texas. Texas has the best, keeps the cream and exports as much good male stock as the best of the other states have in the beginning.

Yet when the Northern magazines (pulp and slick) pick their All-America high school football and basketball teams, who makes the grade? Oh, a boy from these parts occasionally, but the Yankee publicists know on which side their subscriptions are buttered.

When the All-America college teams are chosen, who do you have to know to make 'em. Why, the Yankee publicists, who else?

In the spring of 1955, for example, one Richard O'Neal, a TCU cager who still owns most of the Southwest Conference records, was a sophomore.

O'Neal set the all-time national scoring record (since broken by Wilt the Stilt) for a season for a sophomore. Not only that, he broke the SWC 3-year scoring record in TWO years.

Of course, you say, he must have been a consensus All-America choice. Nope! Well, then, first team? Nope! Second? Nope!

As a matter of fact, the 6-7 wonder-worker was never above all-conference. He was only the best thing this conference ever produced in scoring, rebounding and teamwork, too, probably. Still, he didn't know enough of the voters. Had he been a Yankee or a Negro, he'd have been a cinch choice.

The story goes on and on. Only the names have been changed to avoid an NCAA inquest.

In 1955 they had to pick Jim Swink All-America in football. It would have been embarrassing not to have the nation's leading scorer on the team.

But the following year, when Swink was doing just as important a job, but wasn't breaking records, he was overlooked.

And, while we're groping from that farthest bunch on the top of the vine:

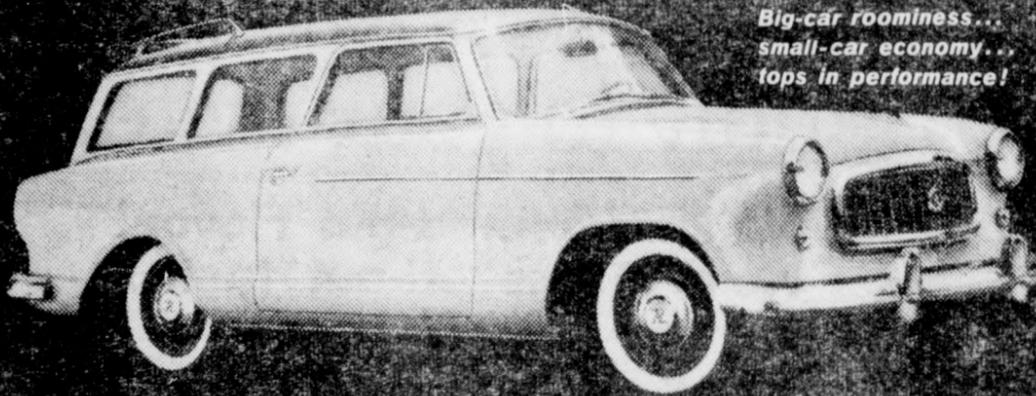

Miss Gayle Meyer, TCU's candidate for one of the nation's 10 best-dressed women, wasn't listed in the national magazine's recent release. But, for the first time, ever, an East Texas State College girl was listed as the nineteenth honorable mention.

Big Hickories From Little Seedlings

Mid-Week REPORT

By BOB SCHIEFFER

Baseball, like they used to say about Hitler, ain't dead.

But the grand old game is letting out some mighty painful groans these days, and before it's over it might find itself on the same detour the dodo bird took several years back.

Maverick, air conditioning and major league T-Viewing in the minor league towns have left the minors to suffer in their own silent parks.

Daily, the big, fat-faced men with the big fat cigars put their feet on the rims of big, fat tables and try to figure out what the trouble is and they wonder how long it will be that the sport can survive. In fact, they wonder how much longer they'll be able to afford the big, fat cigars.

But they won't save baseball—nope. The one who'll save it, if they give him a chance, is my little brother, Tommy. Tommy's not a financial wizard. He's a freckle-faced, red-headed 12-year-old.

He won't do it alone, but he and a million like him might, because they participate in the only branch of baseball that's doing worth a hoot these days—the Little Leagues.

While down on the hill, the TCU Frogs are showing their wares before three or four people, and the Fort Worth Cats are maybe attracting a Sunday afternoon crowd of 25 or 30, the little guys are filling their stands up in more than a dozen parks around town.

Kids like Tom don't play on the sandlots any more. They have their own specially made little uniforms, cut-down parks with real signboard fences, public address systems and dugouts.

