Peace Group Now Official

By ROBERT G. LIMING

"We are official, we have been given permission to exist and now we exist!"

These were the words of Neil Poese, chairman of Students for Peace, as he spoke to some 50 students during the group's second meeting Thursday afternoon in room 216 of the Student Center.

Poese addressed the group less than an hour after the University Student Organizations Committee had voted to approve the establishment of the club.

He said, "I am very pleased with the manner in which the committee handled our case; we were approved unanimously."

Dr. Ben Strickland, professor of education and chairman of the Organization Committee said very little opposition to the group was heard during the committee meeting.

"I think people saw the group as an avenue whereby students could express their feelings pro and con on the controversies of our times," he said.

Following the announcement of the group's approval as a campus organization the constitutional committee under the chairmanship of Steve Stewart made an official report and submitted a first draft of the group's constitution for the approval of the members.

After 45 minutes of haggling over various points of wording and meaning of certain articles and the preamble it was agreed to refer the document back to the committee for further study.

The members then discussed how the club should go about reaching its goal of "opposing the war in Vietnam and self-education of the University on the Vietnam question."

John Checki, said he felt the group should be careful not to offend the opposition by creating a direct conflict between military recruiters and the group by setting up a publications table in the Student Center lobby to compete with tables run by the armed forces.

Another view was given by Brian Bendins who said, "We may as well antagonize them and get some self-satisfaction out of it."

It was decided to end the discussion on the issue of how the group should present its goals and refer the entire question to a committee. Poese was named to head the committee and look into the possibility of setting up a table and obtaining literature to be distributed by members. He will make a report at the group's next meeting on Jan. 4.

Following the meeting Poese commented on various issues concerning the war in Vietnam.

Discussing the recent massacre of 252 men, women and children (the majority women and children), at Dak Son by Viet Cong armed with flamethrowers he said, "I can't condone what they did but it is unfortunate that circumstances are such that they must do things like this."

When asked how he felt about ROTC students on campus he replied, "I can't condone ROTC students for being closed-minded because there are many closed minded students in the left." He added that he would hesitate to stereotype ROTC students because many of his good friends are in the program.

Commenting on what he thought Students for Peace could accomplish now that the group has received University approval he said, "I think it will definitely reduce frustration of some people and provide self-education on the issues."

Sales To Provide Funds For Committee Projects

By BETTY BUCKLEY

The sales of decorative wall plaques currently being undertaken by the University Spirit Committee is hoped to result in profits for an alumnae scholarship fund.

Steve Swift, committee chairman was to have presented the first 16 by 12 inch wall plaque to head football Coach Fred Taylor to promote the first sales to Fort Worth merchants, University students and alumnae.

Plaque Price

Swift quoted the price of the wall plaque at $11.95.

Part of the profits from the plaque sales will go to an alumnae scholarship fund. The rest will go to support Spirit Committee projects for the spring semester.

The committee's spring plans include redecorating parts of Amon Carter Stadium. Working with the Athletic Department, Spirit Committee members plan to have all stadium steps painted purple.

Committee members are pricing purple blazers.

"We're looking for the best purple blazers at the lowest price," said Swift. With a drive on for students and alumnae to wear purple to all the games, Swift hopes to be able to order the purple blazers in bulk and have them ready for wear by next fall.

Purple Dresses

"We are also checking into ordering purple dresses for the girls," Swift said. "We've found several places so far, but we've yet to finalize plans on this project."

TCU Charter Week climaxed by the big purple-white game will be a big Spirit Committee Week, according to Swift.

The committee composed of 12 elected members and eight appointees or heads of other contributing organizations will be involved in many of the Charter Week activities.

Plans are also being made for a basketball pep rally to tip off Southwest Conference play. The rally is currently scheduled for Jan. 4.

More Spirit Committee projects and plans include the securing of a purple rope and gold stands to rope off the University seal embossed on the floor of the entry way in Sadler Hall.

Paint Plugs

Still another idea from the committee is to have all traffic signs, fire plugs and other public utilities in the TCU area painted purple.

"We're open to all kinds of suggestions and ideas about promoting spirit in every facet of TCU," Swift said. "Our meetings are at 4 p.m. on Wednesdays."

The revival of the spirit trophy competition has given committee members still another task totaling weekly points for competing organizations, Greek and independent, on campus.

Fair To Receive Tapes

TCU has become involved in "HemisFair 1968" -- it represents the first contribution by a major university to the fair's space theme exhibit.

Some time ago, Speech Department chairman Dr. George T. Tade received a request from the space exhibit officials to provide audio-tape recordings for use during HemisFair, which opens in San Antonio, April 6.

The recordings are being built into walls and panels to take the place of the usual labels and explanatory reading material at the space exhibit in the fair's Convention Center. The tapes, not yet completed, so far represent some 60 hours of rehearsal and recording time by TCU students.

The exhibit is a joint effort of HemisFair, the Smithsonian Institution, NASA, the Department of Defense, the Federal Aviation Agency, the Environmental Sciences Services Administration and Comsat, Inc.

At the space exhibit, visitors will take a simulated trip to outer space. The visitor will enter a capsule, where dramatic lighting and photography will transport him into orbit around the earth, using actual film shot by astronauts.

"I'd also like to thank publicly all those faculty members who have come to me with ideas and help," Swift added.

New Unit's Motto: Swift-Silent-Deadly

By PAUL GREEN

Swift . . . silent . . . deadly. This sounds a little frightening, but staying alive in many places today requires one to be swift, silent and deadly, according to Capt. Ben E. Killebrew of the Army ROTC. Capt. Killebrew, officer in charge of the newly-formed TCU Counter-guerrilla Unit, used the unit's motto of "swift, silent, deadly" to explain the reason for forming the unit.

