Hart, Mondale lead primaries

By the Associated Press—Rounding the first turn in the Democratic presidential race, Gary Hart and Walter Mondale battled neck and neck after Super Tuesday primaries the Colorado senator claimed were a victory over "the politics of yesterday," while the former vice president asserted he was "back in the race."

The contest looked more and more like a two-man race as Hart and Mondale headed into the industrial Midwest Wednesday where Michigan and Illinois are the next big targets.

Of the five primaries on Tuesday, Hart carried Florida, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, while Mondale was the winner in Georgia and Alabama.

Hart and Mondale were only a few votes apart in Oklahoma caucuses, while Hart jumped to a comfortable lead in Washington.

Early caucus results from Hawaii had 66 percent of the voters favoring sending an uncommitted delegation to the Democratic convention.

Also holding caucuses were Nevada Democrats.

Hart looked assured of a majority of the 511 delegates chosen on the campaign's busiest day so far, but Mondale continued to hold the overall lead.

Of the delegates selected since the process began, Mondale had 285 and Hart 167. John Glenn had 33 delegates and the Rev. Jesse Jackson 31.

George McGovern, saying he would "fully accept the verdict of my special friends, the voters of Massachusetts," was the latest casualty of the race after finishing third in the state that stood alone in his column in 1972.

McGovern's departure cuts the Democratic field to four. The race began with eight contenders.

Hart was flying to Detroit to meet with United Auto Workers officials backing labor's united front for Mondale.

The former vice president was addressing the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations.

Hart and Mondale cheered the Super Tuesday results and predicted a long battle to settle who will emerge from the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco next July as the challenger to President Reagan.

"It's going to be a marathon all the way to California," Mondale told supporters.

"This is going to be a long, tough fight," said Hart campaign manager Oliver Henkel.

Glenn, whose third place finish in Alabama was his best primary showing of the day, nonetheless declared his campaign "is very much alive."

It also was very much in debt and a Glenn aide said a decision on the future of the Ohio senator's bid was still to be made.

Jackson captured 21 percent of the vote in Georgia and regained eligibility for federal matching campaign funds. Jackson was threatened with loss of the federal subsidy after he failed to get 10 percent of the vote in either New Hampshire or Vermont. Jackson vowed to campaign "to the end and beyond."

Super Tuesday once loomed as the day Mondale planned to take an insurmountable lead in the Democratic race. But after Hart's upset victories in New Hampshire, Maine, Vermont and Wyoming, the big round of primaries and caucuses looked more like the Coloradoan's chance to surge far ahead of the field.

Neither candidate scored a Super Tuesday knockout.

"I think Wednesday was a watershed for this candidacy," Hart said in a television interview. "It demonstrated strength outside New England."

Hart had hoped for a victory in one of the Southern primaries and he got it in Florida.

Mondale, who opened the season with a big win in the Iowa caucuses, had been shut out by Hart since then. After his victories in Alabama and Georgia, he told supporters:

"I am back in the race. A month ago this was a bandwagon. Tonight it's a crusade."

Mondale looked ahead and said, "There are 40 contests yet to come and we will be in every one of them."

Mondale also could find encouragement in voter surveys by the television networks, which said support for the former vice president rose dramatically in the last few days while Hart's backing fell off sharply.

Democrats will choose another 816 delegates by the end of this month in contests ranging from the Illinois primary next Tuesday to caucuses this Saturday in Michigan, Mississippi, Arkansas, Kentucky and South Carolina. Connecticut holds a primary on March 24, giving Hart an opportunity for a clean sweep of the six New England states.

By the end of March, Democrats will have chosen 1,429 delegates, 42 percent of the total of 3,933 that will be at the San Francisco convention. A total of 1,967 is needed for the nomination.

Autry dies after stay is denied

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP)—James David Autry, smiling at a female penal and saying "I love you," was executed with a lethal injection early Wednesday for killing a convenience store clerk.

It was the second time within six months that Autry lay strapped to a hospital gurney in the death chamber, intravenous needles inserted into his arms. But this time there was no stay of execution.

Autry was pronounced dead at 12:40 a.m. by prison doctor L.A. Masters.

Gov. Mark White had announced 70 minutes earlier that he would not halt the execution.

The U.S. Supreme Court had voted 7-2 earlier Tuesday to reject Autry's request for a fourth stay.

