TCU Nursery Pre-Schoolers Plan Picnic

Pre-school children from the University's Nursery School and their parents will have a field day at the school's annual closing day picnic on May 29. The outing will be held at the picnic grounds of Colonial Country Club.

"When parents are given the opportunity to learn more about the school, we feel we are able to do a much better job with the child," Mrs. Mayra Huffhines, director of the school, explained. Parents are given the chance to know their own child better through observations."

To promote further experience away from the school, the pre-schoolers recently took a two-hour train trip.

Parents, teachers and home economics students accompanied the children on an excursion to Cleburne and back. About 700 children from PTA pre-schools in Fort Worth attended.

Planned as a special project by Ida Morris, Fort Worth senior and home economics student, the trip was made on a new Santa Fe "two-decker" Streamliner.

"We estimated we would need 10 paper cups for water for each child and we used every one of them," Mrs. Huffhines recounted.

Corinthian architecture is characterized by columns, usually elaborately fluted or carved.

Semester's Top News Reflects Controversy

Skiff headliner stories for the spring semester have reflected the progress and controversy that have characterized the turbulent period from February to May.

In February, the University's adoption of a Ph.D. program in chemistry was announced by Chancellor M. E. Sadler. Beginning in September the program will be the sixth such program in Texas and the first in the North Texas area.

Also in February, 50 students participated in a "sitout" demonstration seeking Sunday hours for Mary Couts Burnett Library. But it all proved needless when it was learned the next day that the Faculty Library Committee already had voted to open the library on Sundays starting next fall.

March brought the announcement of a five-year plan for the establishment of the TCU Research Foundation, involving an investment of approximately $5 million. Under this project, every undergraduate department of the University will be strengthened.

Also that month, University trustees authorized the levying of fees up to $10 for parking on campus. The move was made as a result of traffic and parking problems which have been becoming more acute every year.

Campus-wide elections were held in March. The result was the election of Mark Wassenich, Fort Worth junior, as Student Congress president.

The race for the three women cheerleader positions faced possible invalidation when a protest was filed over primary elections. Student Court later upheld the election.

The panty raid on women's dormitories by several hundred TCU males created quite a stir in April. Picketing of downtown theatres by several students for the integration of those theatres also spruced-up the headlines.

The announcement that construction is expected to start in September for dormitory-type housing for fraternities and sororities on the Worth Hills golf course location was big news. The first two buildings to be built on that sight will have a combined capacity of 550 to 750 students.

Already in May, further progress has been exemplified in the reorganization of Ampersand, senior women's honor society based on scholarship, leadership and service. Founded in 1932, Ampersand became inactive in 1945, during World War II.

Most recently the TCU Frogs tied for the Southwest Conference baseball championship, with their best conference record in history.

Fort Worth senior Judy Tkac pines thoughts of finals, graduation and such out of her mind and just thinks about the carefree days of summer ahead. Like the rest of us, however, Miss Tkac will be snapped back to reality when finals begin.

Academic Gowns Traced To Early British Tradition

Traditions are the roots of any college or university, and tradition of academic dress for faculty at exercises originated in the earliest days of the oldest universities.

The information was brought to light in a recent pamphlet published by the American Council on Education (ACE) dealing with academic costume and ceremony. As early as 1321, the University of Coimbra in England required professors to wear gowns. In the 17th century both Cambridge and Oxford made academic dress a matter of university control to the extent of even its minor details.

It is not known if robes had their beginnings in church or civilian custom. They may have been worn for warmth in the unheated buildings—hoods were first used to cover shaven heads of the scholars. They were followed by the skull caps. Today the scholars wear the mortarboard-type head-dress.

Some representatives from United States colleges and universities held a meeting at Columbia University to establish regulations for American academic costume and ceremony. The regulations were revised in 1932.

In 1959 a committee of the ACE made further changes. These changes applied only to articles manufactured after publication of the revised code. All articles in existence at that time which met the requirements of the 1932 code could be used as long as they were in good condition.

Here are some of the rules today on costume: gowns will be black (with some permissible exceptions); the bachelors' gowns will have pointed sleeves, the masters' and doctors', open or fastened. The bachelors' and masters' gowns have no trimming; the doctors' dress is faced down the front in velvet with three bars across the sleeves.

Trimmings of doctors' gowns, edging of hoods and tassels of caps are to be of a color associated with the subjects in which the degree is held.

Examples of some of the colors used: education, light blue; fine arts, brown; philosophy, dark blue; science, golden yellow and law, purple.

Cotton material is used for the bachelors' gowns and the masters' gowns also are cotton; the doctors', rayon or silk-ribbed.

garet Mosshart, Marie Stitt and Zuma Davis.

Mrs. Ball and Miss McLendon have supervised residence halls for more than 18 years, while the others have from seven to nine years of service.

Three other faculty members who are leaving the University will be recognized. They are Col. Marion Felt, Army ROTC commander; Major Zane Brewer, Air Force ROTC commander; and Reuben B. Norman, who has been teaching in the School of Education since 1961.

Miss Enlow joined the faculty in 1924 and has headed the Home Economics Department since then.

Miss Major was appointed assistant professor of English in 1919. She is the author of several books, an expert on Southwest literature and is co-editor of "Descant," the University's literary magazine.

Candlelight Dinner Final Faculty Social

Thirteen members of the University faculty and staff, including four veterans who have spent more than 40 years on campus, will be honored at a Candlelight Dinner at 6:30 p.m. tonight in Student Center Ballroom.

The event will conclude the faculty social program for the school year.

Assistant Chancellor Amos W. Melton will present Trustee Citations for long and distinguished service to L. R. (Dutch) Meyer, athletic director; Bonnie Enlow, chairman of the Home Economics Department; Mabel Major, professor of English; and Mary Elizabeth Williams, director of social activities. All will retire this summer.