Counter-guerrilla Unit

"This is the first year we have tried this," he said. The Counter-guerrilla Unit is a voluntary training program for cadets enrolled in Army ROTC.

"Our mission (military terminology for "goal") is to train the individual cadet in combat tactics, techniques and procedures of counter-guerrilla operations and to instill in them high standards of discipline and leadership."

The unit currently consists of 38 cadets, under the command of Capt. Killebrew, who, like the unit's adviser, Marine Corp Capt. Tom C. Adams, has had Vietnam experience.

The group attends a two-hour class each week, and has a field problem each month to apply what they have learned. Training is in dead seriousness, according to the Army captain.

"Let me emphasize that we aren't playing," he said. "This isn't for fun. Some of these cadets will be in Vietnam a year from now. They'll be commanding other men. Their lives—and those of their men depend on them knowing what they're doing."

Intensive Training

The students are given "intensive training in counter-guerrilla warfare." This training includes physical and mental conditioning, techniques of counter-guerrilla operations (raids and ambushes) and long range patrols.

They also learn how to move cross-country at night, receive instructions in psychological warfare and in supply conservation.

Efforts are made to instill in each member motivation, experience, ruthlessness and hardness.

According to Capt. Killebrew, "I think that the cadets have discovered that it's plain hard work to learn the art of counter-guerrilla warfare."

"The members of the unit are working toward concurrent baccalaureate degrees and Army commissions," he added. "They want to be prepared in every way possible for that day when they're called upon to lead a group of their fellow Americans into battle."

Experience Beneficial

"We haven't had it easy in equipping the unit here at TCU. In some cases, we've had to spend our own money for equipment and uniforms. I feel very fortunate in having Capt. Adams as an adviser to the unit. His experience has benefited us all.

"We have an expression in our unit which expresses our spirit and pride," he said. "It goes like this: 'We have done so much, with so little, for so long that we can now do anything, with nothing, forever.'"

"But if one American life is saved, then our training in 'swift, silent, deadly' will have proved its worth."

Tour To Seravir Tuesday

Have you been to Seravir lately? A plane is leaving the ballroom on Dec. 19—7:30 p.m.

Signs saying so have been posted all over the campus, leaving curious students somewhat befuddled, and wondering what, or where Seravir is.

The cat has finally been let out of the bag by the Department of Foreign Languages:

The department has invited the student body to attend a meeting of the Los Hidalgos Spanish club presenting "Navidad en Seravir," the English translation being, Christmas in Seravir.

Refreshments will be served after the presentation.

Directing the Christmas Fiesta is Polly Cox, Dallas junior Spanish major.

The theme is Christmas festivities in the small Argentine town of Seravir, which is a fictional name.

In fact, Seravir is simply Rivares, spelled backwards. Rivares is Dr. Anthony Rivares, TCU Spanish professor.

Campus News in Brief

Mail Registration Deadline Set

It's a college student's dream-come-true: registration-by-mail. Unfortunately, only for certain students has it come true.

The Evening College experimented with the idea this fall, so that people who live very far off campus do not have to come to campus until the night of their first class.

Director of the Evening College, Thomas C. Palmer indicated that he hoped to make registration by mail a regular practice.

Applications for the registration kit for the spring semester will be accepted Jan. 1-8, 1968. The kit explains the registration process in three steps to make it as easy as possible. The deadline for returning them is Jan. 15.

Class To Treat 60

Spending Christmas in a foreign country could be pretty strange, especially if that country is the United States.

However, the 60 foreign students at TCU are going to learn about a typical U.S. Christmas from the seven girls in the home management class.

Senior Peggy Breazeale explained that the home management students usually give a holiday tea. However, this year they decided to sponsor a party for a group that would really benefit from it.

She said "Most of the foreign students won't be able to go home for Christmas so they will be staying in the homes of their American friends. We wanted them to understand and appreciate the way we celebrate Christmas."

The "Texas Christmas Tea" will be Wednesday in the Home Management House. The girls are preparing typical holiday foods for the foreign students to sample and take with them.

the University of Dallas, will speak Thursday to the Beta Lambda Chapter of Pi Sigma Alpha, national honor society in government.

The occasion is the initiation of ten new members.

The topic of Welch's speech, around which a discussion will revolve, is "These Changing Times: Newly Emergent Concepts of Law." It will concern the new decisions recently made by judges and courts which are changing the laws of the land.

Members of the organization are, of course, invited, as are upperclassmen and graduate students who are majors in government and political science.

The event, which will be held in Student Center room 207 at 7:30 p.m., will afford an opportunity for a meeting of students, faculty and alumni.

Welch received his B.A. degree from TCU, his master's from the University of Oklahoma, and a law degree from George Washington University.

Miss Auto Show To Win $1000 Worth of Prizes

Would you like to be "Miss Auto Show of 1968" or one of her eight maids of honor and win a share of prizes totaling more than $2000?

If this is your desire, then to apply you must be a female, single and have never been married, a high school graduate and a resident of Tarrant County or a student at a college, university or other advanced school located in Tarrant County.

"The history of the contest indicates that these rules favor collegians, for 47 of the 74 previous winners have been students and virtually 50 per cent of these students, 22 of 47, have been from TCU," said the co-sponsors, the New Car Dealers Association of Fort Worth and the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Coeds interested in entering the contest should contact the NCDA for more information, before 1 p.m., Dec. 28, which is the last day to submit applications.

Each entrant in the contest must provide a photograph of herself with her application and also must be personally interviewed at the NCDA office.

Approximately 25 entries will be chosen as finalists, being judged by their photographs.

French Carols To Be Featured

Christmas music and French carols will fill the air in room 206 of the Student Center Thursday.

The occasion will be the annual French Club Christmas party at 11 a.m. and the festivities will include singing of French Christmas carols accompanied by Beta Blalock on the harp.

