Flu vaccine arrives

The Health Center picked up three boxes of swine flu vaccine from the Fort Worth Health Center Tuesday, but the on-campus inoculation date has not yet been decided.

A Health Center spokesman said the center will announce the inoculation date as soon as it is known.

Meanwhile the city of Fort Worth is continuing its free Sunday immunization program with clinics on Oct. 24 and 31 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Round Up Inn.

"Whether or not the inoculation will be continued depends on the results of the next two clinics," Public Health Nurse Glenda Thompson said.

Seven thousand people were inoculated in the city's Oct. 3 clinic and 8,500 took the shot Oct. 10.

These results mean not enough people have received the vaccine to give the city adequate protection from an epidemic, according to the Fort Worth Health Department.

Charges 'special interests'

Steelman blasts Bentsen

By SKIP HOLLANDSWORTH
Associate Editor

Republican senatorial candidate Alan Steelman came to campus Tuesday, and blasted his Democratic opponent Sen. Lloyd Bentsen with charges of "special interest representation."

He continued to press a surprise campaign issue that emerged the day before—Bentsen's apparent acceptance of an illegal $2500 Gulf Oil Corporation contribution in 1970.

Bentsen said Monday the funds were donated to a dinner committee to support his candidacy, but Steelman responded "my staff has searched all his records and can find no report (of the dinner receipts)."

In other words, Steelman is alleging that Bentsen never listed the campaign contribution. He made these charges to 50 students and faculty at a rally in the Student Center sponsored by the Young Republicans.

"Even if he did list that money," Steelman challenged, "then isn't it odd that he would get it as cash in an envelope, hand delivered by a Gulf lobbyist? Usually, you get a check."

Steelman also criticized the incumbent Senator for inept handling of tax deductions. Bentsen, according to the Republican's accusation, offered an amendment to the Tax Reform Act of 1976 that would give a loophole to movie producers. That move came "just coincidentally, right after some Hollywood producers gave him an $8,500 contribution," Steelman said.

Steelman also said Bentsen sponsored a tax break for some book publishers after a group of them gave a $3,500 contribution to his campaign.

"The issue in this campaign should be integrity and ethics among public officials," he said.

He asked Bentsen to make public all income tax returns and financial reports, "so we can be certain the private citizen gets to know a maximum about the public lives of public officials."

The Republican is the principal sponsor in the House of Representatives of the Lobby Disclosure Act, "where all lobbies seeking to influence legislation must fully disclose income, take public record of what they do each day and show how they are doing it."

Then Steelman turned to reform of big government, saying "we've been arguing about this for years; now the 95th Congress must act."

He has proposed a Sunset Bill, in which every agency of the Federal Government must "prove its value to Congress each year to receive funds."

He said it was similar to the zero-based budgeting plan of presidential nominee Jimmy Carter.

Steelman spoke for approximately 10 minutes, and then fielded questions from the audience. He was asked for his position on national land-use planning, an issue Bentsen strongly attacks as a violation of state's rights.

"In my bill (for land-use planning)," Steelman said, "the state can voluntarily decide if they want to be a part of the plan. The Federal Government will have nothing to say about what type of use must come with the land."

However, he added, Bentsen voted in 1974 for a bill that would require the state to adopt a land-use plan approved by the Federal Government. Moreover, the Republican said, Bentsen "voted just a few months ago for the EPA's right to establish a land-use plan."

The crowd responded to Steelman favorably, interrupting his short speech several times with applause. "The TCU group is one of the most effective college organizations we've had in this campaign," he said.

He asked the crowd to "get involved in the election, for if we've had a lack of leadership, we've also had an equal if not greater failure of followership."

"People refuse to vote, they won't knock on doors, or lick an envelope. The American people are going to get what they worked for. . . . If there are fools in Congress, then fools put them there."

Nuclear physicist to speak on UFO's tonight

Stanton T. Friedman, nuclear physicist and an expert in unidentified flying objects (UFOs), will give a speech in the Student Center Ballroom tonight at 8 p.m. as part of this semester's Forums presentations.

He also will show slides to support his belief that UFOs have visited various places on earth.

Friedman has delivered his lectures to students in 47 states over the last several years. Before he started his lecture tour, he worked with several nuclear research organizations and companies. He has also published his works in several newspapers and journals.

STANTON T. FRIEDMAN

Friedman will also be available during the day for classes and conferences.

WASHINGTON — President Ford said Wednesday there is no validity to rumors that he might pardon three men convicted of Watergate crimes, then accused Jimmy Carter of naive and ridiculous claims that a Democratic administration could end the Arab trade embargo against Israel.

At a nationally-broadcast news conference, his second question-and-answer session in six days, Ford said he is confident that "when the votes are finally counted, the American people will want four years of the progress we've made in the last two," and will keep him in the White House.

