

Renowned chemist to fill chair

One of the world's foremost organic chemists will come to the University next fall to fill the Robert A. Welch Chair in Chemistry.

Dr. Paul D. Bartlett will be leaving Harvard, where he is Erving Professor of Chemistry, to come here and fill the position created last spring by a grant from the Robert A. Welch foundation of Houston.

"Dr. Bartlett is one of the foremost practitioners of physical organic chemistry," said Chemistry chairman

Dr. Bill Smith. "His record in research and teaching is recognized throughout the world."

Chancellor James M. Moudy, said, "Chemistry already ranks as one of the outstanding departments on campus. Dr. Bartlett's presence will add to its luster both on campus and throughout the nation."

Elected to the National Academy of Sciences in 1947, Dr. Bartlett was awarded the National Medal of Science in 1968. He has been on the faculty at Harvard since 1934.

Within the last decade, he has accepted lectureships and visiting professorships at Yale, Stanford, Chicago, Virginia, Washington and Wisconsin universities. He has also held brief lectureships at the Universities of Leningrad, London and Tubingen.

He holds 17 patents and has published over 150 research papers in chemical journals.

Dr. Bartlett has received honorary degrees from Amherst, the University of Chicago, University of Paris and University of Montpellier in France.

Social stigma haunts rape victims

By MARY MASON

"Rape is the sort of crime people don't want to talk about said Roy Martin, minister to the university.

It is difficult for a woman to openly discuss a rape attack because she fears bad reactions from society, he said. "But her silence is the greatest protection the rapist has."

Martin encourages a rape victim to report the attack not only for this reason, but because she will need a great deal of help both physically and psychologically in coping with the situation.

"Often the psychological trauma of having to bear a rapist's child can be very dangerous," he said. He said he feels help for the victim should cover a broad spectrum, from counseling to planned parenthood agencies for those who wish to have abortions.

But prevention as well as treatment needs emphasis in dealing with the problem, he said. Martin said he thinks women should never take foolish risks, and if possible they ought to take a course in self-defense.

Martin brought up some points not usually mentioned when discussing rape. Attacks are frequently attempted by someone known to the victim, including such people as a step-father, cousin or uncle, he said.

In some instances a woman helps provoke the attack, he said. "There are people who want to be victims. They do things calculated to set-off the attack."

Treatment and rehabilitation of the rapist need vast improvement, Martin said. "Americans are smarter at trading in automobiles than in dealing with criminals."

The rapist is a sick person and needs treatment as such, he said. In the past penalties for a crime such as rape have been very severe, Martin said.

Sensationalism of rape is a reflection of American attitudes, Martin said. "Rape is a traumatic crime and Americans are very traumatic about anything concerning sex."

'Future Shock' author to speak tonight

Alvin Toffler, author of "Future Shock," will speak in Ed Landreth Auditorium tonight at 8 p.m.

Toffler's book was a bestseller in 1970. It deals with the impact of high speed change on the individual.

The title refers to the disease of those who are overwhelmed by this rapid change. Toffler terms it the "dizzying disorientation brought on by the premature arrival of the future."

It results in both physical illness and psychological disturbance, and is fast becoming a common malady in our society, Toffler said.

Following his speech there will be a reception in the lobby of Jarvis Dormitory.

Toffler describes himself as a "social futurist." He has served as consultant to the Institute for the Future and many other leading corporations and organizations.

He is former editor of Fortune magazine, and has written for such publications as Playboy, Life, Readers Digest and Saturday Review.

In addition to writing a previous book, "The Culture Consumers," Toffler has edited a collection of essays on urban education titled, "The Schoolhouse in the City."

The collection won the 1969 Award of the National Council for the Advancement of Educational Writing.

Toffler is currently writing another book, telling how schools and colleges can be changed to meet student demands for a better education.

Sober commentary

'Hundred proof campus' nixed

The University was officially declared dry in regard to alcohol by Elizabeth Proffer, dean of students, at the Oct. 4 Faculty Senate meeting.