Students are invited to attend and participate in the festivities.

"Miss Auto Show" and her maids of honor will be selected by members of the NCDA of Fort Worth at the group's Jan. 3 meeting at Ridgley Country Club.

In the judging of finalists, each dealer member will have one vote in the ballot to determine the winners.

The coed selected as "Miss Auto Show of 1968" will receive more than $1000 worth of gifts, including a portable color television set, a new 1968 automobile to drive during the auto show, a formal gown from Wally Williams, and a modeling or career scholarship of her choice.

Both "Miss Auto Show" and her eight maids of honor will receive $50 for their work at the Auto Show.

The Fort Worth Auto Show for which the nine winners will be hostesses will be free to the public and will feature the 1968 models of all the major makes under one roof.

At Last--Something Is Being Done

By JUDY GAY

It was discussed last year, but nothing ever came of it and now another organization has started the ball rolling and plans to get something done.

The "it" in question is faculty evaluation which was discussed last year by the House of Representatives and the Cabinet, but it was tabled or discarded or forgotten.

This year the editorial board of Perspective, with the blessings of the Forums Committee, will conduct a faculty evaluation poll Jan. 4.

Rodney Ewing and Carolyn Marvin separately came to the same conclusion during the summer—a faculty evaluation was needed and desirable. Both are on the editorial board of Perspective and both decided to do something.

Co-authored Article

The two co-authored an article in Perspective, "The Case for Faculty Evaluation," and presented a sample evaluation sheet.

Since that time the editorial board has decided to sponsor the project. Evaluation sheets will be handed out in the dormitories Jan. 4. They will be picked up Jan. 5 and compilations will be made over semester break.

A booklet giving the students' opinions will be sold during registration.

Faculty evaluation isn't something new. It has been done at other schools, among them Princeton, University of Texas, University of New Mexico, Texas Tech, University of Nebraska and Rice.

The sample in Perspective will not be the final evaluation sheet. Ewing emphasized that they are now in the process of reviewing and improving the questionnaire.

Objective, Subjective

The questionnaire will be both objective and subjective. There will also be a place for students to criticize the questionnaire itself.

Ewing and Miss Marvin realize this year's model will be an experiment of sorts and they are hopeful that students will take the evaluation seriously.

Both say they feel that unless students take the poll seriously it will not work.

Later evaluations will be expanded and improved, but at least this is a start. Somebody is really doing something about it.

A poll in the Dec. 12 issue of The Skiff indicated that some students had not read the article in Perspective and did not fully understand the objectives of a faculty evaluation.

Drew Sawyer, House president, evidently did not know that an evaluation was being planned.

Ewing said that no members of the student government had contacted him about the prospective evaluation.

Making Effort

However, Ewing and Miss Marvin are making every effort to contact both faculty and administration to get their views and advice.

The prospective evaluation is not being run half-heartedly or sloppily.

Said Miss Marvin, "We have made a big effort to go through channels to produce it."

She continued, "We feel it is the right of students to seek excellence in education. Student evaluation of faculty is only one source of information about the faculty."

She added that faculty evaluation should be "considered for only what it is—not a means of hiring and firing."

Ewing emphasized that the evaluation would "provide a place for a student to tell what he knows about a professor outside the class. A university is more than a place for students to buy information."

Said Ewing, "We are doing it because we respect the faculty. A good faculty is a good university."

The student government at the University of New Mexico last year issued "Insight," a booklet published after compilation of a faculty evaluation.

Purpose of the evaluation, according to "Insight," was to give "students some insight into the nature of a professor's teaching operation."

Good to Bad

Comments in the booklet ranged from, "His lectures are clear, concise, organized and easily understood. His classes are rigorous and fairly hard. His tests are also hard, but they are always fair" to:

"Students consensus indicates that his grading is unfair, the material is boring, and the professor is neither interested nor interesting. According to most, any learning was derived from the book—not the lectures. This professor is not recommended."

The special issue of Perspective that will have the faculty evaluation will include in the prologue, according to Ewing and Miss Marvin, sampling problems, good and bad aspects of evaluating techniques, suggestions for improvement, description of respondents apart from the contents of response, and a guarantee that each student's response is classified.

At last somebody is doing something. The evaluation is being handled in a mature and scholarly way.

Both Miss Marvin and Ewing have grade points close to a 4.0.

We agree that a faculty evaluation is needed and we're glad it's being done and not tabled.

Politics Not Realm of Religion

During Episcopal services not long ago, the Rev. Cotesworth Pinckney Lewis looked down on the First Family from an elevated pulpit and addressed the President. His principal question was posed in the following words:

"The political complexities of our involvement in an undeclared war in Vietnam are so baffling that I feel presumptuous even in asking questions. But since there is a rather general consensus that something is wrong in Vietnam—a conviction voiced by leaders of nations traditionally our friends, leading military experts and the rank and file of American citizens—we wonder if some logical, straightforward explanation might be given without endangering whatever military or political advantage we held."

If nothing else, it seems good manners would have prevented the clergyman from so pointedly lecturing to a "capitive" President. Somewhere along the way, an unwritten custom has evolved that proscribes preachers from performing such an outrageous act through their pulpit privilege.

"After all," Lewis said, "one isn't privileged to tell the President of the U.S. what he thinks very often."

The central issue that evolved from this incident is actually of even more importance than the President of the United States being insulted. The majority of the people certainly realize that our President has more knowledge of the war in Vietnam than any clergyman.

That actually goes without saying.

The real concern is that religious leaders are more and more speaking out from the pulpit on race issues and the war in Vietnam. Churches are splitting themselves down the middle through entering on forbidden territory—that of the state. We have basic freedoms in this country guaranteeing the separation of the church from the state, and clergymen have recently been the cause of rebellion and turmoil.