At 12:03 a.m. Autry was strapped to the gurney with white leather belts. A needle was inserted in his left arm at 12:05 and into his right arm at 12:10. At 12:15, a saline solution to carry the fatal drugs began to flow. A minute later, the witnesses were brought into the death chamber.

The flow of lethal drugs began at 12:25 a.m. Warden Jack Purley asked Autry if he had any last words, and Autry replied, "No."

Autry smiled at Shirley Tadlock, a Dallas mother of three who began corresponding with Autry last October. "I love you," Autry said.

Tadlock, clutching a wad of pink tissues, answered, "I love you, too."

Autry blinked several times and breathed deeply. Tadlock cried out, "I love you, J.D."

"I love you, too," he replied.

The smile left Autry's face and he began to frown as his breathing became more labored.

"I'm being big for you, just for you, not for me," Tadlock said. "I love you, pretty brown eyes."

Autry took several deep breaths, his feet began to wriggle, and his breathing became faster. He cried again, "I love you."

Tadlock said, "I love you, baby. I'm sorry for what they're doing for you."

At one point during their exchange, Autry exclaimed: "Oh, it's hurting."

After the inmate was pronounced dead, Tadlock asked permission to hug and kiss the body. The request was denied.

Autry left all his possessions to the Dallas woman, who was brought to the prison by her husband, Ray. Autry also had corresponded with the couple's three children, who had written letters to the Supreme Court to ask for mercy for Autry.

Autry had come within 30 minutes of death on Oct. 5. As he lay strapped to the hospital gurney, a saline solution flowing into his body through intravenous needles inserted in each arm, U.S. Supreme Court Justice Byron White issued a stay.

The appeal defense lawyer Stefan Presser filed with the Supreme Court on Friday contended Autry was the victim of cruel and unusual punishment because of the aborted execution.

"I just feel justice has been done," Harold Ferrell said after the execution.

Ferrell is the brother of Shirley Drouet, the convenience store clerk Autry was convicted of killing by shooting her in the forehead during a 1980 attempted robbery in Port Arthur. Ferrell spoke in a telephone interview from his home in Duncan, Okla.

House reimburses IFC delegates

By Mia Grigsby
Staff writer of the TCU Daily Skiff

Before swearing in newly elected vice president Wayne Watson, the House of Student Representatives passed a bill Tuesday giving $539,500 to the Interfraternity Council for reimbursement of two members for a trip to the Mid-American Interfraternity Convention in St. Louis, Mo.

The bill passed after debate among House members and a presentation from IFC representative Mike Collins, one of the delegates who attended the convention.

The bill had been introduced to the House a week earlier by Dana Reeves, chairman of the House Finance Committee. Reeves said she felt that the entire campus would benefit from the delegates' trip to the convention, which was held March 8-11.

Collins said that if the bill did not pass, IFC would have to "do some extra fund raising" to pay for the convention.

When asked how the convention would benefit the entire campus, Collins said that educational sessions at the convention covered topics such as legal issues, substance abuse, philanthropic programs and scholarship programming.

"We're going to try to implement what we've learned," said Collins. "We're going to make the information available to the House and the rest of the campus."

The bill, which will allocate money from the House Special Projects Fund, passed in spite of nay votes and abstentions.

Town student representative Mark Batchelder asked Collins why the House should pay for an IFC project after IFC had "spent all its money on Greek projects." Collins pointed out that the House has allocated money to organizations that represent a lower percentage of students. "That's not what we're debating here," said Batchelder.

When asked why IFC had made the request so late (a week before the convention), Collins said that there had been some disorganization in the IFC since the resignation of the IFC president in December. "Then there was a question on whether or not we could ask for this money," said Collins.

Committee vote set on Central America money

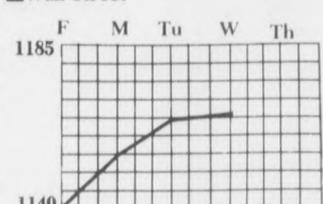

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate Appropriations Committee is looking at a compromise on the twin issues of aiding anti-leftist guerrillas in Nicaragua and bolstering the beleaguered government of El Salvador.

Administration supporters planned to offer both measures today as amendments to a bill providing $150 million in food aid to African nations, where relief agencies say thousands face starvation because of drought.

But Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wis., said his proposal for $93 million in immediate aid to El Salvador would be conditioned on demonstrated progress toward ending death squads and making other governmental reforms.

And the Senate Intelligence Committee struck a compromise on the administration's request for $21 million in emergency aid for the Nicaraguan guerrillas by voting Tuesday to grant the money in installments.