Many students had hoped that the recent law granting adult rights and responsibilities to 18-year-olds would prompt a change in the University policy concerning alcohol on campus; however, this change has been bottled-up.

Mrs. Proffer cited two points for the continuation of past policy, the implications of the new law to education and the University's status as a private institution.

"Higher education doesn't know what the implications of the new law granting adult status to 18-year-olds will be in regard to the operations of universities," said Mrs. Proffer.

Educational concerns toward alcohol on campus could center on the responsibility of the student. How will students conduct themselves if given the opportunity to imbibe alcohol on campus?

This question may be partially answered by simply examining student actions at the University in the past. Legal or not, students living in the dorms have drunk and will continue to drink alcohol in their rooms.

Legalizing alcohol on campus probably would increase the use of alcohol. But chances are that once the novelty wore off, the use of alcohol would diminish to or close to the pre-legalization level.

The idea of students staggering to class once alcohol becomes legal on campus is not applicable. If that scenario were possible, the situation would already exist with the students who live off campus.

The University is a private institution, and so it may dictate its own policy for student on-campus life. This dictation of policy is one factor in the exodus of students from on-campus dorms to off-campus apartments and houses.

During the Faculty Senate meeting, Mrs. Proffer said better housing options were needed to raise dorm occupancy. She added, "We should not make judgments on how the student lives."

To treat students as adults would be to "not make judgments on how the student lives." To offer better housing options would be to treat students as adults, responsible adults.

And if students are to be treated as adults, isn't enforcing restrictions based on the morality of previous generations inconsistent with adult treatment?

Editor:

For first place, next dubious achievement award I would like to nominate the TCU post office. After I first rented my box I was told that I was the third person and would have to be moved. So I was moved, not exactly happily, to another box. My boyfriend moved into the box with me, and everyone was happy.

It wasn't long before we were getting mail for another person. Heavens! a third person in the box. When the post office was informed of this the third person was promptly moved.

Within days we were happily gifted with a fourth person. The post office says they have sent notice after notice to this person to come to the window, but he fails to appear. It does seem odd that none of these notices have ever appeared in the box.

During all of this, most of my mail (especially that from University offices) was still being delivered to the old box. Personal correspondence was crammed into the new box with a warning to "inform all correspondents of correct address."

I'm sure that I am not the first person who has had trouble with the TCU post office. Is it too much to ask that I could be one of the last?

Editor:

One of the current concerns of the University is the trend towards off-campus living and the resulting empty rooms on campus. The Future Priorities Committee report quotes a source that states, "Empty dorms are a loss that cannot be measured solely in dollars and cents."

I agree, there is a lot that a student can get from living on-campus, but what can be done? The Priorities Committee report suggests that "...TCU should try to create the conditions that will attract students to campus housing. . . ." Dean Proffer echoes this sentiment in saying that better housing options are needed to raise dorm occupancy. This is fine, but it is not put into practice.

A student's dorm room is not only a bedroom, but is primarily a living room. Current university policy governs the use of the student's one claim to property on campus, specifically the popular examples of rules governing visitation and alcohol. These rules do not create conditions that will attract students to on-campus living. Granted, these are by no means the only reasons that people are moving off campus.

New ideas and concepts should be experimented with, in an effort to increase the student's experience at school, but the rules concerning alcohol and visitation seem to be indicative of an overall attitude.

The Priorities Committee has suggested that, "Rules and policy should be formulated closer to student lifestyles. Instead of being devised as a set of 'ethical thoughts' policies should be evaluated in terms of community responsibility."

Dean Proffer has said, "We should not make judgments on how the student lives." If these very honorable intentions are implemented, I feel that students would have more interest in living on campus. Nobody likes to sign their rights away.

Don't rain on my parade

Football fanatics from Austin, Tex. and Norman, Okla. invaded Dallas Friday and joined with local hellraisers, the Dallas police and a steady downpour to produce a most bizarre Texas-OU weekend.

As things began to roll, threats came from the sky, which was filled with black clouds that bode no good. Other threats came from the rumor mill, where word was spreading that the Dallas police were armed with shotguns and orders to shoot first and ask questions later.