Two Detroit pastors disappointed their congregation through offering their churches as "sanctuaries" for draft evaders. Another incident in Englewood, N.J., occurred when a conservative rabbi "forbade" the members of his congregation to vote Republican because that party, so he said, was using racist tactics.

A new breed of clergymen apparently is developing that is the cause of a revolution that may cut through the whole of American society. Such men were leaders of the nationwide Conference on Church and Society held in Detroit under the patronage of the National Council of Churches. Delegates agreed that churches should become sanctuaries for draft dodgers, and a 24-hour strike should be sponsored across the United States if the Vietnam war should be sharply escalated.

The Community Church of New York went so far as to unload its stock holding in a chemical company because the firm manufactured napalm used in Vietnam. Catholics, Jews and Protestants in many cities have formed "Project Equality" to ask church members to use their buying power to pressure suppliers to hire more Negroes.

Granted, citizens of the U.S. have the freedom to speak out; however, one man's freedom ends where another man's begins. And common sense should tell each individual that he has no business leading rebellions unless he knows all the facts and understands his crusade perfectly.

The President knows and understands more about Vietnam than anyone else in the world, including all the clergymen.

Sociologists from Columbia University and the University of California at Berkeley questioned 100 Episcopal bishops, 259 clergymen and 1530 laymen, and concluded that "past experience has shown that, when the church has taken a strong and unequivocal position on an issue, it has alienated members whose nonreligious interests are threatened."

Hopefully the church taking an unpopular stand will not change the thinking and beliefs of the majority of the parishioners.

Dr. Frank Littell, president of Iowa Wesleyan College, said, "If the sixteenth century is remembered for the Protestant and Catholic reformations, if the nineteenth century is remembered as the great century of Christian missions, the twentieth century will stand out as the century of the church struggle. And, Brethren, it's going to get worse before it gets better."

Numero Uno* : the search for a man's cologne ends here.

Every man, in his own style, is Numero Uno. With his own way of moving in the world. So how can any one cologne be right for all men? It can't. That's what Numero Uno is all about.

There are only four basic masculine scents in the world. Only four. (That's right. The whole gang of colognes are just variations of the basics.) Numero Uno gives it to you straight — all four of them. Numero Uno

Green. Silver. Red. Gold. What are they like? Wild. But each one is as different from the rest as you are from the next guy.

Which Numero Uno for you? You find it with the "Searcher Kit," a jigger of each scent in one box. Fool around with all four. Then grab a full-size bottle of the one that makes it for you.

The one that's your Numero Uno.

Great gift idea. Try all four with the "Searcher Kit." You can't be anything but right.

Also: All Purpose Lotion; Spray Deodorant; Shaving Foam; All Purpose Talc; and Soap-on-a-Rope in all four Numero Uno scents. Available wherever fine men's toiletries are sold.

Center Tries To Answer Questions

By PAULA WATSON

How can I make better grades?
How can I improve my study habits?

How can I gain more self-confidence?

What major should I choose?
Are any of these questions familiar? If you are a TCU student, chances are you have asked yourself at least one of these questions during your college life.

Perplexing problems and questions such as these can become too much for one to handle by himself.

To help the "normal college student with personal, vocational and educational problems" is the goal and purpose of the Counseling and Testing Center.

The direction of the Center is the job of Dr. Curtis J. Firkins. Dr. Firkins said that out of 1000 students who enter college, maybe 400 will graduate.

"This is related to mental ability and scholastic attitude," he said.

Too often, students do not make the most of their college years.

Dr. Firkins said that sometimes students enter majors in which they cannot hope to be successful. They spend time and money working toward an unrealistic objective.

"These students should come in for counseling," he explained. "There is no stigma attached to coming into the guidance center—more students should come in than do."

According to Dr. Firkins, another problem which students have is not really knowing how to attack the printed page; they "get along because they are brilliant."

In addition to helping alleviate vocational and educational problems, psychologists and professional counselors connected with the Center are also concerned with students' personal problems.

Some personal problems which students bring to the Center include problems with boyfriends, parents and other personal worries.

"There is nothing in human relations that hasn't been discussed across this desk," Dr. Firkins said, "including rape, abortion and suicide."

"As a matter of fact, three, four or even five students a year come in to talk about their contemplated suicide," he added.

Although students may not realize it, a 5 x 8 card on each student at TCU is on file at the Center.

From this card, counselors can tell how social an animal you are, what vocation you are probably best suited to, and what your probable grade point average is—just about everything but what you like for breakfast.

From such information, Dr. Firkins is able to draw a picture of the typical TCU student. According to Dr. Firkins, the typical student here is:

1. Classified as bright, well above the general population median.

2. More given to reading and studiousness than the members of the general population.

3. Vocationally, preparing for any one of approximately 25 broad fields of work, most at professional or managerial levels, and

4. He is going to change his major (two out of three students change their majors before graduation).

Some 2084 "normal, typical" students were tested in one way or another last year, and recorded contacts with students for counseling numbered 2740.

"We can advise students if they give us a chance," Dr. Firkins concluded.

So, if you have a problem, don't take it out on your roommate—take it to the Counseling and Testing Center.

Coed Plans Cotton Bowl Appearance

Candy Leinweber, Houston senior and TCU Sweetheart, will represent the University at the Cotton Bowl Festival Dec. 30-Jan. 1 in Dallas.

The pretty coed, a member of Chi Omega sorority, will participate in planned activities ranging from a Cotton Bowl Style Show to riding in the New Year's Day Cotton Bowl Festival parade on the Southwest Conference princess float.

