TCU charged with race bias EEOC to investigate claim

By LISA DEELEY

The University chapter of the NAACP has filed a charge of discrimination against the University. The complaint was filed with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) Wednesday, April 17.

The charge, signed by Ray Turner, president of the NAACP chapter, reads: "This college discriminates against Negroes and Spanish-surnamed Americans in its recruitment, hiring, qualifications, and placement. Caucasian professors also use derogatory racial language in classes."

"We've talked, we've talked, we've continued to talk, but something has to be done," Turner said.

A notice, which includes Turner's name, the charge and the place of the charge, has been sent from the EEOC to the University. E. Q. Swenson, personnel director, said that on Monday, April 22, "I did get a notice from the EEOC from a Ray Turner." He had been out of town, he said, and had not contacted Turner. "I did not know what their charge is," he said, "just that we've received notification. We don't know any of the details."

The EEOC was to have notified the University by April 27, 10 days following the charge.

Acting Chancellor Howard G. Wible said, "I haven't

Bronaugh Bridges, former president of NAACP, said

"investigators" from EEOC "will be sent here sometime soon." Turner said the University "will be asked to come to a conciliation table."

Equal Employment Officer Emily R. Howell from the federal agency said the case "will be investigated after a period of seven or eight months." The delay is "because of our backlog," she said.

After the investigation, she said, there will be an "attempt to get a voluntary agreement between EEOC, the University and the charging party. If we do not get a voluntary agreement, it could go to court."

The charging party could file the suit, Ms. Howell said, or the EEOC could. Turner's charge was filed with Ms. Howell at the EEOC District in Dallas.

The charge also includes confidential affidavits about discrimination on campus. Turner said EEOC told him "people have a tendency not to lie under oath" because of the threat of perjury.

"The EEOC is very adamant that if we feel any action was taken against us as a result of this charge," Turner said, the agency would help the NAACP preparing charges concerning that.

The University cannot escape the charges "by sudden mass hiring, although this may show good faith," he said.

Review period outlined

Council uncrams final exams week

By AL SIBELLO

Did you ever have one of those days when you had three finals, one on top of another? That doesn't have to happen anymore.

President Bruce Gibson told the House of Student Representatives Tuesday that the University Council had approved a House resolution which limits the number of final exams a student is required to take in one 24-hour period to two.

The policy would go into effect this semester. Each student must negotiate with his professors to reschedule exams before Review Week (May 6-10).

A bill passed by the House to eliminate classes on Thursday and Friday of Review Week was overruled by the Council. Instead, a compromise was reached which prevents professors from presenting any new information in the last hour of a course. That time must be used for review.

Muniz due here tonight for talk

Raza Unida gubernatorial candidate Ramsey Muniz will speak tonight at 7:30 in rooms 207-209 of the Student Center.

Professors will be asked to adhere to the latter ruling wherever possible this semester, but it will not be mandatory until the fall.

A letter from acting Chancellor Howard G. Wible to Gibson, read in part to the House, established that from the administration's "Only two exams per 24-hours"

point of view, the Bill of Student Rights and Responsibilities will continue to be in effect "as long as a good faith effort is being made" to finish work on a revised bill.

In the letter, Dr. Wible said, "I really don't see how some can claim there is a general lack of desire on the part of the administration to cooperate in the assurance of student rights."

Dr. Wible based his statement on a letter from Chancellor James M. Moudy, dated Feb. 6, 1974, when Dr. Moudy requested the committee to study the document be formed.

The chancellor wrote: "The committee should plan to complete its work before the end of the semester. Meanwhile, the administration will continue to acknowledge the existing Bill of Rights."

A resolution requesting the organization of a committee to evaluate extramural funding requests was passed by the House. The body also approved one recommending the formation of a residence hall association composed of the presidents of each dormitory to discuss housing policy and other related matters.

A bill seeking roll-call votes on any motion when requested by five or more members was sent to the Student Regulations Committee.

A bill proposing that students be allowed to "inspect any file in any University office" that is maintained on him was sent to the Student Affairs Committee. Both bills were submitted by town student Jeff Boggess.

A constitutional amendment seeking to decrease the percentage of signatures necessary on a petition requesting the recall of any student officer was voted on, but less than two-thirds of the House members were present. Since an amendment requires approval of two-thirds of the total membership of the House, the legislation was tabled until next week.

The House approved the nominations of David Davis, Bill

Curtis and Lyn Woody as full members of the University Council for next fall. Becky Rambin and Rick Sells were approved as alternates.

Donna Grimland was named Public Relations chairperson, and Bill Adcock and Victoria Powell were approved as Homecoming chairpersons.

UGLIES UNITE—Danny McCoy, TCU alumnus, insists that if all the ugly people would unite that Uglies Unlimited has the potential of becoming a majority movement. See story page 3.

Editor:

The front page of the Wednesday, April 17, issue of the Daily Skiff included a photograph of the brick being removed from the Tennis Pro Shop Building, and I am concerned that the article under the photograph was not complete and only included a portion of the information given your Skiff reporter.

