

PW residents' fears calmed

By TOM BURKE

Pete Wright will almost surely stay open next semester, Dr. Howard G. Wible, vice chancellor and provost, told the dorm council last night.

Dr. Wible said there is only a slim chance the residents will be moved out before the end of spring semester.

However, Dr. Wible was "almost positive" that as of next fall, Pete Wright would no longer be a residence hall.

The need for more office space sparked consideration of closing Pete Wright down as a dorm, Dr. Wible said.

Some residents didn't seem too interested in this aspect of the situation. They wanted to know why they weren't told about the possible closing of the dorm at the beginning of the semester.

Dr. Wible answered, "I told Bob Neeb, director of Residential Living and Housing, to tell the men in Pete Wright that possibly in the spring that they might have to move. I didn't want anything sprung on them." He added, "What was told to you I don't know."

Neeb said he and Dr. Wible had agreed that the students should be told that closing the dorm was under consideration. He said he considered it adequate that he talked to the residents Oct. 16.

Dr. Wible told the students he had told Neeb the students should be informed as soon as they arrived on campus.

The residents responded by saying all they heard was rumors, and no official word came from the administration.

Tom Hagen, president of the dorm council, said, "No one mentioned anything to me."

Senior Brad Trow said, "I was here in the summer and I heard that the dorm was going to be closed. I don't see how I can trust you (Dr. Wible), not as a person, but because you are a part of the administration, when you say that the dorm will be open in the spring."

Dr. Wible said he would probably be the person who makes the decision on closing the dorm. He said in the event that Dr. Thomas B. Brewer, vice chancellor and dean of the University, disagrees with his choice, Chancellor James M. Moudy will make the final decision.

He also said that costs could rule out any decision that is made.

The residents also asked Dr. Wible to pass on their suggestions to others in the administration and asked for assurance that they would be considered. Wible said he would comply with their requests.

The residents left the meeting with doubts still about the future of their "home" but as some of the residents commented, "We understand the situation better now."

Debate eyes impeachment pros, cons

By BRUCE S. JASURDA

"How can we teach ethics in our school system with a man like Richard Nixon in office?" questioned Bill Stotesbery, president of the House of Student Representatives, arguing for the President's impeachment.

Stotesbery teamed with Jim Luck, director of forensics, to oppose Dan C. Heldman, assistant professor of government, and H. Carter Burdette, a Fort Worth attorney, in a Forums-Forensics debate on the question of impeachment Tuesday evening.

Luck initiated the debate proceedings saying, "Foreign affairs students will look back and say the current administration has done an inadequate job. They will also look back and see that the impeachment of Richard M. Nixon was a necessity."

Luck indicated this to be the appropriate action in this "time of political strife."

"The President can't be trusted. We should not allow this man to remain in office. Impeachment is a serious action and should not be taken lightly. In Nixon's case, however, several of his actions warrant the initiation of impeachment proceedings," Luck said.

Burdette followed Luck by saying a few years ago the subject of impeachment would have been an incredible one to discuss. "Those who are aware of the facts still find it difficult to believe that Nixon should be impeached."

"We've got to be very careful to review the facts and base our judgments and actions on the context of the matter rather than emotions," Burdette said.

"Impeachment is a grave and unique governmental institution.

Let us hope that we never have to resort to it. In this case, however, it may be necessary to employ such measures," Stotesbery said.

"He (Nixon) has constantly aborted the laws of the United States. His efforts to impede the Watergate inquiries were an indication of his disregard for the law," he said.

Heldman, in a tone of acquiescence, said, "As of yet, no evidence has been uncovered which would indicate that an indictable crime has been committed.

"Maladministration was left out of the Constitution by our founding fathers because they felt it was too difficult a charge to define," said Heldman. "If members of the judicial and executive branches were subject to the whims of a Congress who threatened impeachment for every little disagreement, we would be left with little more than a legislative tyranny."