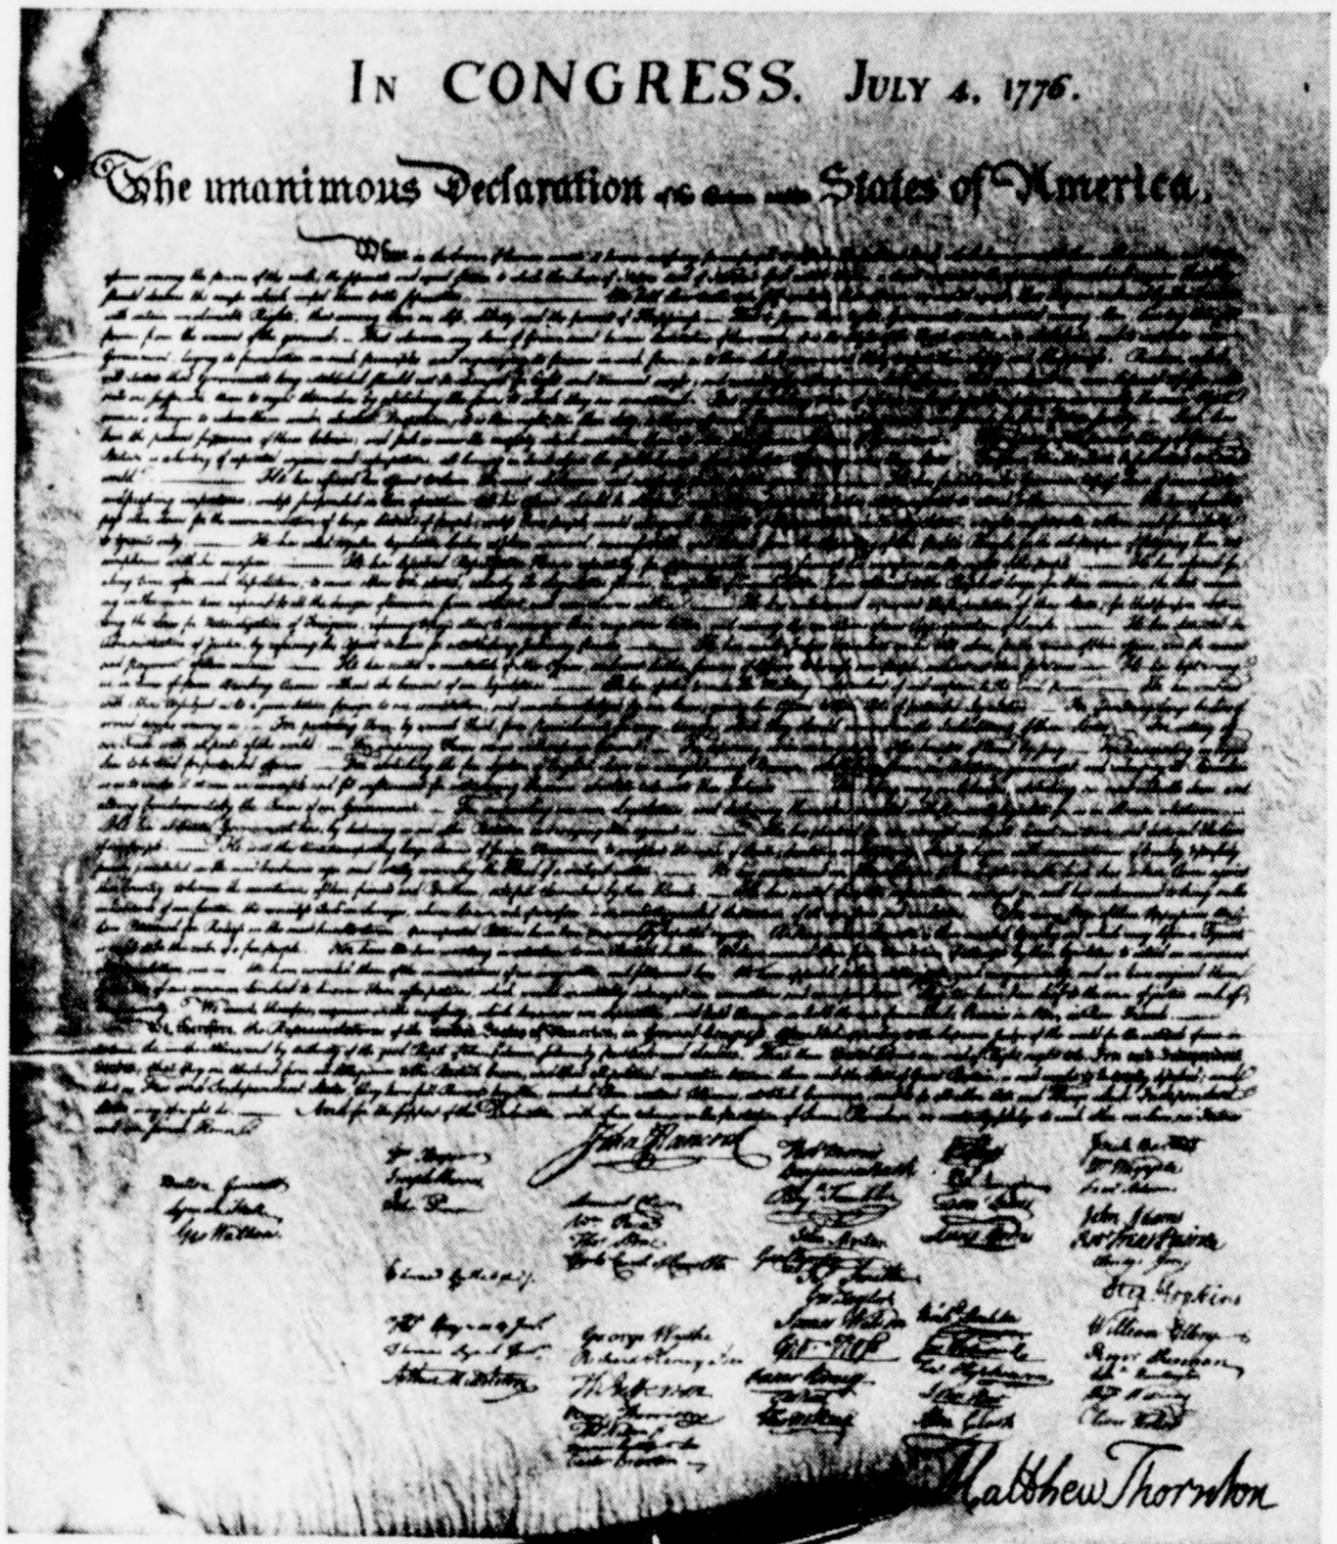

"I am so honored the students of TCU have given me the opportunity to represent them at the Cotton Bowl," said Miss Leinweber.

She was elected TCU Sweetheart in an all campus election last spring, and is going to the Cotton Bowl in this capacity.

Miss Leinweber added that her wish for the New Year is that TCU will be playing in the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day next year.

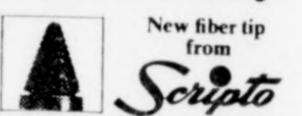

She will attend a student group dinner on Saturday, and the Cotton Bowl queens, Sportsmanship Committee, and visiting school representatives are invited.

On New Year's Eve, Miss Leinweber will be formally presented at the Cotton Bowl Student Dance, and New Year's Day, she will be presented on the football field in a pre-game show appearance.

TILF Awards Scholarships

The University has for the third consecutive year three freshmen enrolled who are holders of Texas Interscholastic League Foundation Scholarships.

Susan Beard of San Benito, Patricia Benson of Keller and Martha Sue Page of Eldorado were among 93 awardees of scholarships from the foundation.

Money for the Texas Interscholastic League Foundation, which makes the scholarships available to students they deem worthy, is donated from other foundations. The scholarships are then awarded in the names of the donor foundations.

The awards, two of which are from the Brown-Lupton Foundation, are in the amount of $1000 each. The third grant, which is renewable up to four years, is from the Welch Foundation and was awarded to Miss Benson.

The Brown-Lupton Memorial Scholarships, awarded to Miss Beard and Miss Page, were offered to TIL state meet competitors who planned to attend TCU or Baylor to cover expenses of the students' freshmen years.

Miss Beard won the persuasive speaking division of the league competition. She is a religion and speech major, a member of TCU Singers and a pledge of Zeta Tau Alpha.

A chemistry major, Miss Benson was a member of the Beta Honor Society in high school. She is the first Welch Foundation scholarship awardee to attend the University.

She is a member of the chemistry club, and hopes to eventually gain BS, master's, and Ph.D. degrees in chemistry.

Miss Page is on the publicity committee of the Association of Women Students and a pledge of Pi Beta Phi. She was a member of the band, student council, debate team, choir, and Interscholastic League while in high school.

She was also a class officer and a Betty Crocker Homemaker Award winner.

"TCU feels especially complimented to have these students on campus," said Dr. J. M. Moudy, chancellor. "Among the various types of recognition available to young people today, the recognition of intellectual promise and achievement is the most important."