The clouds made good on their threat, as the rains came steadily, turning back all but the most dedicated fans. The shotgun squad never materialized, but Commerce Street was crawling with police, and some didn't share the fun.

"I've never seen so many cops in my life," said one of the early celebrants, when the law officers outnumbered everyone else about two-to-one.

"We enjoy it," said one of the more jovial police early in the evening. "This right here is great. Give 'em couple hours and it won't be as fun. The rain is going to keep a lot of people out of trouble."

The fun was kind of an insane, yet truly American, fun. All evening, people would just wander up and down Commerce, consuming great quantities of liquor and voicing their sentiments about Saturday's Texas-Oklahoma football game.

It wasn't always clean. Chants broke out frequently about the speech habits of the two schools, and buttons expressed the same idea.

Police kept things moving, and wouldn't let the people stay under the canopies where it was dry. "You're in a bad place to be drunk," said one officer to a couple that came in out of the rain.

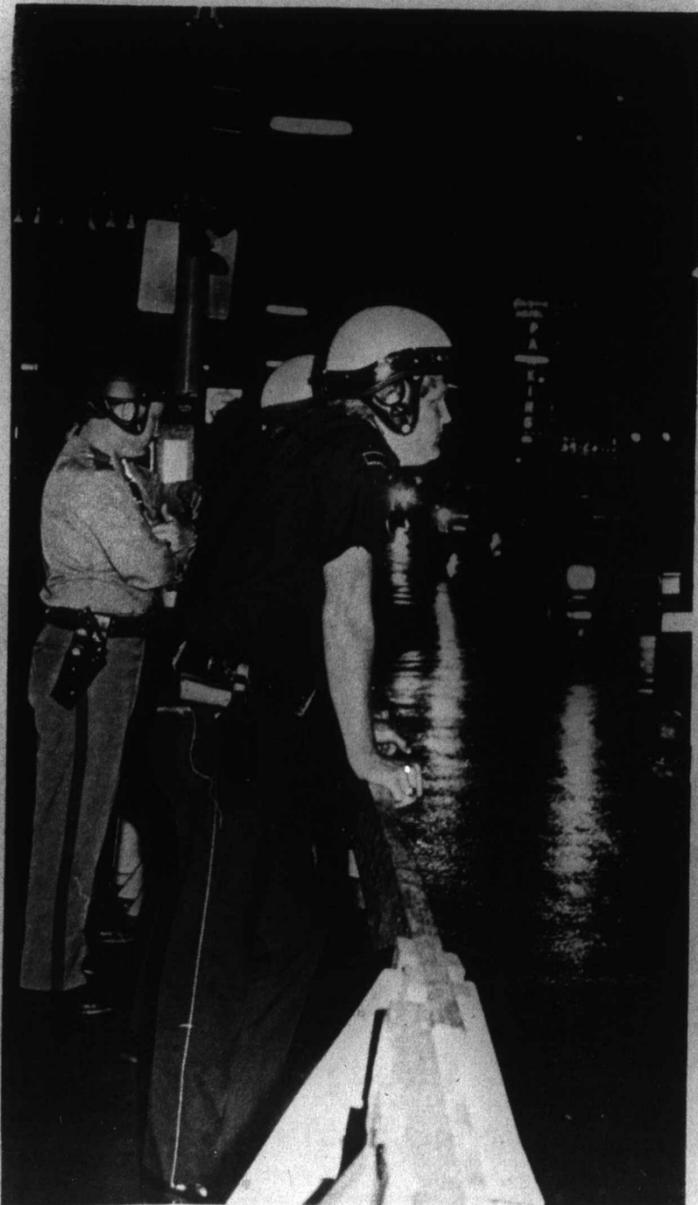

One UPI reporter was arrested because he chose not to move along with the crowd. Some 140 other people had a little too much to drink and got arrested, usually after throwing a couple of punches.

The police seemed to make a point of treating the arrested people a little roughly. That and the rain seemed to put a damper on the fun and hold things to a minimum.