Heldman cautioned, "Consider the facts here not the allegations. Consider the evidence presented and not the heat of politics. Should we impeach a man because we would not buy a used car from him? I say no."

The audience voted against impeaching Nixon at the debate's end.

Jaywalking costly

Seventeen dollars and fifty cents doesn't seem like much to many students, but if you don't have that kind of pocket change, you'd better not jaywalk on University Drive.

That's the amount it will cost you for not using the new campus crosswalk.

Fort Worth Police officers T.A. Tucker and D.R. Hunnicutt issued tickets to both motorists and pedestrians Wednesday morning and they plan to be back.

"Giving students jaywalking tickets should make them more aware of the hazards of jaywalking," said Tucker. "I believe that we have had around 19 or 20 fatalities involving vehicles and pedestrians this year and that's entirely too many," he said.

"We're also checking for 'John Doe' warrants on delinquent tickets when we stop a motorist," Tucker said. A motorist violates the law by not stopping at the crosswalks while a pedestrian is in the street, he said.

"If a student is out in the street and a car goes on, it violates the law. A student has to be out in the street for the motorist to be in violation.

"The international crosswalk signs are out there for the motorists to see and the motorists must give pedestrians the right of way," Tucker said.

Students examine the equipment, a radar gun and a motorcycle.

Crosswalk commentary

Smile! You're on candid radar

Fort Worth's finest surprised both motorists and pedestrians on Wednesday morning. The police officers set up a radar trap by the new Hollywood crosswalk and began to ticket motorists who were exceeding the speed limit.

Motorists weren't all that the police were watching for. Jaywalking students were also on the officer's ticket menu.

Many students may feel that some sort of Frankenstein monster has been electrified into existence with the police enforcing pedestrian crosswalk regulations. But like it or not,

Frankenstein is probably here to stay.

Pedestrian safety involves responsibility on the part of the motorist and the pedestrian. If a few students are ticketed for jaywalking, it will be a good shock treatment to keep other students in the crosswalk (although the ticketed students probably would not agree).

And while some students are paying their jaywalking fines, many more motorists will be facing speeding tickets.

This kind of police enforcement of the traffic laws is what the crosswalk really needs. When people realize the law will be enforced, the regulations will be followed. And when the regulations are followed, the safety of the crosswalk will greatly improve.

Editor:

I would like to make a few comments regarding the recent election for Homecoming "person." Listening to student reaction around the campus I have found that this crisis over the newly elected Homecoming favorite is the worst thing to hit TCU since the bookstore started closing Saturday mornings.

Thursday night the 10 o'clock news on several local TV stations carried comments from outraged students who deplored the break from the "tradition" of a female queen. One girl commented that Miller won simply because not enough people got out and voted.

Wake up TCU, get with the program. Sure, Miller won for just the reason the girl said, too few students voted simply because they thought surely one of the girls would win. No one counted on anything like this.

When I first arrived at TCU in September 1966, an upperclassman said to me, "This is Texas Christian University, where Christian is our middle name and Apathy is our claim to fame."

I left for three years in 1968, returning in 1971 to find the only change was the student turnover and the new Sid Richardson building. Student apathy was the same as it had been. Now, over seven years from first coming here, apathy is still the biggest student problem, ranking just above the new parking regulations.

If and when TCU closes its doors, will anyone care? The faculty and staff will, I'm sure, but the student? I wonder.

Are popularity contests still popular?

By STEVE BUTTRY
News Editor

A referendum on popularity contests will face students Nov. 28 when the student body votes on student officers and constitutional amendments.

The House of Student Representatives voted Tuesday to put the referendum on the ballot so it can get an idea of how the students feel. The result of the vote won't be binding on the House; it will just tell the members how students feel.

Town student Jeanne Bunnell proposed putting the issue before the students, delaying a bill to do away with homecoming honoree, Mr. and Ms. TCU and TCU Sweetheart.