Every detail is scaled down from the big leagues, even the players' tempers. I saw one boy booted out of a ball game because he raised such a fuss with the umpire (but that doesn't happen often; usually it's the parents fighting). But the kids play hard and they love the game. The big operators don't realize it, but take away those kids and you take away the last chance for organized ball.

Why? Simply because there is nothing else the kids can do after they finish Little League. Sure, there are a few organized teams

CUPID TACKLES EX-FOOTBALLER

Ex-Frog Football Captain Joe Williams and Miss Jerry Lee Adle were married last weekend.

Williams, 3-year letterman for the Frogs, was a member of the Scholastic All-America football team.

Both are graduates of TCU. Williams majored in geology and Miss Adle majored in education.

The couple will live in Greenville.

along the way, but the setting is gone.

Since Dad had rather curl up in front of the TV than take the kid out to see the local team play, the boy's interest soon wanes.

They won't get to play, either, when they reach junior high—no teams there. High school? The baseball programs at that level are little more than a joke. Coaches draw straws to see who gets stuck with the baseball assignment and the teams are clad in shabby uniforms to perform on some weed patch behind the gym.

College? They make an effort, but lack of support has made baseball a non-paying proposition there, too.

Let's suppose the high school or college gets a fair to middling ballplayer, somebody exciting enough to make the fans want to come out. What happens? The big guys (remember the ones with the cigars?) step in and sign the kid to a pro contract. Many times, that leaves the college with a ragamuffin bunch, and that leaves the pros, some of the time, with an inexperienced boy who didn't develop. Their team flounders and that puts us right back where we started.

Baseball ain't dead but the musicians are warming up in the bullpen for the funeral dirge.

What's the remedy? Promotions, TV or no TV, clowns, family nights or glamorizing the old game into something like the Monday night rassling?

So far, that's what our big, fat friends have come up with.

But that, as the fellow here on campus says, "won't get the job done."

Something's got to be done to keep 'em interested until they are old enough to have a few dollars in their pockets.

Sooner or later, the big guys are going to realize that for the big leagues to survive, the minors must survive—also the college teams, the high school teams, and the sandlot teams.

Before that's done, the kids in high school are going to have to get good coaches and decent playing fields and something other than that hand-me-down equipment.

The major league scouts are going to have to get together and decide to leave the college boys alone until they have had a chance to play out their eligibility.

Those little fellows won't all be major leaguers, but most of them will have the price of a baseball ticket in their pockets and a heck of a lot of 'em would be willing to spend it on baseball, if they were still interested.

But you can't re-interest them. It's something that has to grow, and it can't grow as long as the big guys continue to run over the little guys.

It seems to me that this is the place where the big guys had better start re-evaluating—at the bottom, not the top.

But hark, fat-faced cigar-smoking big guys—there in the distance, the faint rumbling drum-drum-drum of the funeral dirge and the pound of feet as the funeral group moves closer.

Baseball ain't dead, big guys, but the black angel's hoverin' mighty close by.

FROGS TAKE BREATHERS WITH CATS THURSDAY

GARDEN WARDENS — Coach Rabbit McDowell will again be depending on the batting power and defensive ability of outfielders (l-r) Jim Walker, I. B.

Childs and Marshall Harris when the Frogs play Sam Houston State in Huntsville tomorrow in a nonconference game.

By BOB SCHIEFFER

The beleaguered Frog baseball team gets time off from hectic family wars tomorrow when they meet Sam Houston State Teachers College in a nonconference game at Huntsville.

Game time is 2:30 p.m.

While the game won't count in conference standings, the Purple will have their hands full with the cagey Bearcats, who hold the distinction of having beaten every SWC member they have played this season.

Frog Coach Rabbit McDowell says he'll go with the same lineup of Doug Moore or Bob Newton behind the plate, Hunter Enis at first, Charles Franklin at second, Bennett Shotwell at third and George Banda at short.

I. B. Childs, Marshall Harris and Jimmy Walker will round out the Frog club in the outfield.

Franklin and Banda, a couple of pint-sized base runners, lead the club with stolen bases.

Most of the Frog power, meanwhile, has come from the bat of Harris.

The Frogs moved into second place in club hitting with the aid of Harris' big stick in the Baylor series.

Afield, the Frogs have built a sturdy wall of defense. They have a fielding average of .973, tops in conference play. Texas is next with a .959 average.

Harris and Franklin, through Saturday's game, pace the Purples in total bases, each collecting 13.

McDowell hasn't named his starter for the Sam Houston game in Huntsville, but he will likely call upon one of three hurlers who have seen limited action this year.

Merle Littlefield, Allan Lawrence or Bob Shelton will be tabbed to open the nonconference clash.

