Duke's on invitation list—again

By JUDY BERRY

The House of Student Representatives will recommend to Forums that David Duke be invited to speak on campus at the original fee of $800.

Although a fee reduction was considered, Bob Hampton, vice president of programming, phoned the grand dragon who said he "doesn't want to consider speaking for less than $800."

The resolution, which passed 27-9-1 in last Tuesday's House meeting, "recommends the Forums Committee to invite David Duke to campus and to pay him a $500 honorarium and also recommends Creative Programming to offer $300."

The decision to invite Duke to campus or not lies again with Forums and the Programming Council. Helen Snyder, chairperson of the Creative Programming Committee told the House she would push for the resolution within the two committees.

In other House action, a resolution to amend the Election Code was submitted by the Elections Committee. The resolution, which failed by a 16-18-0 vote, would have done away with the place system and required all candidates to run against each other. This system would have insured that no candidate could run uncontested and therefore, no one would be guaranteed a seat in the House before the election.

As amended, the resolution said that the place system "is conducive to confusion and a lack of political competition which is necessary for a truly representative House for the student body."

Becky Rambin, House secretary, said it is "easier to form a coalition with the place system because there is no way for the student body to vote against someone they don't want in the House."

The place system "pits strong people against strong people," thereby keeping strong leaders out of the House, Rambin said.

Jim Marston, chairperson of the Student Affairs Committee, said that the place system caused some confusion in the last election simply because it was new. "What is wrong with a coalition? Is it wrong to organize politically?" he said.

Marston said each person has his "own background and ideas" and that it was up to the majority of the voters whether or not the ideas are good ones. Because of the place system, there was "real politicking in the last election," he said.

The Academic Affairs Committee submitted two resolutions to the House for discussion.

One resolution stated "that students be represented on departmental advisory committees concerned with tenure and promotion of faculty members."

David Davis, chairperson of the Academic Affairs Committee, said "Faculty members are afraid of student input in the departmental structure." Davis said he wants students to have a lot to do with faculty members.

The resolution passed unanimously.

The second resolution supports the efforts of the Academic Affairs Committee to establish a faculty evaluation and to distribute its results to students and to finance the development of a surveying and reporting system up to $500.

A resolution to sponsor a needy child through the Christian Children's Fund at the rate of $15 a month was sent to the Finance Committee for more discussion.

Donna Dorsett stars in the title role of "Elizabeth the Queen," playing at the University Theatre through Dec. 8. Performances begin at 8:15 p.m. each night with a matinee Sunday at 2:15 p.m. The play also stars Paul Munger, Lee Ritchey, Cindy Melby, Jerry Abbott, David Kibee, Jack Hiatt, Charles Jamieson and Alan Mintz. Tickets for students are $1.

New job classification program

'Titles' system complies with HEW rules

Workers in the University's administration will now all receive the same titles—and the same pay—for the same type of work done.

The new job classification system is the first in the University's history, said E. Q. Swenson, personnel director. About 400 jobs were analyzed and named, he said.

Not all employees have received the same pay for the same type of work, said Mary Maddux, administrative secretary for Brite Divinity School. "This system insures they do," she said.

"It's an excellent thing to be done," she said. "Each job will receive, within reason, the same amount of pay."

Swenson said his office will recommend any pay changes to Chancellor James M. Moudy. He said he doubted there would be any demotions, but there may be some raises.

Maddux's job title will remain the same; "I don't know yet" if a raise is coming, she said.

The classification system will help the University "comply more fully" with requirements of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW). HEW requires the University submit an affirmative action report to prove there is no discrimination in hiring or pay.

Employees helped write the classification system, Swenson said. "We sent a job questionnaire" to the employees, he said.

"It was four pages in length. We asked specific questions and they responded."

"No one can describe a job better than the person who works it," Maddux said.

Editor:

I must say that I find Bruce Gibson's statement to the Skiff concerning the yearbook alternative and its lack of support naive to say the least, but that kind of statement seems to be typical for yearbook supporters.

Overall, Gibson would have us believe that for the "silent majority" a University yearbook would be the penultimate expression and fulfillment of their college experience. They can sign petitions, write letters, and generally rail at the oppressive policies of an unfeeling Status Quo.