Six retiring dormitory hostesses also will be honored. They are Catherine Ball, Alma McLendon, Lillian Henderson, Mar-

University Chemists Help Fight Disease

BY MIKE MILLIGAN

One of the great breakthroughs in medical science has been made quietly and with little fanfare right here at TCU.

In an exclusive announcement to The Skiff, Dr. Joe E. Hodgkins, associate professor of chemistry, revealed he has perfected with the aid of several graduate students, a synthetic chemical that will arrest the dread eye disease, glaucoma, number one source of blindness.

Working over the past three years with patience and perseverance, Dr. Hodgkins has conducted innumerable experiments with rabbits to assure that he wasn't following a false lead. The end product is of momentous importance to sufferers of glaucoma, commonly known as hardening of the eyeballs.

"Our chemical isn't a new product, really," he explained, "but a synthesis of an old one. But the earlier medicine is both costly and rare, while ours will be much cheaper to produce and available in quantity."

There are several million people in the U.S. affected with the disease, who will be affected by the discovery, said Dr. Hodgkins.

"Until now the only source of the chemical has been a particular kind of tree in South America, and if that part of the world went Communist it wouldn't be difficult to foresee our supply cut off," Dr. Hodgkins speculated.

"Now, however, we're no longer dependent on the older remedy."

He emphasized that the new drug is not a cure, but rather retards the development of the disease.

It will be marketed in the form of eye drops by the Alcon Laboratories in Fort Worth, which has materially supported the whole project.

Steps have been taken to patent the process by which the glaucoma drug is produced.

Dr. Hodgkins was aided in his research by Tai Chun Cheng and Don Johnson, both graduate students of chemistry.

University To Graduate About 640

It's cap and gown time again and a proud day for about 640 graduating seniors as they will don the mortarboard on May 29.

The number of grads is an "all-time record, exceeding last year's by eight or 10," according to Amos Melton, assistant chancellor.

Commencement is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in Daniel-Meyer Coliseum. The event will open with a procession, with the TCU Symphony directed by Dr. Ralph R. Guenther providing the music.

Chancellor M. E. Sadler and the platform party will lead the procession, followed by close to 200 faculty members and the graduates in full regalia, Melton explained.

Dr. Harry Hunt Ransom, chancellor of the University of Texas, will deliver the commencement address. He also will be awarded an honorary degree to be presented by Melton.

Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs, Dr. James M. Moudy will present the Class of '63 and Chancellor Sadler will award the degrees.

The names of the students from each of TCU's eight colleges will be called by the dean of that college.

Events leading up to commencement will include a traditional Baccalaureate service at 8 p.m. May 26 in Ed Landreth Auditorium. Distinguished Methodist leader, Bishop Martin of Dallas, will speak.

Don't Forget Annual Fee

Seniors and students not returning to TCU don't forget to have your 1963 Horned Frog mailed to you!

Students must pay $1 to cover mailing charges in the journalism office, 116 Dan D. Rogers Hall, before May 29.

Annuals will be mailed from the publishing company after Sept. 1.

Thank You, Dutch

After a 45-year career in TCU's Athletic Department "Old Iron Pants" is ready to become a fan.

On June 1, L. R. (Dutch) Meyer will retire as athletic director and "go with the ducks—south in the winter and north in the summer."

It is hard to imagine the Dutchman as simply a fan. Since he became water boy for the Frog football team in 1909, the histories of the University and Meyer have been inseparably intertwined.

Dutch has become a symbol of TCU and its athletic program. He has always been a stickler for high character and honesty. These traits carried him through a successful career as a player and carried over into his days as coach and athletic director.

He and his teams have been a credit to the University. As an undergraduate Dutch won 11 varsity letters and was chosen captain three times.

Under Meyer, the Frogs won three Southwest Conference football titles. His teams were noted for being able to spring the big upset when cast in the underdog role. In 1936, TCU won 11 straight games and captured the national championship.

He retired from coaching in 1953 to devote full time to his duties as athletic director. But there was plenty of kick left in "Old Iron Pants." In 1956 he agreed to return to coach baseball and responded by winning the conference crown.

Meyer has received the highest honors his profession can bestow. He has been named to the National Football, Helms Foundation and Texas Sports Hall of Fame.

The University has paid tribute to his contributions by naming a fine coliseum for him.

But the most important tribute Dutch Meyer has received is the thanks he has gotten from the many people whose lives he has influenced.

We say farewell to Dutch, wishing him well and thanking him for the many contributions he has made to the University and its students.

MICKEY MOUSE

TCU has long been known as a "Mickey Mouse" institution. The recent action of the administration in regard to the Young Conservative Club's efforts to strengthen the Conservative cause on campus is a case in point.

The administration, through the Committee on Student Organizations, and the Office of the Vice Chancellor for Student Life, chose to ignore the mandate of over two-thirds of the members of the club who had voted to merge.

The committee and the vice chancellor used as their grounds for disallowing the democratic process the allegation that the clubs seemed to have different purposes. (Query: Is not the purpose of a club best determined by its members?) Furthermore, the administration interfered with the activity of the club through condoning and encouraging the militant minority to disregard the club's constitution and eliminate from membership the majority of those who voted for the merger.

TCU can never escape the "Mickey Mouse" image until the administration realizes that college students are capable of managing their own affairs. Until the administration recognizes student rights in this area, all student organizations will be placed in the position of being unable to govern themselves; and all TCU students will be subjected to remaining "Mousketeers".

Opinions From Readers

AGAINST UN BILL

I commend you for supporting Representative Howard Green's comments on a pending piece of legislation which would prohibit the display of the flag or emblem of the United Nations on public buildings in Texas.