Agricultural students threaten violence

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP)—Students at an agriculture college in this border city threatened violence Wednesday in retaliation for what they contended was unnecessary police action ordered against them Tuesday.

Police used tear gas and shotguns to stop a demonstration by the students Tuesday after about 400 of them commandeered 10 city buses and threatened violence, authorities said.

Two students sustained minor injuries after being shot with buckshot, said Soledad Pacheco, an agent with Juarez municipal police.

More than 75 students were arrested after the four-hour clash at the Hermanos Escobar agriculture college, Pacheco said.

Officials said police were called to the school about 9 a.m. after receiving complaints that 10 city buses had been hijacked by students who planned to use them in a protest for more funding for the school.

AMERICAN DESPAIR: Some 670 Kickapoo Indians live in "homes" beneath a bridge in Eagle Pass, Texas, because they have nowhere to go.

House reaches out to help shunned Indians

By Alan Gray

Staff writer of the TCU Daily Skiff

They live underneath the International Bridge at Eagle Pass, Texas. Shunned by both the United States and Mexico, 670 Kickapoo Indians live with a water supply of one faucet and find shelter in houses made of cane and cardboard.

The Kickapoos have no land on which to live because they are not recognized by either Mexico or the United States. The United States has not provided them land because they once owned land in Mexico. The Mexican government provides the tribe no land because the Kickapoos are natives of North America.

While they do own some land in Mexico, the tribe only visits there each winter for tribal ceremonial rites. Tribe members cannot live on the land because the water is contaminated, and the land is not suitable for farming. The Mexican government has also withheld hunting rights.

The Kickapoos now have "resident alien" status in the United States and may apply for citizenship on an individual basis after a census has been taken of the tribe.

"They don't have a place to live. All 670 are trying to live on one acre of land underneath the bridge," said Wayne Watson, vice president of the TCU House of Student Representatives, which has begun a drive to help the Kickapoos.

The House passed a resolution Tuesday to collect clothes of any kind, food and money for the homeless band. "We especially need children's clothing," said Watson.

The House has set up collection points in all residence halls on main campus. They are located in the hall's office. Watson said that any money donations may be dropped off at the University Ministries Office.

The collection campaign will end on Friday.

The collection at TCU is in conjunction with the relief effort by the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ). That effort is being spearheaded by Larry Crocker, minister of the Central Christian Church in Hillsboro, Texas.

"These people are in a very unfortunate situation. If we can help make their lives any easier, then this project will have been a success," said Watson. "I hope that students will take a few minutes before they leave for spring break to take an item of clothing out of their closet, one that they will probably never wear again anyway, and give it to someone who will."

Watson said that the House became interested in the plight of the Kickapoos when Dean of Students Libby Proffer sent a letter and a newspaper article to House President Sara Smith. In the letter, Proffer pointed out that Texas A&M had recently adopted a village in Central America and that "perhaps we could get our TCU students interested in doing something for an equally disadvantaged group of people."

So far, $100,000 has been raised by a number of various denominational churches so that the tribe may purchase a 283,000, 113-acre tract of land. Another $100,000 payment is due in August before the Kickapoos are allowed to move onto the land. The land is located along the banks of the Rio Grande.

Rice, Trinity make list of best education buys

By the Associated Press—Two Texas universities, Trinity in San Antonio and Rice in Houston, have been selected by Money magazine as among the 10 best educational buys in the nation.

In its March issue, the magazine said the 10 schools all "keep their academic standards up and their total costs down," but that each school selected "goes beyond to offer something distinctive of its own."

The magazine's researchers studied the academic standards and financial resources at colleges and universities across the country.

Test scores of entering freshmen, freshman dropout rates and the financial aid available from each university were listed as the initial criteria.

Money then consulted Harvard sociologist David Reisman, a "connoisseur of colleges," for a list of academic standards by which to measure the schools.

"Oil-rich" Trinity, a small liberal arts college with tuition about $4,680 a year, made the list because of its excellent academic record and its success in attracting a high percentage of its freshman class from the ranks of National Merit scholars, the magazine said.

Each National Merit Scholar maintaining at least a 3.25 grade average receives free tuition, the magazine article noted.