By using one of the three, McDowell will have his usual starters, Charles Rutherford or Darrel Read, ready for the Rice series, after a week's rest. Rode Gonzales could also get the call.

Read and Rutherford have shown remarkable improvement in their last outings.

Read pitched a 11-0 shutout against Baylor and allowed only 6 hits in the rout.

Rutherford came back the next day and yielded only four safeties, but the powerless Frogs lost, 6-1, to the Bears.

Tennis Team Looking Up From Cellar

A pair of unlikely bedfellows found themselves mired together in last place this week in SWC tennis.

TCU and Texas A&M, both without a victory in family play, were at the bottom of the heap in statistics released from the conference office, as Rice and Texas lead the loop with perfect 6-0 marks.

The Christians and Aggies have both dropped 12 matches.

Texas Tech, the workhorse, with 18 matches under its belt, was in second place with 15 wins and three losses.

Baylor, with a 6-6 record, is in fourth place, and SMU, who has won half of its six matches, is in fifth place.

Tech's Bob Maces and Danny Scales are both undefeated in singles matches and lead the league in that department.

Charles Meisinger and Scales teamed in doubles play to post an unblemished mark in three matches—also best in the conference.

Five teams are deadlocked in second place with one victory and no losses.

Harris Pulls Away From SWC Hitters; Posts .485 Average

Marshall Harris has moved into the SWC individual hitting lead as he attempts to capture the title he missed last year by only one at-bat. Harris' average is .485.

The Jacksonville junior hit seven safeties in his nine trips to the plate in a 2-game series with Baylor.

Last season the Frog outfielder displayed a similar mid-season surge but missed the title by one time at bat. To qualify for the conference hitting crown, a player must have 25 official times at bat.

Harris lost the slugging title to Texas' Max Alvis, who signed a professional contract with Cleveland at the close of the season.

He has been at bat 29 official times this year and his closest competitor is Texas A&M's Gary Herrington, last week's leader, hitting at a .455 clip.

Harris will have an opportunity for nonconference batting practice Thursday when the Frogs meet Sam Houston State College in Huntsville. Harris gets back in the conference batting race in Houston Friday when the Frogs meet Rice for a 2-game series.

The soft-spoken Harris, who hits from the left side, boosted the Frogs' team-hitting average to .250. A&M is leading the loop with a .283 average.

We're Doing OK, Say Recruiters

Football Coach Abe Martin told reporters this week that the Frogs are holding their own in the recruiting war.

"If you go by what's in the papers," he said, "then I guess the Aggies have signed the most of 'em. But you can't always go by that."

"So far, we're pretty well satisfied. Things have been pretty well spread out."

Martin and his helpers are concentrating on beef for the front lines, and have devoted most of their efforts to finding promising guards and tackles.

COODY . . . out of rough

Golfers Relax First; Then Tackle 'Horns

By JOHN SHIELDS

Coach Tom Prouse's golfing Frogs have edged themselves into a 2-point lead in the SWC chase and now they take a 6-day vacation from the family warfare before their final match with Texas next Tuesday.

The Frogs have been running a close second all season, but with Texas Tech idle until Saturday, Prouse's "best team in years" lashed defending Arkansas Monday, 6-0, to move up a notch.

Prior to the change in leaders, Tech had played more matches than TCU, netting the Lubbock Raiders the top rung in the conference's championship ladder.

Now with six days to uncoil from three matches in the last five days, the Frogs will prepare for their final thrust to insure the conference crown hanging low above their heads.

Although the team proper will be closing play for the year, the match won't be the last for the Christians' two senior aces, Don Massengale and Charles Coody.

They will compete May 7-8 in the SWC Tournament at College Station. The No. 1 and 2 men from each school compete in the annual affair which Massengale won last year.

Observers are already labeling Massengale as the man to beat in this year's meet, but they also believe that if he should be toppled from his perch, the man most likely to do it is Coody.

Both have been playing exceptionally well this season as the Frogs remained in the thick of contention for the championship.

It's been the improved playing of Coody, however, that started fans talking. The husky swinger has been called "the most improved golfer in the league." While Coody has shown such a change, the cautious Massengale has continued his same conservative game.

The two teammates play an entirely different brand of golf.

Coody hits the ball with a lot of power and depends on his new-found prowess with the putter. Massengale is the short-iron, or approach golfer. He'll seldom take the chances Coody does.

But it's this methodical, consistent game that Don plays that has ground opponents under for four years.

Together, they formed the strongest 1-2 combination in the league.