Dr. Newcomer To Speak

A worship service centered around the birth of Christ was Christmas hymns and scripture readings telling his story has been planned by the Religious Activities Committee, Dec. 20, at 6:30 p.m. in Robert Carr Chapel.

The Christmas Candlelight Service will begin with campus-wide caroling beginning at 5:45 p.m. in front of the Student Center.

The carolers will sing around the campus and end up in front of Robert Carr Chapel in time for the service. All students are invited to join the group.

Dr. James W. Newcomer, vice chancellor for academic affairs, will deliver a Christmas message to students.

The service of lights will begin at the conclusion of the message when Dr. Newcomer lights his candle from the altar candles and he will light the candles of Dr. Howard G. Wible, dean of students, and Dr. Jo Ann James, dean of women.

The two deans will in turn light the candles of the first worshiper in each pew, who will continue passing the light down the row.

The Peace of God will be symbolically passed as the candles are lighted from one person to the next.

The service will conclude with worshipers carrying their lighted candles down the side aisles of the chapel.

'TIS THE SEASON TO BE JOLLY

Yuletide is almost upon us. Let's stop wasting time in classes and get on with our Christmas shopping. Following are a number of gift suggestions, all easily obtainable at your nearest war surplus boutique.

First, a most unusual gift idea, brand new this year and certain to please everyone on your list—a gift certificate from the American Veterinary Medicine Association! Each certificate is accompanied by this charming poem:

*Merry Christmas, north and south,
Does your cow have hoof and mouth?*

*And your dog, fidele semper,

*Little kitten, cute and squirmy,
Bring her in. I think she's wormy.*

To bunnies, turtles, parrots green, Joyeux Noel! Heureux Vaccine!

Are you wondering what to give that extra-special man on your list? Stop wondering. Give him that extra-special shaving combination, Personna Super Stainless Steel Blades and Burma Shave. Each gift is accompanied by this charming poem:

*Christmas merry, New Year bonny,
From your friendly blade Personny.*

*You will have the ladies fawning,
If you're shaving with Persawning.*

*Injector style or double edges,
Both are made by good Persedges.*

*And Burma-Shave in plain or menthol,
Leaves your face as smooth as renthol.*

(NOTE: As everyone knows, renthol is the smoothest substance ever discovered. You may not know, however, that renthol is named after its inventor, Ralph Waldo Renthol, who developed it by crossing a swan with a ball bearing.)