Hundreds of cars paraded down the street, honking their horns while the passengers made gestures out the windows and shouted at the people on the sidewalks.

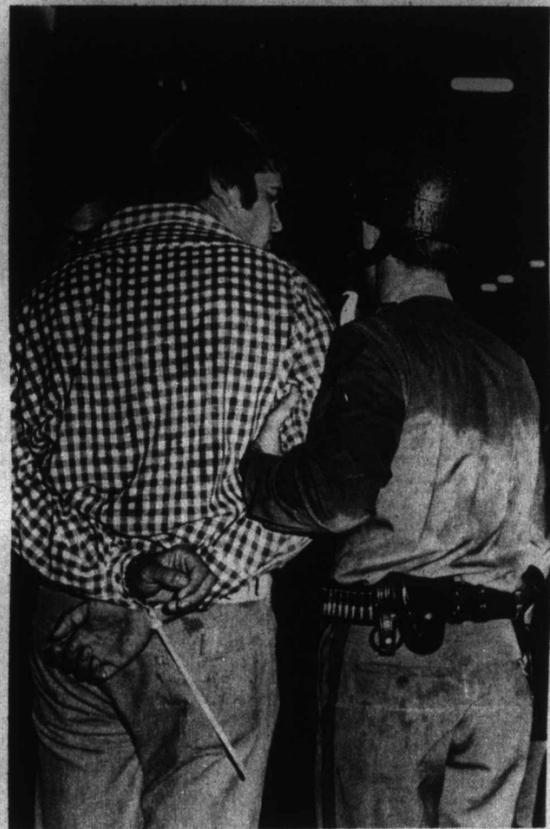

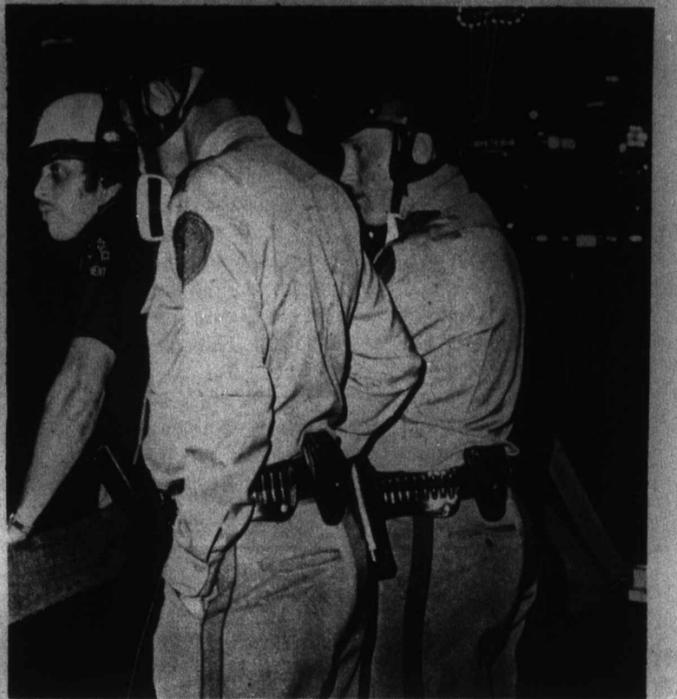

There was a strange element of fun in the whole affair, but you invariably came away wondering if a silly football game was worth it all.

Ahoy Mate! If you like the water and the outdoors, there might be a club forming just for you.

Fred Querens, a sophomore pre-dental student, and Barton Lorvert, a freshman geology student, are trying to form a TCU sailing club. A club has been in existence for two years, but with the departure of seniors last semester the club has "disbanded."

"We are trying to get in touch with previous members, and create an interest in the club among the students," explained Querens. The faculty adviser again will be Dr. S. Allen Self, Business Management Department chairman.

Last year the club was furnished boats by the Fort Worth Boat Club, free of charge. The University does not provide funds for the club.

"This year we are going to try and get the administration to back us financially," said Querens.