LULING, La.—A Norwegian tanker crashed broadside today into a loaded rush-hour Mississippi River ferry, capsizing the river boat and throwing many passengers and vehicles into the swift-moving river. Officials said that 50 persons were missing and they did not expect to find more survivors.

A newspaper reporter at the scene said he saw the bodies of 11 victims that had been pulled from the river.

WASHINGTON—The Federal Power Commission staff reported on Wednesday that natural gas producers have filed for rate increases totaling about $2 billion in response to the commission's recent decision to raise the price ceiling on the fuel.

The proposed increases were somewhat above the commission's original estimate of a $1.5 billion increase, but lower than estimates of increases ranging from $3 billion to $5 billion put forward by some critics of the FPC.

BOSTON—A Harvard University study concludes that too many operations are being performed by doctors who are not specialists in surgery, while at the same time the nation's surgeons do not have enough work to keep them busy.

The researchers at Harvard Medical School drew their conclusions after reviewing 285,000 operations performed in four metropolitan areas across the country by 2,700 physicians.

of any political party which will have a Presidential candidate in the upcoming general election.

The KTCU-FM staff asks that there be two spokespersons for each party. You may respond, through interoffice mail or by extension 242, to: News Director, Radio Station KTCU-FM, TCU.

The deadline for entry is 12 noon on Tuesday, Oct. 26.

Had behavior of this sort occurred in a commercial theatre the management would have had a number of people leave the premises. I find it an embarrassment to even suggest that a group of educated adults connected with a university need some form of disciplinary monitoring. But, apparently, this is the situation.

An important symbiotic relationship exists between TCU and the surrounding community. The TCU campus offers cultural and sports activities which cannot be found elsewhere in Fort Worth. Without the support of Fort Worth citizens as paying consumers, TCU could not offer many of these activities. This relationship appears tenuous, however, if TCU cannot control the student audience. Surely, some sort of control can be managed.

Alumni blasts films display

Editor:
I am an alumni. This fall I noticed with delight that the Films Committee had planned an intelligent and aware film series. I did not realize the behavior of the TCU audience would make the films impossible to endure.

Last Friday (Oct. 15), I attended the excellent film offered by the committee. I felt as if I had stumbled into a junior high assembly on hygiene. Never have I encountered such juvenile and despicable conduct in a group of alleged adults.

House approves funds for innovations

By CAROL HOLOWINSKI
Assistant News Editor

A bill to reallocate money from the Quadrangle project to another which will improve the area between Sadler and Reed halls was passed by the House of Representatives last Tuesday night.

The bill will transfer $5,000 originally budgeted for the Quadrangle project to the new Sadler-Reed project.

A move to table the bill was forestalled only when Student Body President Jay Case broke a tie vote on the House floor.

Some House members favored tabling the bill until the projects could be reviewed further. Case explained he voted against the tabling motion because House members already had ample time to review the plans.

In other action, the House defeated a bill to change the library's policy on fines. The bill sought to provide a three day "grace period" after the initial due date. Fines would not be levied during the grace period, but after the fourth day a minimum fine of $1 would be imposed.

Academic Affairs Chairperson Steve Green argued "the fine of 25 cents per day is above and beyond a necessary penalty and can be detrimental to a forgetful student."

Laura Shrode, Administrative Assistant, said "it is to our advantage to have a library fine as a punitive measure." Protecting the forgetful student should not be at the expense of other students needing the library material, she said.

Green said later the House missed the whole point of his original bill, which was not to protect the forgetful student, but to lower the excessive library fines. The bill voted on in the meeting was amended in committee.

He said he felt the bill was rejected because emphasis was placed on the "forgetful student" rather than the issue of excessive fines.

The House sent a bill to review limited visitation at Colby hall to the Student Affairs committee.

Since the 20 hour limited visitation was instituted because this year's freshmen desired it, Colby representative Pam Mahonchak asked that a survey be taken of all Colby freshmen to determine if they prefer the standard policy of 46 hours.

The bill would have the office of Residential Living and Housing and the Colby Hall Dormitory Council conduct the survey.

Fighting drunks examined

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP)—Dr. Dwight B. Heath, with $310,000 from the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, wants to know why some people fight when they get drunk. He said he'll have his students examine the drinking habits of Rhode Islanders.

Heath, an anthropologist from

Brown University, said he is fascinated by what he sees as an apparent connection between ethnic background and drinking practices.

"Most Italians and Frenchmen of all ages drink, but there are very few alcoholics among Americans of Italian and French heritage," Heath said.

"Contrast this with the stereotype of the Irish, where women and children rarely drink, yet there is a very high rate of public disturbance and fighting among males," he said.

"The difference is not the quantity of drinking or the early exposure to alcohol," said Heath. "It's something else."