(Interestingly enough, Mr. Renthol did not start out to be an inventor. Until age 50 he was a Western Union boy. Then fate took a hand. One day while delivering a singing telegram to a girl named Claudia Sigafos, Ralph noted to his surprise that the telegram was signed "Claudia Sigafos!" She had sent herself a birthday greeting!

(When pressed to explain, Claudia told Ralph a heart-rending tale. It seems that when she was only six weeks old, her parents were killed in an avalanche. The infant Claudia was found by a pair of kindly caribou who raised her as their own. They taught her all they knew—like how to rub bark off a tree and which lichens are better than other lichens—but in time they saw that this was not enough. When Claudia reached age 18, they entered her in Bennington.

(Unused to people, Claudia lived a lonely life—so lonely, in fact, that she was reduced to sending herself birthday greetings, as we have seen.

(Ralph, deeply touched, married Claudia and tried his best to make her mingle with people. It didn't work. They went nowhere, saw no one, except for an annual Christmas visit to Claudia's foster parents, Buck and Doe. To while away his long, lonely hours, Ralph finally built a work bench and started to futz around with inventions, as we have seen.

(It is pleasant to report that the story of Ralph and Claudia ends happily. After the birth of their two children, Donder and Blitzen, Claudia joined the PTA and soon overcame her fear of people. Ralph joined the Elks.)

But I digress. Merry Christmas to all and to all a good night! Ho-ho-ho!

The makers of Personna and Burma Shave join Old Max in extending greetings of the season.

NCAA Rule Interpreted Too Loosely

By PETE KENDALL

When the NCAA declared five UT-El Paso football players ineligible for the Dec. 30 Sun Bowl game against Mississippi, it raised an interesting point. Should one-year junior college transfer athletes be considered ineligible for post-season competition.

The collegiate rule says that to be eligible for post-season games, a juco transfer has to have either 1, graduated from junior college; 2, transferred with a certain number of credit hours; or, 3, achieved a B average after transferring the freshman year.

Obviously the El Paso football players did not meet these requirements, and it seems possible that the school was not willing to call it to the NCAA's attention.

It took the latter organization's scrutiny to pick up what could have been a violation. They censured the school last year for violating the very same rule before the 1965 Sun Bowl, which, by the way, they won over TCU, 13-12.

Decision Coming

Somewhere in the near future the time will come for the NCAA committees to review their action of the past year on the 1965 El Paso team. We hope they will not forget this year's incident.

Questioned about how much effect the loss of the five players would make on his team's effort, Miner Athletic Director George McCarty said, "This won't wipe us out. We were fortunate that we had depth."

Where depth would be a problem is basketball. Many western schools have made frequent use in the past of eastern and mid-western one-year juco transfers to bolster, or, at least cushion, so-called rebuilding years.

Utah, Brigham Young, Wyoming, and New Mexico, always perennial powers of the Rocky Mountains, along with independents New Mexico State and UT-El Paso, have been users of these vast juco resources.

Since Bob King's second year as head coach at New Mexico, his teams have finished no worse than 16-8 for a season.

NIT's Gain

The main reason is his combing of the junior colleges where King picked up both Ira Harge and Claude Williams to take his second Albuquerque team to the National Invitation Basketball Tournament finals against Bradley. Of late, King's best junior college "one-year" recruit is Mel Daniels, now one of the superstars of the new American Basketball Association.

The best action any coach could take, we think, would be to initiate a "hands-off" policy for junior college freshmen. This could be enforced in much the same way as the inter-conference letters-of-intent now in operation.

Says Johnny Swaim, head Frog basketball coach, "I think it's wrong and unnecessary to take a boy out of junior college his first year. It's not worth it—either for the boy or the team."

Whether or not it is worth it is another question, but the NCAA must crack down. The situation is getting out of hand.

Chiefs Win Again; McCarty Hits 28

By WHIT CANNING

The pain of defeat is sometimes eased by the knowledge that you've fallen to an unbeatable outfit.

Oklahoma City's Chiefs may not be unbeatable, but no one has found the chink in their armor so far, so the Frogs can at least be consoled by the fact that they've come closer to whipping Abe Lemons' crew than anyone else this season.

Saturday night's 98-86 victory kept the Chiefs' slate sparkling bright at 4-0, with half the success coming over the Frogs, but they've played two tough games with Johnny Swaim's cagers, while making cannon fodder out of their other two opponents.

Easier

Their task was slightly easier this time than it was in the first encounter, when they scraped by with a one-point win. This time they had an eight-point bulge at the half. The lead shrank to four, then grew to 12, and stayed about the same until the end.

Rich Travis, the Chiefs' leading scorer for the season, was his usual reliable self. He didn't match his per game average, but he got 29 points, one more than he got last time against the Purples. And OCU's big men under the boards atoned somewhat for their embarrassment at the hands of the Frogs last time by winning the rebound derby, 57-55.

The revolutionary new ingredient, however, was Charles Wallace, and his performance brings back an observation by Swaim last week. After the first game, Swaim noted that there are players lurking on the Chiefs' bench that shoot so well they would probably be starters elsewhere. Wallace does not ordinarily warm the bench, but in the face of the avalanche of publicity commanded by Travis, he sometimes gets lost in the shuffle.

After the last game, everyone was so busy evaluating Travis' performance that Wallace was scarcely noticed, although he was the Chiefs' second-high scorer for the game with 13.

Better Acquainted

During the past week, he has become better acquainted with the nets, and this time he poured 33 points through them, and it was enough to kill the Frogs. That and free throws. The Chiefs held a 22-10 bulge in that department, and the 12-point advantage was precisely their margin of victory.

OCU also outgunned the Purples from the floor, hitting 46.9 per cent of their shots, while the Frogs were managing 40.4 per cent. All five of the Chief starters hit double figures, with 6-8 Willie Watson hitting 12 while pulling down 24 rebounds, and 6-9 center Houston Thomas matching Ron Koper's total with 10.