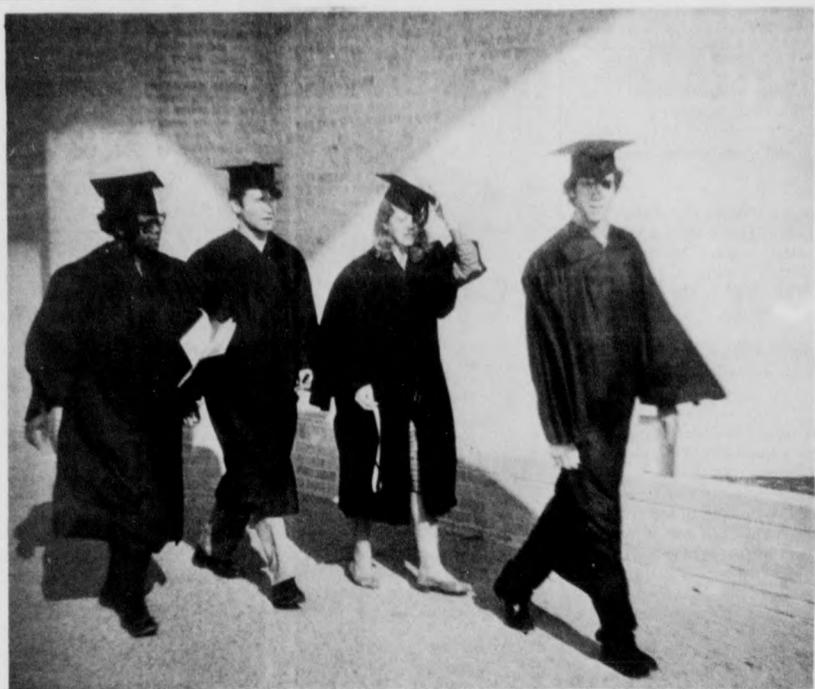

Rice attracted the highest percentage of National Merit Scholars in this year's freshman class—21 percent—and provides a "grueling workload," the magazine said.

Money also said the $3,700 annual tuition at the Houston college, which has an enrollment of about 2,630, "is on the low side for a university of Rice's scope and distinction."

Reisman's list of academic standards by which to measure each school included senior faculty who teach undergraduates on a regular basis, a challenging environment of learning, exposure to international perspective through foreign exchange programs and a president with "vitality and imagination."

Trinity President Ronald Calgaard said the national distinction fit the university's push to make a name for itself.

"I am pleased that research by a national magazine confirmed that we are providing quality education at an affordable price," Calgaard said. "Although quality is expensive, we strive to offer the best education possible while keeping a watchful eye on the cost to our students."

Center link to industry

By Mike Sessums
Staff writer of the TCU Daily Skiff

In the race for the earthly applications of space technology, TCU has not been left behind. Thanks to support from private industry and the university, a highly specialized center on campus has become a link between NASA and the energy industry.

"We are unique in that the Center for Remote Sensing and Energy Research... is housed in the geology department," said Ken Morgan, the center's director. The center uses computers and NASA environmental resource satellites to aid earth-bound companies in their search for oil and other mineral deposits. The satellites use visible, infrared and radar imagery to accomplish this, said Morgan.

Geology and environmental science majors participate in the center by learning the applications of the research and are introduced to the current research techniques using computers and their science background.

"Our best service is to the industry, so that's who we try to work for," said Morgan, emphasizing that 90 percent of the center's work is industry-oriented. Morgan also said the center is involved in monitoring environmental problems, such as the effects of strip mining and acid rain.

The center is currently working on a soil conservation project that monitors agricultural production along the Texas Gulf Coast. One of the primary concerns is the coastal water tables and the levels of salt-salt deteriorates plant life.

Morgan said that another unique aspect of the center is that it can practice teaching and research, provide services to the world-wide community and host research conferences. This year, the center will be hosting its second International Conference on Remote Sensing for Exploration Geology in Colorado Springs, Colo.

The center will also co-host a conference in San Antonio this September and another this October at the University of Bayreuth in Germany. Remote sensing for resource management will be discussed at the World Conference in Germany.

'Right' agencies can help in job search

By Lori Genitempo
Staff writer of the TCU Daily Skiff

Job-seekers in the Dallas/Fort Worth area can get the competitive edge by letting someone else do their legwork.

Employment agencies in the metroplex essentially do all the research, digging and screening of potential employers for each job-seeker, according to Linda Gerch, manager of Snelling and Snelling employment agency.

"We're not a headhunter or recruiter for a specific business, we just work for the applicant—searching for a company to fit his or her needs," Gerch said.