I believe it would be a worthwhile effort for many of the advocates of the United Nations to voice their opposition to their state representatives.

This would be their contribution to fostering the harmony of nations.

Morris Hores

THANKS FROM MARK

I would like to express my appreciation to the student body for honoring me with the office of president. Special thanks certainly goes to those who worked so hard in my behalf; without their help little could have been accomplished. Recognition should also go to all those who participated in the campaigns and elections. The maturity shown by my opponents and by all major office candidates does credit to both them and to TCU.

The student body has chosen many capable representatives from many areas of the campus. There is great potential in the new congress for creative and significant action in the student interest that will contribute to a better TCU.

This is just the beginning; the effort and determination that was shown in this campaign will carry on into the office of president. The congress and I are going to work hard; however, without the support of the student body little can be done. With this support we can work together toward improved student activities and government. On this note of optimistic anticipation let us begin the preparations for next year.

Mark Wassenick

OFFERS ADVICE

As the potential survivor of four years at this particular institution of higher learning, it occurs to me that the underclassmen here have not been properly informed about some of the essential ground rules required for a long-term existence and/or happiness here. As a senior, I would like to pass on a few simple "don'ts" concerning rules and regulations (especially recent ones) to those who want to squeeze out a degree with a minimum of ethical scars as well as intellectual, scars.

1. Don't use empty liquor bottles as dorm decorations, whether you drank what was in them or not. Of course, it is perfectly permissible to go two and a half blocks off campus and drink but don't bring visual proof back.

2. Don't sing the word "damn" in the Student Center. Of course, you can say anything you like (since everyone else does), but if you feel the urge to sing, go to the library and check out The Tropic of Cancer or Lady Chatterly's Lover. This should provide an outlet for your baser emotions.

I do hope these few little rules will help the adjustment rate on campus. It bothers me to see so many non-conformists among us, but I'm sure that in time, apathy and censorship will overcome this, if we all work hard for it.

Institute's Future Plans Discussed by Council

The Advisory Council of the Institute of Behavioral Research met Thursday and Friday to review accomplishments and make future plans.

The institute, directed by Dr. Paul B. Sells, professor of psychology, seeks to advance knowledge in the areas of human behavior.

The advisory council is staffed by Vice Chancellor James Moudy, associate Dean Sandy Wall of the Graduate School and Director of the Institute.

Dr. Winton H. Manning, associate professor of psychology, and Dr. John Wortham, professor of economics, also are on the council.

In addition three members-at-large chosen from outstanding scholars and scientists round out the council. These are: Dr. Phillip H. DuBois, professor of psychology at Washington University in St. Louis, Dr. Robert M.W. Travers, director of the Bureau of Educational Research at the University of Utah, and Dr. Robert T. Watson, professor of psychology at Northwestern University.

Dr. Watson was unable to attend the meeting.

22 Army ROTC Cadets Will Get Commissions

The U.S. Army will commission 22 Army ROTC cadets at 2 p.m. May 29 in the faculty lounge in the Student Center. Col. Marion Felt, professor of military science, will administer the oath. Those to be commissioned are: Albert D. Couts, Samuel H. Cox, Charles E. Farrar, Thomas J. Rrazier, Robert H. Gilliland Jr., Lawrence M. Hynson, Jon S. Jewell, Neven M. Kensel, Joe A. Lewis, Malcolm S. Magers and John L. Massengill Jr.

regular Army commissions each year.

"The reason for this is the increased emphasis that the Army is placing on acquirement of men in high technical skills, particularly in areas of mathematics, engineering and physics."

Friends of the cadets and faculty members are invited to attend the commission ceremonies, Captain Hutter said.

Others Listed

Also William E. Moore, Howard Morgan Jr., James C. Neely, Thur R. Reece Jr., Johnnie L. Reynolds, Carl R. Schneider, Woodlea B. Sconyers, Cecil L. Tupper, F. Howard Walsh Jr., James W. Whitehead and Terry Wilkes.

"This is the largest group of commissionees in the history of my ROTC at TCU and from toward appearances, next year promises to produce an even larger number of commissioned officers," said Capt. James L. Hutter, assistant professor of military science.

More Being Commissioned

Captain Hutter added, "It is interesting to note that a greater number of cadets are accepting

Trend Continues: Women To Outnumber TCU Men

What seems to be a trend toward women outnumbering men at TCU is still continuing, according to Mrs. Anna Byrd Wallace, assistant registrar for admissions.

"The girls have the boys beat with 702 applications for admission this fall," she said. Applications from 458 freshmen men have been received, she added. "At the present rate of applications the ratio of girls to boys at TCU probably will be greater next year," she said.

Mrs. Wallace said that as of May 6, TCU has had 1,467 applications for fall enrollment. There were 1,433 applications for a similar period last year.

Of the 1,467 applications submitted, 1,160 were for freshmen and 307 for transfers.

The application figures for last year were 1,151 and 282 respectively.

Applications for the 1963-1964 summer school sessions are up 16 per cent, Mrs. Wallace said.

Four out-of-town applicants for TCU's summer high school program have been approved but others are pending, she said. Last year there were 13 applicants.

High school students in the upper 25 per cent of their classes and who are between junior and senior class rank may apply. Applicants who are accepted may enroll in such courses as algebra, chemistry, religion and theatre arts.

TCU Students Find Jobs

Six Flags Park Experiences Invasion of the College Kids

"Invasion of the college kids," 1200 strong, comes to Six Flags Over Texas every summer until Labor Day.

These aren't the sight-seeing type, but rather the working students who seek summer employment at the popular tourist attraction in Arlington three months out of the year.