Last year a TCU sailing team won the silver cup at the Texas A&M Sailing Regatta. The main goal of this year's team is to defend the cup.

Everyone is invited to join. No experience is required, and if there is ample participation, sailing lessons may be offered.

Hajek's young golfers try for SWC fall title

Those college football folks tired of watching flying pigskins are offered an alternative this week as the Southwest Conference's nine golf teams hold their annual version of Oktoberfest.

This orgy's called the third annual Southwest Conference Fall Golf Tournament and it unfolds tomorrow and Thursday at Dallas' Brookhaven Country Club.

A trio of winners will be named after completion of the 54-hole tournament. Last year Houston won titles in all three categories—team match, four-ball and two-ball.

"We're a lot younger this year," says Frog link instructor Ted Hajek, "but we're also a lot better. We recruited five freshmen this year and they're all looking pretty good.

"Last year Marc Trout was a freshman and now he's just coming into his own."

Trout's the golf team's No. 1 man followed by junior Sale Omohundro. Freshman Kevin Grunewald of Grand Prairie, 7-AAAA's district medalist in high school, and fellow first-year man Bill Morrill of Western Hills round out the top four.

Texas and Houston are favored in the tournament, which opens tomorrow with 8 a.m. teeoff time.

Changes blowing in Frog wind

By BUD KENNEDY

After getting spanked the last time they wandered out of their own neighborhood, Billy Tohill's tykes have gotten a bit smarter.

They got a good paddling on the road from the Ohio State Buckeyes and Arkansas Razorbacks, so last week they set up camp at home to entertain their next conference and non-conference opponents.

Trap number one succeeded Saturday night as the TCU Frogs lured Idaho's Vandals into their den of iniquity and smashed their candy canes 30-14. Trap number two is set this week as the Purples prepare for a visit from their country neighbors, the Texas Aggies.

The Aggies drop in at Amon Carter Stadium Saturday for a 2 p.m. kickoff and could face a slightly different Frog team from the one that whopped Idaho. There are three new faces in practice this week and Tohill threatens to send any of the trio into the thick of play.

"We've made a few changes," Tohill announced yesterday after checking out the movie version of the Frog-Vandal matchup. "We've moved up three freshmen.

"They're in backup roles right now but that role will be pretty short. Unless we get a consistent performance from the people that are in there now they'll be in pretty quick."

Tailback Chuck Boyd, guard Jerry Caillier and tackle Scott O'Glee form the threesome, all brought up from TCU's freshmen squad to join first-year defensive back Roy Leach.

Boyd steps in at third-team tailback behind Ronnie Littleton and Kent Waldrep. Littleton trotted 18 times for 107 yards and one tally in the Idaho win to lead all Frog rushers in his first game at the spot.

"We got out there and played about 10 minutes," said Tohill, "then we just wallered around. In the fourth quarter we decided we'd better score again so we did.

"The defense played fairly consistently. They got a lot of yards against us passing but they were throwing a lot of dumps and a lot of delays in front of our linebackers. Every time they threw long it was intercepted."

Besides Littleton's five-yard run, tailback Danny Scott scored from 34 yards out and flanker Steve Patterson ran the reverse in from 15 yards away and hauled in a 26-yard toss from Kent Marshall for the other Frog TDs. Kicker Berl Simmons broke the TCU career record with his 20th field goal, a 36-yard jobbie early in the second quarter.

Lots of big plans went awry for Southwest Conference teams Saturday, but a 52-13 debacle in the Cotton Bowl overshadowed the others.

Texas' Longhorns got their little fingers stomped and fell to Oklahoma by the largest difference ever in their annual Dallas meeting.

The Texas Aggies saw their upset plans go poof late in their match with Texas Tech at Lubbock. Ditto for Baylor's Bears, whose blazing air attack couldn't match Arkansas' ground game. Despite having their sideline swamped with Catholic priests in an attempt to "outspiritualize Notre Dame," the Rice Owls saw their last mass Saturday night.