Campus-wide polling continues

The mock election sponsored by the political Science Association, designed to raise consciousness of the Nov. 2 presidential election, continues today.

The first item on the ballot is a presidential contest between Jimmy Carter, Gerald Ford, Eugene McCarthy and undecided.

The U.S. senatorial race between Lloyd Bentsen and Alan Steelman, the Congressional race between Wes Mowery and Olin Teague, and the contest between Chris Miller and Dorothy Patras for the state legislature are questions on the ballot also.

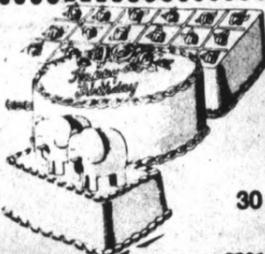

The ballot asks questions about national issues including abortion, amnesty and busing, the B-1 bomber, and handgun registration.

On-campus issues such as alcohol, visitation, the yearbook, KTCU, the Daily Skiff, the Student House of Representatives and birth control services at the Health Center are also the subjects of questions.

Questions about voter registration, party affiliation, sex and year in school will help to identify various segments of the University community for purposes of analysis.

Through the poll, the Political Science Association hopes to get a comparison of the various political ideologies on campus, PSA vice-president John Cowles said.

Polls will be supervised by members of the bi-partisan Political Science Association in the Student Center lobby, Dan Rogers Hall and Worth Hills Cafeteria. Cowles estimated 2,000 students and faculty would participate in the balloting.

Wogs rack up second straight win

The Frog junior varsity made it two in a row Monday night, downing the Texas Tech Picadors 18-14 at Amon Carter Stadium.

Freshman John Ferguson of Italy, Tex., led a swarming Wog defense. The Picadors touched the Wogs for a first quarter touchdown but Ferguson and Wesley Roberts teamed to lead the door-slamming on the Picador offense.

The Picadors almost had the Wogs in a bad position before the half, when a Tech drive stalled on the Wog one-foot line.

The Picadors had the ball first and goal from the three, but a close fourth down call went the Wogs' way and Tech had to settle for a 7-6 halftime lead.

The defense stiffened in the third quarter allowing the Picadors just two first downs, one a 15-yard touchdown pass.

A 32-yard Tech drive was set up by a Wog fumble and the Picadors took advantage of the mistake to lead 14-6.

The Wogs bounced back behind quarterback Don Harris. He hit Brad Bowen on a 48-yard touchdown pass in the second quarter for the Wogs first score.

With 49 seconds left in the third period, Harris hit Carlton Kile on a 43-yard strike to cut the Tech lead to 14-12.

Harris showed what he was made of midway through the final stanza. Faced with a third and 19, he let fly to Michael Milton, and Milton was knocked out of bounds on the Tech two to complete a 57-yard play.

Harris then sneaked over for the winning score to make it 18-14.

Harris hit seven of 16 for 179 yards and two touchdowns. "Don's just a good quarterback. He took his licks but kept his poise," said Wog coach Steve Reid.

"We just played better defense in the second half," Reid said. He called the goal line stand the turning point of the game.

The victory assured the Wogs of a break-even season. They are 2-1-1 with only Oklahoma left on the schedule. The Purples will close out their season Monday against the Sooners in Amon Carter Stadium at 8:30 p.m.

Football briefs

The Miami game Saturday will mark the 28th consecutive start for the Frogs' center Jerry Caillier. The senior from Orange weighs only 205.

Freshman fullback Lorance Wills will get his first varsity start Saturday against Miami. Wills will get the starting nod over Audie Woods.

Linebacker Mack George will miss the Miami game. He injured his knee and missed both the Arkansas and Rice games.

It appears that offensive guard Mark Krug, who has not played due to surgery to remove a cyst from his backbone, will be unable to return for the 1976 season and will be redshirted.

This will be the first—and only—game of the season for the Frogs to play on real grass. The Orange Bowl has a new prescription turf natural grass surface.

With 22 home games played and 29 to go, SWC attendance figures remain slightly ahead of the all-time attendance record in 1974. The average attendance through games of last Saturday is 41,516, a little more than six per cent above the record 39,144 set two seasons ago.

SWC attendance should go over the one million mark this weekend and leave the conference in good position to experience its first two million draw in history. The addition of Houston as the ninth member virtually assures the SWC of topping the 1,761,492 spectators who attended 45 home games in 1974.

Five teams are averaging more than 40,000 for home games, while the SWC has never before had more than three schools reach the 40,000 level over a full season.

Texas Tech is off to the third best start in the Raiders' 52 football seasons. The 4-0 getaway has been bettered only by the 1938 team that won ten straight before losing to St. Mary's in the Cotton Bowl and the 1941 team that won five straight before bowing to Texas A&M.