Six Flags provides a never-ending number of "odd" jobs for students who want not only economic income, but also a chance to "have a ball."

The majority of employees come from TCU, Arlington State College and SMU, since Six Flags is centrally located between Fort Worth and Dallas.

TO GET A job, students first fill out application blanks. Then

Beauty Presented By Lambda Chi

Nancy Sharpe, Abilene freshman, was presented as sweetheart of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity at its White Rose Formal at Wedgwood Country Club recently.

Jim Laurence, Fort Worth senior, was named outstanding member. The "Blackball" award for the active who has helped the pledges most, went to Dudley Beaven, Corpus Christi junior.

Ulrich was selected 'best pledge.'

August 23 Last Date For Turning in Locks

All lockers in the Student Center must be cleared and locks turned in to the Business Office by the end of the second summer term, Aug. 23.

At this time students may obtain their $1 refund on locker deposits. After Aug. 23, all contents will be removed and locks will be changed for the fall semester, a spokesman for the Business Office said.

Students who are not planning to attend summer school should turn in their locks by May 29. The deposit receipt must accompany the lock in order for students to obtain the refund.

they are interviewed by Bob Stevens, personnel director, who places them where they are needed.

The minimum pay per student is $1.15 an hour. Those who have worked at the attraction during previous summers earn a slightly higher salary.

All employees are provided with uniforms which are cleaned for them every two days. They are issued identification cards that allow them to "ride the rides" free, while not in uniform.

They also have a small lounge and a place to buy food slightly cheaper than at the public snack counters.

After the students have worked at Six Flags for a month, they are given a free family pass.

JUDI HARMOUNT, Fort Worth freshman, who has already begun her ticket selling job, says that "working at Six Flags is a lot of fun. All the kids are friendly, and you have a chance to meet students from other colleges."

She noted that the number of people who pass through the gates each day are recorded by the ticket takers. The figures range from 9,000 to 11,000 tourists daily, with some 25,000 on the weekends.

New Student Group Is Labeled CESCO

A recently organized student service group, earlier referred to in The Skiff as citizenship committee, got a new name and an official purpose last week during a meeting in the Student Center.

Susie Murrin, new president of the organization, said it will be called the Collegiate Educational Service Corps.

It will be nicknamed CESCO. The group, still in the founding stage, grew from an idea developed by Miss Elizabeth Youngblood, student social director. Its first meeting was called in mid-April. About twenty students and faculty members attended.

Purpose Cited

Cited as the main purpose of CESCO was fulfillment of a need for some sort of plan wherein students might serve their community while learning more about human troubles outside TCU. Such a purpose would be realized by using interested student volunteers to fill various service positions throughout Tarrant County.

Formally, the purpose of CESCO is as follows:

"The Collegiate Education Service Corps is established as an organized expression of TCU student concern and sense of individual responsibility for the development of citizens through a program of education by voluntary participation through service in community affairs."

CESCO, which has at least one counterpart in a similar program involving 700 students at Columbia University, is unique in the fact that it will be as much devoted to student education as to service.

It is felt by present members that hundreds of students here would be interested in learning what problems actually face them as tomorrow's citizens. In CESCO, devoting one afternoon a week to service, they learn just that.

Service Opportunities

Among the service opportunities which will be available to participating students are positions in children's hospitals, county court rooms, rehabilitation centers, etc. The entire range of services is divided into four general categories: social welfare, education, government and health.

Those students interested in CESCO will be given application blanks this summer and early next fall. The program will get underway, officially, in September.

Also required for participation will be a 2.0 grade average and an interview with the committee.

Student Congress last week indicated full support of the new program by voting $500 for completion of early plans, research and the summer publication of a special CESCO brochure.

Theatre Students Offer Dramatics

Studio performances of four separate works directed by students in the Department of Theatre Arts were presented last night in the Little Theatre.

John Gaston, Fort Worth senior, was in charge of the production of "The Celebration" by Anton Chekhov. "The Last of the Lowries" by Paul Greene was directed by Barbara Hutson, Odesa senior.

Jack Rader, Fort Worth senior, prepared an act from "The House of Bernarda Alba" by Federico Garcia Lorca. Edna Spinks, Menard senior, was in charge of "Adam's Rib Hurts" by John Kirkpatrick.

The performances were required for acting and directing classes.

'Prof of Year' Has Hectic Day But 'Loves Teaching' Anyway

Besides being sponsor of three campus organizations, being a father of three sons and working on his doctoral dissertation, Howard G. Wible Jr., named "Prof of the Year" last week, still finds time to teach and says, "I enjoy it."

Wible, an assistant professor of business administration, was awarded a plaque at the Activities Council Awards Banquet for "having done the most to aid students both in and out of the classroom" during the 1962-1963 school year.

Wible is faculty adviser to the Young Republicans, Young Conservatives, and Delta Sigma Pi, national business fraternity. He was a sponsor of the Baptist Student Union last semester.

A member of the Student Conduct Committee, Wible also has participated in past Student Congress leadership retreats.

He Likes Students

"I like working with students," Wible said. "I feel that education

Shumaker Receives Scholarship

Glenda Shumaker, Dallas junior, has added her name to the list of scholarship winners for this academic year.

Miss Shumaker has been awarded the annual King's Daughters and Sons Chataqua Institute Scholarship for Texas. She will attend the institute in Chataqua, N.Y., July 1 to Aug. 12, to study the organization's work.

As one of 52 coeds chosen to attend, she will attend religious classes sponsored by Syracuse University.

She is a member of Phi Chi Theta, honorary business sorority, and after graduation she plans to enter King's Daughters work in the Dallas area.

Coupons are good for performances on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday evenings and for Saturday matinees.

has a moral and spiritual value that today's student needs to come to grips with."