Mr. Gibson's club, however, offers an alternative to those thousands of "concerned" students who feel that their place in posterity would be destroyed were there not a yearbook to enshrine forever in our minds, the visages of those who will be leaving, and those who will be left behind.

A referendum (which I filled out, and frankly never did figure out what I was voting for) is held before our eyes—a veritable mandate from the people; a message from downtrodden masses.

So, anyway, these folks put out a yearbook to appease those whose lives would be seriously affected by the absence of one, and no one signs up. Well no, immediately, Gibson states, "One of the problems was that it was so controversial."

This, says he, kept away people who ordinarily would have come if it had just been a publication from student services, or who were against the yearbook option. Come on, folks. Either people want yearbooks, or they don't. If they want them so much, why would no one pick them up in the past? Well, I don't know, but they want them, says the die-hard.

And also, if they really wanted yearbooks, wouldn't subscribing to the alternative one be a good way to show a real student mandate for a yearbook? Besides, if the need for one is really so great, students would line the halls to buy the Bryson Club's anyway.

Anyone who would like to argue in favor of the yearbook would have to show some kind of propensity that the student body would in practice support one. Past experience shows us a rather strong movement the other way. This new example only serves to confirm it.

Overall, there doesn't seem to be any reason to reinstate the yearbook. The supporters had a golden opportunity to show a need, but I guess it's too much to ask for someone to take positive action for something they "really believe in," aside from polls and theoretical justifications.

Frogs win one and lose one

By FRANK HOUX
Assistant Sports Editor

Thus far into the new basketball season, coach Johnny Swaim and his cagers have been to the plate twice and are batting .500.

After winning Saturday's opener 70-68 here against Pan American University, the Frogs fell to Oklahoma City University Monday night, 95-91.

The Monday night encounter was played at Oklahoma City's Fredrickson Field House, and the Okie fans saw two Chiefs score more than 20 points. Freshman Jonathan Manning tallied 22 points, mostly from way outside in the first half.

OCU's biggest weapon, however, was its tallest weapon. At 6-10, the tallest Chief was junior John Powell who ravaged the boards all night long and chunked in 24 points. He continually blocked shots of Purple shooters all evening.

Five Frog players went into double scoring figures. Bill Bozeat, also at 6-10, hit 18 points while Richard Johnson and Lynn Royal both scored 17. Thomas

RESULTS
FRIDAY—Pan American 78, SMU 60; Brigham Young 80, Texas 72.
SATURDAY—Murray State 88, Baylor 78; Arkansas 78, Rockhurst College 61; Rice 76, Wayland Baptist 54; TCU 70, Pan American 68; Texas A&M 84, Texas Lutheran 74.
MONDAY—Murray State 79, Texas 69; Oklahoma City 95, TCU 91; Texas Tech 98, Adams St. 72; Louisville 91, Houston 87; Missouri 92, Rice 67.

THIS WEEK'S SCHEDULE
TUESDAY—Houston Baptist at Texas A&M, SMU at North Texas.
WEDNESDAY—Arkansas at Mississippi State.
THURSDAY—Baylor at Oklahoma City, Texas at Centenary, SMU at Kansas State.
SATURDAY—Arkansas at Western Kentucky, Virginia Commonwealth at Baylor, Air Force at Rice, North Carolina at Houston, Texas Tech at Kansas State, Oral Roberts at Texas A&M, Oklahoma City at TCU, Texas at Mississippi.

Bledsoe threw in 11, and Teddy Jones made 10 points.

Royal led Frog scorers against Pan American with a total of 22. The opener also gave home fans the first look at the ball handling abilities of transfer Richard Johnson. Several times in the game, the Topeka, Kan., native fooled his teammates with his moves.

After the game Swaim said, "We're still getting used to him." The coach said earlier in the year that Johnson might hit some people in the face with the ball if players on both teams didn't stay alert. That almost happened to Royal once Saturday night.

After playing two games, Swaim has been fairly pleased with the effort put out by his players thus far.

"I think we beat a good team in Pan Am. And I was proud of 'em against Oklahoma City, too," he said.

"There were several times in the second half when we could have quit, but they never did. We had a chance to win it until 30 seconds were left."

Swaim added that although missed free throws hurt, other misses from the field were costly as well.