OKLAHOMA 52, TEXAS 13—In allowing the third largest score by an opponent in their history, and the largest since shortly after the turn of the century, the 'Horns were outplayed, outmanned and embarrassed by the Sooners, bucking for a boost in the national polls.

The backbreaker for the Orange came on a 63-yard touchdown pass from Oklahoma quarterback Steve Davis to speedster Billy Brooks in the final seconds of the opening half. It gave the Big Red a 21-6 halftime advantage and the momentum to romp to the biggest OU win over Texas in history.

Split end Tinker Owens fooled the Texas backfield twice to harbor touchdown passes from Davis of 40 and 63 yards in the early going. Sandwiched in between were two Billy Schott field goals that kept the Texans in the game until Brooks, subbing for Owens, put it out of reach.

Soccer squad breaks slump

Soccer

TCU's soccer squad scratched together its second win of the season Saturday, slapping LeTourneau 5-2 in Longview. Mario Quinones paced the Frogs with two goals and Mark McClintock, Jeff Peterson and Rex Bell added single markers to raise the team's mark to 2-3.

Saturday at 2 p.m. SMU's soccer team visits and the Frogs may have a new home. "If we can get it by then," says coach Pat Craig, "we'll set up and play on the intramural field in Worth Hills.

"We think moving onto campus will help us a lot. We can get people to come out and see us. It'll be a good thing."

Cross country

TCU's cross country squad hosts a five-team meet Saturday here at Worth Hills Golf Course.

Gun time is 10:30 a.m. for the meet, which includes SMU, Tarleton State, Howard Payne and Angelo State. SMU's Mustangs are rated the strongest team.

Guy Shaw Thompson's Frogs are hoping for another slick showing by sophomore Raleigh Green, who finished second in a recent three-mile meet at Ranger.

TEXAS TECH 28, TEXAS A&M 16—The Red Raiders' sputtering offense left it up to the defense Saturday night and the result was Tech's first league win and the Aggies' initial loop loss.

Defensive end Tommy Cones pulled down a visitor's pass in the final minutes and covered 44 yards of the Jones Stadium floor in Lubbock, setting up Tech's last counter and wrapping up a victory over the upset-minded Ags.

The Tech defense also had arranged the two first-half markers that gave the hosts a 13-0 lead at the half. Each team gained nine points in the third stanza, setting the stage for the tight finish.

ARKANSAS 13, BAYLOR 7—Dickey Morton did it. That's all you can say when the boy toted the ball for 271 yards and scored twice on jaunts of 68 and 81 steps.

Bear field general Neal Jeffery connected on 15 of 17 passing attempts in the first 30 minutes for 230 yards, but only a seven-yard run by Gary Lacy could cross the opponents' goal.

Lacy's score tied the game at 7-7 after Morton's 68-yard excursion had given the visitors from the Hills an early edge. Morton struck again before the half and the scoring was over.

NOTRE DAME 28, RICE 0—Ninth-ranked Notre Dame had little trouble with their hosts, despite the "odds" against them.

The Irish scored one touchdown in each quarter with fullback Wayne Bullock marking up two. Rice's deepest penetration came on a second-half surge that died due to an interception inside the Irish 20.

Fencing

The Frog fencers got into action with an AFLA meet last Saturday in the Rickel Center gym along with five other teams and emerged with some good finishes.

Three of the TCU fencers were included in a four-way tie for first place in women's open foil. The succeeding fence-off left Jeannette Duke with a second, Judy DeName in third and Beck Field in fourth place. In novice foil, Judy DeName captured first place while Lynn Totten was tying Lynn Cottingham for third.

The TCU Invitational Intercollegiate Fencing Tournament will be held this Saturday and Sunday in the Rickel Center. Starting time will be 8:30 a.m. both days.

Riflery

TCU's riflers opened regular conference action Saturday with a 2773-2623 win over cross-county rival UTA. The win upped the Purples' winning streak to 26 matches and left coach George Beck's won-lost mark at 31-5.

"We ought to be shooting better than 2800 this year," said Beck after the firing quieted. "We made some mistakes. But I feel pretty good about our chances this year."