Wible is the father of three sons: Howard III (nicknamed "Speedy") age 11; Danny, age 10, and Mark, 8.

"My family is my hobby," the professor said. "We're all rabid basketball fans and we go to all of the games."

Wible came to TCU in 1958 after working for six years as business manager and as director of education at the University Baptist Church at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md.

Before that, Wible was a personnel manager for the General Electric Corp.

Youth Presents Challenge

I left there to work with students," he explained.

He said he enjoys his work with young people, because of the challenge they present.

"The thrill I get out of working with students is in seeing them discover a new concept or truth and make it a part of their lives."

Wible said he likes to see students "find themselves" and to help them give their lives to something they can be proud of.

"This is why I find working in a church related school so significant," he declared.

"There is a greater need for students to know the faculty outside of the classroom and there are opportunities where this can be realized," he emphasized.

Of the "Prof of the Year" award Wible said, "it is a real honor... a distinct honor which I hope I'll be able to live up to."

Wible has worked with Religious Emphasis Week Committees and has helped it select speakers for the activity. He is also the TCU student representative for the Harvard Business School and is a Danforth Associate.

TILL WE MEET AGAIN

With today's installment I complete my ninth year of writing columns in your college newspaper for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes. In view of the occasion, I hope I may be forgiven if I get a little misty.

These nine years have passed like nine minutes. In fact, I would not believe that so much time has gone by except that I have my wife nearby as a handy reference. When I started columning for Marlboros, she was a slip of a girl—supple as a reed and fair as the sunrise. Today she is gnarled, lumpy, and given to biting the postman. Still, I count myself lucky. Most of my friends who were married at the same time have wives who chase cars all day. I myself have never had this trouble and I attribute my good fortune to the fact that I have never struck my wife with my hand. I have always used a folded newspaper—even throughout the prolonged newspaper strike in New York. During this period I had the airmail edition of the Manchester Guardian flown in daily from England. I must confess, however, that it was not entirely satisfactory. The airmail edition of the Guardian is printed on paper so light and flimsy that it makes little or no impression when one slaps one's wife. Mine, in fact, thought it was some kind of game, and tore several pairs of my trousers.

But I digress. I was saying what a pleasure it has been to write this column for the last nine years for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes—a fine group of men, as anyone who has sampled their wares would suspect. They are as mellow as the aged tobaccos they blend. They are as pure as the white cellulose filter they have devised. They are loyal, true, companionable, and constant, and I have never for an instant wavered in my belief that some day they will pay me for these last nine years.

But working for the makers of Marlboro has not been the greatest of my pleasures over the last nine years. The chief satisfaction has been writing for you—the college population of America. It is a rare and lucky columnist who can find an audience so full of intelligence and verve. I would like very much to show my appreciation by asking you all over to my house for tea and oatmeal cookies, but there is no telling how many of you my wife would bite.

For many of you this is the last year of college. This is especially true for seniors. To those I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will find the world outside a happy valley. To juniors I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will become seniors. To sophomores I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will become juniors. To freshmen I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will become sophomores. To those of you going on into graduate school I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will marry money.

To all of you let me say one thing: during the year I have been frivolous and funny during the past year—possibly less often than I have imagined—but the time has now come for some serious talk. Whatever your status, whatever your plans, I hope that success will attend your ventures.

Stay happy. Stay loose.

©1963 Max Shulman

We, the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, confess to more than a few nervous moments during the nine years we have sponsored this uninhibited and uncensored column. But in the main, we have had fun and so, we hope, have you. Let us add our good wishes to Old Max's: stay happy; stay loose.

Teacher Placement Office Aids Student to Find Jobs

BY DIANA DUPY

Student teachers get added help at graduation time by the Teacher Placement Office, which aids students as they take the first step out into the big world.

Dr. Leslie P. Evans, director of Teacher Placement, reports that about 315 students graduate each year with a teaching certificate. Two hundred and fifteen will enter secondary work, while 100 will teach in the elementary field. Of the number graduating with certificates, one-third will not enter the teaching field.

Office Keeps Records

Some will get married, others will travel and a portion will enter graduate school, Dr. Evans said. When a student enrolls in the student teaching course, his School of Education record is transferred to the Teacher Placement Office, he explained.

The complete record of the student is kept by the office including biographical information, test records, complete educational record, National Teaching Examination and application for student teaching.

Only members of the teaching placement staff, the University teaching staff and certified personnel officers of employment agencies are allowed to see the files, emphasized Dr. Evans.

The Placement Office will send data on the student to any school district upon request of the student teacher, the school district's request or by recommendation of the School of Education.

Dr. Evans said that most of the students use the Placement Office to obtain jobs. Last year, TCU placed 142 teachers in Texas—54 in elementary schools and 88 in secondary schools. Twenty-nine teachers were placed in out-of-state jobs, thirteen in elementary schools and sixteen in secondary schools.

Secondary teachers were placed in various fields: art, commerce, English, speech, foreign language, home economics, to name only a few. TCU graduates are represented in 47 cities in Texas.

Colorado Schools Popular

Seven students were placed in the Colorado school system. "The past few years students have liked jobs in Colorado because of the glamour, winter sports and friends who have settled there. It was only a few years ago when the big rush was to Arizona," he explained.

Many former graduates and students use the Placement Office. Also, about 50 graduate students use the service.

"TCU does not get the student the job; it merely assists," Dr. Evans emphasized.

Approximately 100 school superintendents, representing every major school district in Texas hold interviews in the Placement Office each year. "We usually have six to eighteen superintendents from California, five from Colorado, three from New York and others from Maryland, New York and Florida," he added.