There were bright spots in the Frogs' performance, too, chief among them being center James Cash's return to the world of the living, offensively. Although Cash has played well on defense, and has been an invaluable asset with his rebounding, he entered the game with a dazzling point total of nine for three games. He broke out of the slump in a hurry Saturday with nine field goals and three charity tosses for a total of 21. He also led the Frogs in rebounds with 16.

28 for Mickey

Mickey McCarty was even more productive, with 28 points and 12 rebounds and a great overall effort. Carey Sloan added 12 points and Tom Swift 10 to the Purple total.

For the first dozen minutes, the Frogs kept pace with the high octane Okies, leading 34-33. Then the tank ran dry and the Chiefs ran off.

OCU led 56-48 at the half. At that point, Wallace already had 22 points and Travis 13. A Frog surge early in the second half closed the gap to 58-54, but then the Chiefs' zone defense slammed the door and the OCU lead swelled to 12 points and that's how it wound up.

The loss dropped the TCU record to 1-3.

Recruits To Get Sports Brochure

"Academics and Athletics at Texas Christian University" is the title of the new brochure compiled by Jay D. Milner, of the Journalism Department, with the help of Don Jackson, assistant football coach and athletic recruiting coordinator.

Designed to win athletes for the university without overemphasizing the school's athletic program, the book was planned first as an aid to the football program. Now there are plans for basketball inserts to help coach Johnny Swaim with his program.

"The main idea of the brochure," said Fred Taylor, head football coach, "was to get more information into one book. We wanted the recruit to be able to see everything in black and white."

"We had talked about starting the brochure for several years," he continued, "but it became a reality after I became head coach. We hired a professor (Jay Milner) to compose the book, and Don Jackson spent many hours compiling information from the various parts of the campus. I am pleased with the book, though naturally there will be some changes made in the next brochures we put out. We've learned a lot from this one experience."

Messages

The book includes messages from Chancellor J.M. Moudy, Athletic Director Abe Martin, and Head Coach Taylor.

Taylor says in part, "As head football coach at TCU, I want young men on my team who are interested in securing a good education while participating in athletics. I want young men who want to win, who believe in themselves and in their ability to win, and who are willing to pay the price to win. I am convinced that winning builds character and there is a lot of satisfaction from success."

The head coach explains that the brochure will be sent primarily to prospective recruits, and that only a limited number of copies have been printed.

A number of pictures are included in the book, many of which reflect school highlights to old grads of the university. A full page is devoted to the TCU All-Americans. Pictured are Sammy Baugh, Jim Swink, Don Floyd, Keith Flowers, Davey O'Brien, Bob Lilly, Tommy Crutcher, and Rags Mathews.

All-Americans pictured elsewhere in the book are Ki Aldrich, I.B. Hale, and Jack Spikes. Also shown are the members of the Frogs' 1938 National Championship football team.

Color Photos

Included on other pages are pictures of the three-year-old $75,000 TCU Ex-Lettermen's Clubroom.

Color photos of the newly remodeled Student Center are included as are several pictures of Milton Daniel Dormitory, residence of all Frog athletes.

Profiles of the various departments and schools of the university highlight the book. Most impressive is a design of the University's proposed $7 million science research center. Other designs include the health and physical education plant planned by a Fort Worth architectural firm.

Also explained are the School of Business, the University's graduate programs, the biology and medical programs, the Journalism Department, the Computer Center, and the University's Army and Air Force ROTC programs. Other programs covered in the brochure are engineering, science, and the School of Fine Arts.

Extensive coverage is also given to the University's training room programs under the direction of Elmer Brown, head athletic trainer.

Besides football, all other Frog varsity sports are covered. These include basketball, baseball, track golf, tennis, and swimming.

Sports Information Director Jim Brock commented, "The content and photography in the book are excellent. Jay (Milner) did an outstanding job of composition. I think the whole brochure will be a great aid to TCU."

Sigma Chis, Phi Delt Lead Greek Mural Loop

Intramural basketball in the fraternity league swings into its third week this afternoon as the Lambda Chis take on SAE and the Kappa Sigs battle the Delt.

Thursday afternoon the pre-holiday slate closes with the Phi Delt going against the Sig Eps and the Sigma Chis facing the Phi Kapps. Whatever happens, the Phi Delt and Sigma Chis are assured of retiring for Christmas with at least a first place tie.

The two leaders carry 2-0 records into this week's action. At the bottom, their two alter egos are the Kappa Sigs and Sig Eps at 0-2. Everyone else is in the middle with 1-1 marks.

Both Tough

The Phi Delt started on the road to the top with a 51-39 opening game victory over the Lambda Chis, and followed it up with a 46-39 verdict over the SAE's. The Sigma Chis, who specialize in dealing misery to their foes, were even more impressive. After destroying the Kappa Sigs 70-16, they chewed up the Delt, 67-29.

In other first-week meetings, the SAE's outgunned the Phi Kapps, 56-42, while the Delt slipped past the Sig Eps, 45-41, in the closest contest to date. Last week the Lambda Chis and Phi Kapps got into the win column with impressive wins over the two cellar teams. The Lambda Chis shattered the Kappa Sigs 75-24, and the Phi Kapps scuttled the Sig Eps, 49-27.

Independents Start

The Independent loop starts action in earnest on Feb. 5, although practice games are already being played. The late starting date is the result of a change in policy, explains George Harris, Director of Intramural Athletics. The object is to allow the independents to arrange their schedule, and labs, in an efficient manner, so that by the time play begins for keeps, everything can be run smoothly according to a pre-arranged plan.

As testimony to the enthusiasm generated in the independent cage circuit, there are so many teams this year that the league had to be divided in half. There are 16 teams this season, twice as many as there were two years ago.