The mortar used was not the color we requested, but the main information omitted from the written comment under the photograph was that the brick-laying job was inferior and substandard.

While it does not happen often, removing the brick completely from a job because of substandard work does happen frequently enough so that set and standard procedures are established.

It certainly does involve a lot of additional work, and I resent the implication in your article that we would require all of the additional work, inconvenience, and expense merely because the mortar color was very slightly off.

Unfortunately, an inferior bricklaying job is extremely permanent, and difficult to correct, unless all of the brick is removed immediately before the mortar sets too hard.

I think it extremely unfortunate that your reporter only quoted the portion of my comments to make the story read as she wished. It certainly was not a true representation of the facts.

R. E. Haubold, Director
Physical Plant

Editor's note: The Daily Skiff apologizes if the cutline under the photo in question gave the wrong impression, however the cutline did mention the work was being done free, thus implying the need for the "re-bricking" was not the University's fault.

Editor:

I would like to respond to Mr. Burke's article of April 23 referring to a move for my recall. Several members of the executive board and of the House were shocked, as was I, at the alleged quote that I felt that I had not done a good job. This I simply did not intend to say. Also, there were other quotes that were printed out of my intended context such as to change their meaning. I do not feel Mr. Burke accurately understood my comments.

As to the incident itself, I consider charges as serious as these nothing but cheap shots, when alleged by people who are unwilling to publicly commit their names. If these people firmly believed in what they alleged to be the truth and sincerely wanted these conditions changed, they should have come to me first with their frustrations, which they never did. At least they should have had the courage of their convictions and the honor to publicly commit their names to the allegations rather than hide under a cloak of anonymity.

I felt it important that these people be contacted to learn the specific nature of their complaints. In my conversation with these three, Anne Snell, Jeff Boggess and Tami Gant, I found that they felt that I was pro-administration.

My dealings with the administration this semester which have resulted in a limitation of the required number of finals a student may take in a twenty-four hour period, in creating mandatory review in every course and in securing the dropping of charges made against streakers, have clearly shown my allegiance with the students. Charged with not acting as the majority of students would want me to act, it was that same majority I sought to make heard by initiating the magazine-yearbook referendum.

I have and will continue to serve my office, the House, and the students of Texas Christian University to the best of my ability. I ask only that I be dealt with fairly and honorably.

Bruce Gibson
President
Student House of Representatives

Editor's note: The editor, author of the article and Bruce Gibson discussed the matter Wednesday for about one hour. The reporter's notes were checked and proved out that Gibson was not misquoted. Thus, the Daily Skiff stands behind the story. We are sorry Gibson feels the quotes gave some wrong impressions, but he was quoted accurately. The reporter says he understood completely what Gibson was referring to in the quotes and they were not quoted out of context. (Gibson met with the three representatives Tuesday behind closed doors. They all said they came away with a better understanding of the other's views, but none indicated a change of mind.)

Deadline set for award announcements

It's that time of year when every department, group and organization has its annual awards banquet. It is impossible for the Daily Skiff to run individual stories about each award winner, but the Daily Skiff also recognizes these winners should not be ignored.

Thus, the Daily Skiff will publish one story listing all award winners Friday, May 3, the last day of Daily Skiff publication.

All award winners' names should be submitted to the Daily Skiff, Dan Rogers room 115, no later than noon Wednesday, May 1. The Daily Skiff will keep the names of winners not yet announced by Wednesday confidential until the publication of the story May 3.

Included with the submitted names should be the name of the award, what department or organization presented the award, when the award was presented and the winner's classification. Any name submitted without this information will not be used.

REMEMBER: Names will not be accepted after noon May 1. Any questions should be directed to the Daily Skiff editor.

Beauty is but skin deep

Give me your tired, your ugly

By AL SIBELLO

"For the Lord takes pleasure in His people; He will beautify the afflicted with salvation." — Psalms 149:4.

However, that is in the future tense, and some of us need to be beautified immediately. So in the meantime, an organization called Ugliers Unlimited is out to prove that the misshapen are just as capable and deserving of the equal rights denied them in favor of their more attractive counterparts.

The 300-member group was founded last Oct. 31 (Halloween) by 29-year-old Danny McCoy. He is a graduate of TWC, and holds a masters degree in education from TCU.

"Maybe when we're all together, no one will notice we're ugly," said McCoy.

UU considers itself the guardian of ugly human beings. It protests for "secretaries with warts, stewardesses with pimples, hostesses with lumps, salesmen with hooknoses, waitresses with varicose veins and clerks with dandruff."

The organization feels persons with an ill-favored appearance have been the recipients of employment and social discrimination. It claims, "Pretty prejudice is practiced daily by employers in all occupations."

Earlier this year, the group launched a campaign against American Airlines for allegedly refusing to hire more ugly stewardesses.

Walt Kistler, director of Flight Attendant Recruitment for the airline, told the picketers, "We don't expect beauty or perfection, but there are limits beyond which we don't go in making selections."

"It all started after my brother, Ron, applied for a job as a flight attendant," said McCoy. "Ron has a college degree and spent four years in the Air Force as an officer, so he's certainly qualified."