Became Director in '56

Dr. Evans became director of the Teacher Placement Office in 1956. "At first we didn't have any business because most of the students already had jobs before graduation. There was a great shortage of teachers. Now, there is a shortage of jobs.

"Last year we had all of our people placed by August except five. Those five now have obtained jobs.

The Placement Office has become more important in helping teachers to secure positions," said Dr. Evans.

Senior Wins Silver Medal

John C. Larkin, Fort Worth senior, recently was presented the Wall Street Journal Student Achievement Award.

The award, consisting of an inscribed silver medal and a year's subscription to the Wall Street Journal, is given each spring to a graduating senior in business administration. Only those students who have demonstrated outstanding qualities of scholarship, integrity and leadership are eligible for nomination.

The award was the fourth to be presented.

Larkin, who is a member of "Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges," also is a member of Alpha Chi and is a past president of Alpha Delta Sigma (ADS). In addition, Larkin has received the ADS Outstanding Service Key and the Sowell Scholarship. Last year he placed first in the national advertising and marketing contest sponsored by the House of Edgeworth Tobacco Company.

Another Fort Worth senior, William R. Biggs, has been named recipient of the Delta Sigma Pi Scholarship Key.

Political Factions Feuding

Two conservative factions on campus are embroiled in a feud that started early this semester.

The chief antagonists are Sara Worley and Sam Bostaph vs. Carol Anthony and Jay Hackleman.

Miss Worley is president of the Young Conservatives Club and Bostaph is a member. Hackleman is president of the Young Republicans Club and Miss Anthony is secretary of the GOP group.

Confusing as it may seem, Hackleman also is vice president of the Young Conservatives and Miss Anthony is secretary-treasurer. That is, Hackleman and Miss Anthony think they hold these offices in the conservative club. Miss Worley and Bostaph believe they do not.

Confusion Arises

The confusion arises because the Young Conservatives voted at a meeting early this month to impeach Hackleman and Miss Anthony. But the supposedly impeached pair contended the meeting was illegal and void because neither of them gave consent for it.

According to the conservative club's constitution, the president may call a meeting with the consent of one other member of the executive committee, which is composed of Miss Worley, Hackleman and Miss Anthony. Maybe.

The controversy started in March when Hackleman launched a move to combine the conservative and GOP organizations.

Hackleman contends that the two clubs have similar aims and purposes, that the memberships of each coincide in many cases and that having one club would avoid two sets of dues.

He suggests that the new organization be called the "Conservative Young Republicans' Club of TCU."

Seeks To Dissolve Club

At a meeting of the Young Conservatives on March 14, Hackleman offered a constitutional amendment dissolving the conservative group and organizing the new club. The proposal carried, about 18 to 9.

The real trouble started at this point.

About 12 of the favorable votes were brought to the March 14 meeting by Hackleman as "Absentee ballots."

The Young Conservatives' constitution provides for absentee balloting on constitutional amendments, but Miss Worley contends the 12 votes were actually proxies, not absentee ballots.

Miss Worley said that after the election she became suspicious of the absentee ballots' validity. She appointed two committees: One to draw up a comprehensive and retroactive membership list and the other to determine if the constitutional amendment election was valid.

In the meantime, Hackleman presented his merger proposal to the Committee on Student Organizations, which turned down the idea because "the two organizations were established to serve two distinct purposes, and that these purposes can best be served if the organizations remain separate."

Thus the committee's action April 22 made the merger proposal moot. The feud did not end here, however.

Denies Giving O.K.

Next came the drive to impeach Hackleman and Miss Anthony. Miss Worley says that Miss Anthony gave her consent for a meeting early in May. At the meeting the impeachment motion, by Bostaph, was approved.

Miss Anthony, however, contends that she did not give her consent.

In fact, she says, she expressly refused to approve calling a meeting of the Young Conservatives. Hackleman reports that he heard the telephone conversation between Misses Worley and Anthony and that Miss Anthony refused to okay the meeting.

At the so-called impeachment meeting, Perry Youngblood, representing Miss Anthony and Hackleman, read resignations of the two officers under fire. Youngblood also read a statement by Miss Anthony that she had not consented to the meeting.

Miss Worley ruled that the resignations were read after the motion to impeach had been offered and thus could not be considered until after the impeachment vote. Since it carried, the resignation would be useless.

A conservative meeting was held last week, but a quorum was not present, so nothing official transpired.

Thus the situation stands. Miss Worley and Bostaph say Hackleman and Miss Anthony are no longer officers. Hackleman and Miss Anthony say they are still officers, but wish to resign as soon as possible.

Both sides have hurled numerous charges of dishonesty, harassment and other naughty deeds.

Only one thing seems certain:

There's trouble in the right wing.

Lack of Speed, Inside Scoring Plagued Brannon's Basketballers

"Our big problems this year were the lack of speed and the lack of inside scoring," commented Basketball Coach Buster Brannon on TCU's 1962-63 basketball team.

Brannon, much displeased with his season mark of 4-20 and his conference record of 1-13, named these two factors as the main stumbling blocks to the Frog's showing.

Brannon said the Frogs were hurt badly on the backboards by the inexperience of 6-10 sophomore Archie Clayton. He said that he had planned to redshirt Clayton so he could polish his moves, but he was forced to play him because of the lack of height on the squad.

"I could outrun some of my boys on the court," commented the Frog mentor, on TCU's lack of speed. Brannon said his guards were slower than usual, but the inside men were exceptionally slow.

The 15th Purple team to take the court for Brannon included only two returning starters from the 1961-62 season—6-2 junior, Bobby McKinley, and 6-4 senior forward, Johnny Fowler.

The Frogs went through the tough schedule of December games against Oklahoma City University, the University of Houston, Centenary, the University of Michigan and Ohio State University, without a victory.