Miss Bunnell said Steve Miller's race for homecoming honoree had upset students so much that, "my constituents had the nerve to call me." The remark brought ripples of laughter from the room.

Miller told the House, "I don't feel the students are at this time rational enough to consider something as earth-shaking as popularity contests. We should let the smoke die down and let the football team get over their loss."

The motion to put it on the ballot passed 25 to 10.

President Bill Stotesbery said he had been told the Courses of Study Committee had rejected all of the University Council's suggestions for revising the new core curriculum.

A bill to reduce the number of meal tickets required for dorm students was referred back to committee. A recommendation from Permanent Improvements that $3,000 be given to the Radio-TV-Film Division was rejected and sent back to committee with instructions to investigate other money sources.

Traffic Committee chairman David Bennett moved that the House request that police officers patrol University Drive for speeders during the next two weeks. The motion passed and police are complying.

Town student Mike Garrett tried to put another referendum before the students—asking their opinions on the yearbook-magazine situation—but he got defeated, 22 to 8.

Treasurer Steve Oatman, arguing against the referendum, said, "I want to give the magazine every break I can. I think we should wait till we see the second issue."

A resolution clarifying the use of the pass-no credit option passed on a voice vote. The resolution asks that honor societies state how they will view P's under the system.

A change in standing rules passed, stating that bills defeated by committees cannot be brought up in the House unless the rules are suspended.

Jim Marston argued against the rule change, saying it could "allow the will of the majority to be trampled over by a small committee just for the sake of streamlining."

Calvin East proposed an amendment that would have required a two-thirds vote of a committee to keep a bill from coming up in the House.

East's amendment was defeated, but the rule change passed 19 to 7. Several other bills were introduced and referred to committees.

Freshmen Keith Clark and Diane Dowdey introduced a salute to Miller for his conduct in running for and withdrawing from the homecoming honoree race. The salute was accepted 13 to 9 with four abstentions.

The House will meet in a special meeting at 5 p.m. today. The Finance Committee will hold hearings on the budget in Student Center room 211 at 3:30 p.m. today.

'Horn boss cautious, optimistic

By PHIL JOHNSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Darrell Royal, who somehow manages to coach the Texas Longhorns to Southwest Conference football championships with monotonous regularity, would seem to be pretty secure in his position.

But he has one particular paranoid fear: he can't shake the feeling that somebody's always following him.

And that's the reason he's not about to take anything for granted when Billy Tohill's gang of purple upset-makers invade Austin's Memorial Stadium Saturday.

"Sure, there's a possibility of an upset," Royal exclaims with vigor. "It's happened in the past and it's going to happen in the future. The only question is when—and I sure hope it's not this week."

Rolling along in first place with a 5-0 loop mark and needing only one more win to clinch a sixth consecutive conference title, though, the Steers might be due for a little lapse in concentration.

"I shouldn't think so," says the 'Horn trail boss. "My memory isn't so short that I can't remember TCU pullin' upsets on us."

Right, Coach, and you must be talking about 1967 when the Purples came back from Austin with a 24-17 triumph to brighten former Frog coach Fred Taylor's maiden 4-6 season.

"No," says Royal. "I'm talkin' about '61 when we were 27-point favorites."

That was the year of the celebrated Frog touchdown on a Sonny Gibbs-to-Buddy Iles aerial national championship and into a tie with Arkansas for the SWC crown.

This year, TCU will again be forced to face the Longhorns without No. 1 quarterback Kent Marshall, who ironically hails from Austin.

"I think it's a tough break for Marshall," Royal says of the TCU senior who has never enjoyed the privilege of starting against his hometown team. "He's a real good competitor and it's just too bad he has to be out again."

"But we won't change our defense this week because I don't expect TCU to change their offense just on account of losing Marshall and having to use Lee Cook. It's simply too late in the season to try to do anything like that."

LEE COOK
New man under that netted TCU a 6-0 victory. But more important to Royal, it knocked his team right out of the