The Frogs get the chance for revenge at Daniel Meyer Coliseum Saturday night. OCU will be in town for the second of the traditional two Frog-Chief battles of the year. The evening is designated as T-Shirt Night, with the first 1,000 youngsters accompanied by an adult to receive a free TCU basketball T-shirt.

Porter leads way as swimmers lose

John Porter won the 200 freestyle and placed second in the 500 free, to highlight Frog performers in a dual meet with SMU one week ago, which the Frogs lost.

Rick Tillman won the 50-yard free, Bryan Austin won the 100 free and Irwin Sherman placed second in the 1,000 and 2,000-yard butterfly races.

Bears awake with crown

"If it can't be us, I'm glad it's Baylor" rang from college campuses from Lubbock to Houston over the holidays as the Baylor Bears woke up from an incredible dream to find the Southwest Conference championship in their laps.

The Bruins secured their first league title in 50 years with a 24-3 win over Rice Saturday in Waco. They had been assured of at least a tie for the crown, and a Cotton Bowl trip, when Texas clobbered A&M 32-3 on national television Friday. Houston, meanwhile, did not please Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl officials by taking a 30-14 shellacking from Tulsa Saturday at Tulsa.

Baylor finished the year with a 6-1 league mark, one game above Texas and the Aggies, and 8-3 for the year. Texas, 8-3, will go to the Gator Bowl, but A&M, also 8-3, will spend the holidays at home. Houston's mark is 8-3, too.

The Bears face Penn State Jan. 1, the first Cotton Bowl in seven years without Texas involved.

JV downs Richland, bashed by McLennan

Danny Whitt's Junior Varsity cagers have compiled a 1-1 record just like their big brothers on the varsity team.

Saturday afternoon, the Wogs pulled the rug from under Richland Jr. College 80-70, in a come-from-behind effort. At one point they had fallen as far behind as 13 points.

Unfortunately, the JV, too, fell to their opponents Monday night as Waco's McClennan County Jr. College sacked the future Frogs 100-74.

Women cagers lose

The women's basketball team lost a three-part scrimmage to powerful Tarleton State Monday night at Daniel-Meyer Coliseum. The scores were 30-18, 30-21 and 34-21.

Jr. College in Corsicana tonight.

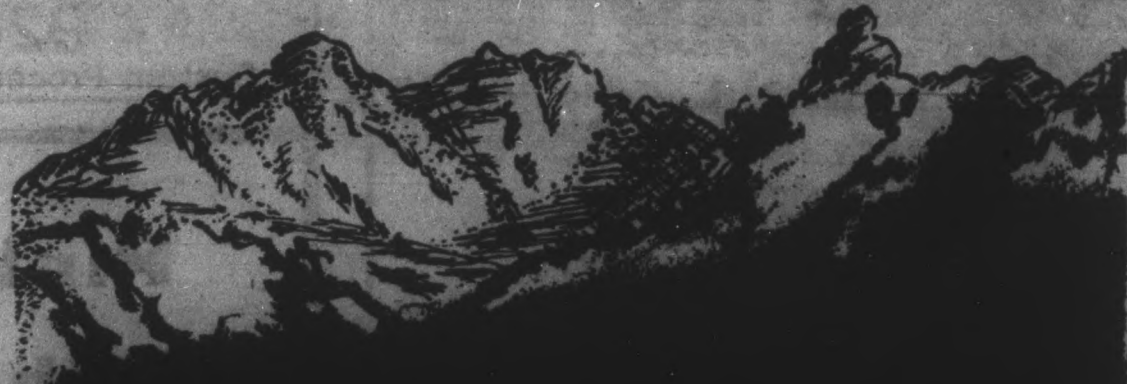

Whitt and assistant coach Lee Pestana cited poor shooting as the major problem in the Waco downfall. "We shot very poorly, I bet we didn't hit over 30 per cent," Whitt said.

Both coaches said the problem was further complicated by the fact that the tallest Wog was 6-5, while McClennan players were as tall as 6-8. Controlling the boards also became difficult.

When Wogs would go up for rebounds, McClennan players could simply reach over their backs to control the ball.

Whitt said that if the Wogs had been able to make anything, they could have at least stayed close.

He said, "If we had made some layups, we might have been all right."