During the Christmas vacation the Frogs journeyed to the Gulf Coast Classic tournament at Shreveport, La., and came home with the consolation trophy.

They dropped their first game in the tourney, throwing them into the consolation bracket, and then won three consecutive games, the last one being a 77-62 victory over George Washington University.

Jerry Wade, 6-2 junior guard, was selected to the All-Tournament team.

Defending Southwest Conference champion Texas Tech came to town for the Frog's conference opener on Jan. 3, and left the next day with a 69-66 victory.

The Frogs dropped a game to Rice at Houston later in the week and then returned to Daniel-Meyer Coliseum, where they suffered their ninth loss of the season to Arkansas.

On Jan. 12, the Frogs thought they were going to see their first victory in the coliseum since they had defeated Rice in early

BUSTER BRANNON

1962; but in the waning moments of the game, they saw Baylor come from behind to snare a 61-60 victory over the Frogs. The Frogs continued their losing skein against Texas, SMU and Texas A&M.

The squad's only SWC victory was a 64-63 win over Baylor in Waco. The Frogs picked up the victory in the last minute of the game, after leading the first half with the sharp shooting of McKinley.

The Frogs finished the season with losses to Texas A&M, Texas Tech, Rice and Arkansas.

The season's end saw the Frogs on the bottom rung of the league ladder. Their only laurels were McKinley's sixth place in conference scoring with a 16-point per-game-average and Don Rosick's 7.4 rebounds per-game average.

Brannon contributed to psychological reasons the fact that the Purples lost all their home games. He said the thought of their losing streak (10-0) in the coliseum played an important part in their minds and they could not play well at home. He said this could easily be cited by one's looking at the difference in the scoring on the road and at home.

"We should have a much better team next season and possibly a contender the next year," Brannon mused, about the Frog's basketball future.

For next year, Brannon has moved David Hull to guard to insure speed on the outside. McKinley, Rollie Cornish and Hull should be able to hold down the outside positions with ease, Brannon said.

"Redshirt Gary Turner should be a big help on the boards next year," Brannon believes. Turner, a 6-6 transfer from Paris Junior College, will be a sophomore in eligibility.

"Bonds (Norman) will be back in school next semester and he, Turner, and freshman Jim Torbert and Dale Abshire, and Clayton should take good care of the boards," Brannon said hopefully. Bonds is out of school this semester because of grades.

"I don't believe we'll suffer too much from the loss of guard Jerry Wade," Brannon added. Wade, a junior college All-America transfer from Lon Morris Junior College, dropped out of school shortly after the end of basketball season.

Bobby McKinley Named Basketball Captain

Guard Bobby McKinley from Bowie, has been named next year's basketball captain. McKinley was the team's leading scorer last year with a 13.6 average on 327 points.

Purples' Football Record

The longest winning streak for a TCU football team was 14 games (last three, 1937, 11 in 1938). The longest losing streak was 11 games (1901-2-3).

The biggest margin of victory was a 62-0 victory over Abilene Christian in 1930. The biggest margin of defeat came at the hands of Texas, 0-72 in 1915.

The 1955 edition of the Purple and White scored the most points, 293.

Four times in the past seven years has seen a Texas Christian team in a bowl game. Quite a record for coach Abe Martin. The Frogs have played in eleven post-season classics. Only Texas has played in as many bowls.

Retiring Athletic Director Dutch Meyer looks on approvingly as his successor, Abe Martin, gets the feel of Meyer's desk. Dutch retires June 1 after being connected with TCU athletics for over 40 years.

Leaves AD Post June 1

Retiring 'Dutch' Meyer To Be Given Banquet

One of the best-liked figures in the TCU sports world will retire June 1 after 45 years within the University.

L.R. (Dutch) Meyer, who has served TCU as waterboy, athlete, coach and athletic director, will be given a going away party Saturday as a last tribute for his years of service.

The tribute will be in the form of a banquet and will be held in the Student Center ballroom. About 300 tickets have been sold so far, reports Mrs. Ann E. Pierson, director of ex-student affairs.

Football coach Abe Martin will replace Meyer as athletic director, a position held by Meyer since 1953. Martin will continue as head football coach.

Meyer, affectionately known as "the Dutchman" or "Old Iron Pants," started his long career as a Frog in 1909 when he served as the water boy for the varsity football team.

In 1917, he enrolled at TCU and, although he did not get much bigger than the waterboy, he participated in three sports—baseball, football and basketball. While serving as an athlete he earned 11 varsity letters and was team captain three times.

After graduation in 1922, Meyer served, briefly, as a pitcher with the Cleveland Indians. A shoulder injury forced his retirement as a pitcher. In 1923, he returned to TCU as a freshman coach, where he won 29 of 33 games during 11 seasons.

In 1934 Meyer took over as varsity football coach. His surprise tactics from the famed spread and wing back formation helped bring three Southwest Conference titles to TCU in 1938, 1944 and 1951. His 1938 team won the national championship as the best team in college football.

He retired from coaching in 1951, but held a brief coaching assignment in 1956, taking the conference baseball crown.

The Executive and Athletic Committee last December named Meyer "consultant to the Athletic Department" for life after his June 1 retirement.

Speaking on Meyer's work in TCU athletics, Chancellor M. E. Sadler said, "He's a grand person who has devoted almost his entire life to TCU."

"No man has done more for TCU athletics than 'Dutch,'" said football coach Abe Martin. "He has always followed good principles and never deviated from them."

Mason Picked Top Fraternity Year's Athlete

Craig Mason copped the "outstanding Fraternity Athlete of the Year," and his fraternity, Sigma Chi, won the All-Intramural trophy to conclude intramural activities this year.