"But during the interview, the man asked Ron, 'Would you push back your hair and let me see how far back your hairline goes?' And as if that weren't enough, he also asked Ron, 'Your teeth are capped, aren't they?'"

"It so happens that Ron's hairline is beginning to recede and his teeth are capped. So what? So plenty. Ron was turned down by the airline for just those reasons," he said.

"That's not all. A friend of ours applied to the same airline. He couldn't even get past the interview stage because of a complexion problem—large pores."

"In addition, airline application blanks state that if you have distracting scars, moles, warts, or for women, excessive hair on the upper lip, you're not acceptable. Now what kind of qualifications are these?" he asked.

"We realize that airlines go by poundage, so they would prefer to have thin people, but how could moles, large pores or a receding hairline make someone a poor pilot, stewardess, or even flight attendant?"

McCoy also has a bone to pick with the federal government. He wants the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to extend its coverage to ugly people.

"The Commission already protects against job discrimination because of race, color, religion, sex or national origin. We just want to add appearance to that list," said McCoy.

People across the country write to the organization relating instances of discrimination. "One story is sadder than the next," said McCoy.

A taxi driver in Detroit, Mich., was turned down for a job as a bus driver because the interviewer put on his application that he had excessive freckles.

Another man wanted to be a policeman, but he was considered too short at five-foot seven.

"This young man actually beat his head against a wall so his head would swell to get an extra inch. He never made it," said McCoy sadly.

"And in another case, a young man was very competent—he had a college education and a successful businessman's job, but his face was disfigured in an auto accident and his bosses felt he no longer had a good public contact position. So he was let go," McCoy said.

It is UU's contention that there is a place for people like that, and it is not the unemployment line. They want people to look at others for what they are, and not for what they look like.

"Most of us think in terms of stereotypes," said McCoy. "The stereotypes aren't true, of course, but we're all guilty of thinking in those terms. How many times have we walked up to the handsome clerk rather than the ordinary looking one? How many times have we preferred to be around attractive people rather than plain ones?"

"Ugliers Unlimited wants to break the stereotyped thinking and give everyone—even ugly people—a chance to show what he or she has to offer the world," he said.

If you're thinking about joining UU, look in a mirror. If it cracks, quickly send $2 to "I'm Ugly", P.O. Box 16501, Fort Worth, Tex. 76133. You'll receive an essay titled "Living With Your Ugliness" and an official membership card. Also, you will be allowed to vote in the "Ugly Stick" competition which will honor the group's ugliest member.

But even if your face isn't an eyesore, and you haven't been discriminated against, your interest and support in the fight for equality will be gratefully appreciated.

It was our 16th president who said, "The Lord prefers common-looking people. That is the reason he makes so many of them."

GOPs seek screening role

WASHINGTON (AP)—House Republicans were trying on Wednesday to get the White House to agree to give the House Judiciary Committee a role in screening material subpoenaed for the impeachment inquiry.

Rep. Edward Hutchinson of Michigan, senior Republican on the Judiciary Committee, said after a caucus of Republican members of the panel that he would have minority counsel Albert Jenner sound out the White House.

Hutchinson and the other Republicans hope to avert a confrontation regarded as almost certain if the White House gives the committee transcripts of subpoenaed conversations with no opportunity to verify them.

Hutchinson refused to discuss what went on at the caucus but it was learned that most members President's Watergate lawyer, in screening the subpoenaed material to weed out any unrelated to the impeachment inquiry.

The Judiciary Committee is scheduled to meet at 10 a.m. on Thursday and is expected to approve a support a proposal under which Chairman Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J.; counsel John Doar; Hutchinson, and Jenner would join James St. Clair, the White House request for five more days to respond to the subpoena for tapes of 42 presidential conversations.

Guide being compiled

"Independent Studies Guide" is being prepared by Centennial College at Brachman Hall.

The guide will be an index to all independent study courses, both on- and off-campus, and to all faculty interested in supervising independent study. It will also include details on existing departmental work-study programs.

Letters and questionnaires about independent study have been sent to all University faculty by Centennial College. Not all faculty have turned them in, Dr. Richard Fenker, program coordinator said. He said he hopes to have the guide finished by next semester.

Frog netters butchered in Houston

By KIRBY RALSTON
Tut Bartzen's Purple netters returned from the Southwest Conference meet in Houston with their tails between their legs Tuesday afternoon—a day early.

The Frogs weren't scheduled back until last night after the meet, but since they didn't get past the first round there wasn't much point in hanging around the bayou.

"It just goes back to the same problem we've had all year—getting all the boys to play really well at the same time," Bartzen analyzed upon his return.

"This year, the only conference team we had a fighting chance at was Baylor. We really don't have the strength to challenge any Southwest Conference team. But next year when we have three more scholarships to give out, things could be different."

plains. "It's not like football, where if one team is leading another 47-0 it doesn't matter if the score ends up 47-7. In tennis, one match could cost a team the championship."
Houston's Cougars finish at the top of the league for 1974 with an impressive 47-2 mark. SMU is next at 40-9.