Mason was high point winner for participation in sports. He was selected to all three all-star teams (football, basketball, and softball) and won handball and volleyball awards.

Sigma Chi won the trophy with 415 points. The other fraternities finished in this order: Phi Delta Theta, 362; Phi Kappa Sigma, 282½; Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 270 points.

The Sigs also placed two other players on the All-Intramural softball team with Mason. Jack Bailey was named at third base and Mel Owen was selected in left field.

Baseballers Post Two New Marks

Of all the TCU athletic teams during the past year, the baseball team enjoyed the best season. It tied the University of Texas for the conference title with a 12-3 record. The Frogs also posted the best full season record of any other Southwest Conference nine, 21-4.

The baseballers, guided by coach Frank Windegger, set two school records. The 21 victories was the most ever won by a TCU baseball team. And they won 16 straight games on their home diamond.

This year's co-championship was the first baseball crown the Frog 9 has had since 1956 when TCU won its only SWC baseball championship. Windegger was a star pitcher on that squad.

The Frogs landed five players on the Associated Press' All-Southwest Conference team. Texas had four.

Two TCU players—pitcher Lance Brown and center fielder Bob Bigley—were unanimous choices. The other Frogs honored were second baseman Billy McAdams, left fielder Jay Walrath and catcher Freddy Jones.

The first team: Freddy Jones, TCU, catcher; Gary London, Texas, catcher; Lance Brown, TCU, pitcher; Bob Myer, Texas, pitcher; Chuck McGuire, A&M, pitcher; Butch Thompson, Texas, 1st base; Billy McAdams, TCU, 2nd base; Bill Hancock, A&M, 3rd base; Bill Bethea, Texas, shortstop; Ronnie Goodwin, Baylor, util. inf.; Bob Bigley, TCU, outfielder; Jay Walrath, TCU, outfielder; Joel Tigett, Rice, util. outfielder.

Couldn't Get Going, Tennis Coach Says

Reviewing recently the losing (9-25) season of TCU's tennis team, coach Ken Crawford said, "We just couldn't seem to get started."

Earl Van Zandt and Paul Christian usually were the top players, but sometimes Harold Wise and Kenny Uselton would come to the front," Crawford related.

When the season began, the Frogs dropped their first match to strong Trinity University of San Antonio, 2-4. The Purple netmen then tied Southeastern Oklahoma State, 3-3, before dropping a match to Lamar Tech.

The Frogs picked up their first victory in a 6-0 rout over Hardin-Simmons at Ridglea Country Club. Later in the week they secured their second victory with a 6-0 win over Abilene Christian.

The Frogs journeyed to Houston for a match with the University of Houston, March 19 and a Rice University Tournament March 20-23. They tied the Cougars, 3-3, but failed to pick up a victory in the tourney.

The Frogs returned to Ridglea and tied the University of Colorado, 3-3, before picking up a 4-2 victory over the University of Minnesota.

The Frogs went all the way through their slate of conference matches winning only four individual matches until the last contest of the season when they defeated SMU, 5-1.

Fortune Fickle to Footballers

The Frogs rebounded from two mediocre football seasons in a row to post a 6-4 record in 1962, good for third place in the Southwest Conference behind Texas University and the Arkansas Hogs.

TCU's record might have been 8-2 if the Frogs could have mustered some breaks in crucial spots.

A loose piece of turf may have cost the Purple a victory in the University of Miami game.

Then, again, in the game with Louisiana State University at Baton Rouge, fickle "Dame Fortune" failed to smile for the Frogs. A sure touchdown pass slipped between the fingers of a Frog end, and the Bengals walked away with a 5-0 victory.

1962 also was the year that TCU's quarterback Sonny Gibbs was bypassed when the All-American and All-Conference ratings were handed out.

Sonny laughed as he signed a contract with the National Football League's Dallas Cowboys professional team, for a reported $150,000. "I guess I'm the highest paid third-team All-Conference quarterback in history."

Besides Gibbs, the only other TCU football player to sign a professional contract was tackle Rudy Mathews with the Philadelphia Eagles in the National Football League.

The Southwest Conference race was so mixed up that at one time SMU was leading the league. But the University of Texas prevailed to win a Cotton Bowl berth with a 6-0-1 record. The Rice Owls tied the Longhorns, 14-14, to put the only blot on the 'Horns' record.

Arkansas was second in the conference with a 6-1 slate followed by TCU in third place with a 5-2 record.

Highlights from the 1962 season: Kansas elected to go for a touchdown instead of a possible game-tying field goal only to see the Frog defense rise to stop the attack in the last few minutes of the game in Lawrence, Kan. TCU won, 6-3.

The Frogs fought highly touted Miami on even terms for three quarters and tied the game 20-20 in the last quarter. Halfback Donny Smith attempted a halfback power play for the two points but a piece of loose turf felled him in sniffing distance of the goal line.

Arkansas scatback Kenny Hatfield ran over the surest Frog tackler enroute to a 71-yard kickoff return as Arkansas raced by TCU, 42-14.

Again the Frogs fought to keep from losing in the Texas A&M game. Fullback Lloyd Mynatt knocked down an Aggie pass in the final period of play to stop an Aggie drive and give TCU possession of the ball.

LSU beat TCU, 5-0, but the Frogs had the edge in statistics and had one TD called back.

TCU guard Robert Mangum stopped Texas' tailback Tommy Ford and quarterback Tommy Wade on the one-yard line to quell one Texas drive. But Texas eventually won, 14-0, to spoil TCU's Homecoming.

The Frogs closed the season with a 14-9 victory over SMU as fullback Tommy Joe Crutcher rambled for 128 yards. Crutcher finished second in league rushing with 546 yards. Arkansas' Billy Moore won the title with 582 yards.