She said most of their applicants are entry-level job-seekers who have a specific field they are interested in or are qualified for. Fields include sales, accounting technicians, medical administration and media relations, to name a few.

Employment agencies accomplish their goals by taking the applicants job skills, salary preferences (highest and lowest acceptable amounts), environment preferences and matching them up with companies listed in the Yellow Pages.

Snelling and Snelling has six counselors who research, set up the interviews and then inquire on post-interview attitudes of both the employer and the applicant.

Gerch said her company is very strict on the applicant reading and understanding the contract between them.

It states that when a job is found on the part of the agency, then the service charge paid to the agency is one percent a thousand of the starting salary for the year. For example, if an applicant accepts a job starting at $12,000 per year, then the charge is 12 percent, or $1,440.

However, if the agency fails to find the applicant an acceptable job, there is no charge.

This charge does not take into consideration any raises, bonuses or benefits, nor does it include a finance charge if the payments extend over a period of time.

The competitiveness comes in on two occasions. First, when the jobseeker is pursuing a career on his own and through an agency, and second, when the counselor works on commission.

Gerch said their counselors strive to get the best highest paid job available for the person so they can make the most out of their careers also.

But not all agencies have such a clean reputation.

Last year, several agencies that called themselves "job-referral services" sold lists of jobs for $120, but they eventually went out of business.

Billie Walker, department manager of the Better Business Bureau, said these job-referral services are legal but not really ethical, because the lists were compiled from the Want-Ads in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"All they were doing was selling a list. You can't say what value is in it because it's available to anyone for 25 cents," Walker said.

She said the BBB cannot close down any business, but it can act as the go-between in the business-consumer world, and report factual and written complaints in the Texas Department of Labor and Standards.

Also, she said job-seekers can request reports on a company for satisfactory or unsatisfactory business conduct if a person isn't aware of the reputation of the company.

Gerch said the quality of the services offered around the metroplex are generally all honest and reputable.

Wrecking Crew beats KA Psi for intramural title

By W. Robert Padgett
Staff writer of the TCU Daily Skiff

They should have been called the Wacker Crew, since most of the team's players were members of the TCU head football coach's squad.

But whatever the name, the players for the Wrecking Crew showed that gridiron talent can be transformed into quality basketball play as they downed Kappa Alpha Psi 41-36 to capture the intramural basketball crown Tuesday in Daniel-Meyer coliseum.

The Wrecking Crew jumped out to an 8-2 lead in the opening three minutes behind the play of Dan Sharpe, who scored a five-foot jumper in the key and blocked the first Kappa Alpha Psi shot.

From there, the Wrecking Crew kept on out-scoring Kappa Alpha Psi and led at the half 22-14.

In the second half, the Wreckers continued their dominance until the four-minute mark when Kappa Alpha Psi started making its comeback behind the play of TCU cornerback John Thomas, who had 12 points for the game.

Byron Linwood, another defensive secondary standout, led all scorers in the game with 15 points, most of them coming in the second half to turn back the Kappa Alpha Psi threat.

Other than Linwood, the scoring for the Wrecking Crew was minimal as the next-leading point-totalers were Kyle Clifton and Darron Turner, each with six points apiece.

Kappa Alpha Psi's scoring was much more spread out. Along with Thomas' 12 points, TCU wide receiver Greg Arterberry totaled 10 points, while Daryl Brookins scored nine.

To get to the finals in the intramural basketball playoffs the Wrecking Crew beat the Poles in the first round and defeated the Jukes in the semifinals.

Kappa Alpha Psi downed the Wacker Hackers in the first round and went on to defeat the Cadavers, which is a team made up entirely of pre-med and pre-dental students.

In the consolation match of the men's division Tuesday evening, the Jukes, who were playing with only four people because one of its players hurt his leg over the weekend, still had enough talent to defeat the Cadavers 64-54.

While the men were playing their championship and consolation games at Daniel-Meyer Coliseum, the women's crown was being decided in the Rickel Building.

Kelly Reid led three scorers in double figures with 11 points as the Striders defeated Brachman 44-35. Beverly Petty and Betty Etier each had 10 points in the Striders' winning effort.

Despite 12-point efforts by both Vida Trevino and Cathy Alter, Jarvis' team fell victim to Chi Omega sorority in the consolation match 40-37.

Rough times await Morehead St.

(AP)—Morehead State is in a horse race with a couple of thoroughbreds from cross-state in Kentucky. It's not the kind of race the Eagles figure to win.

Morehead, champions of the Ohio Valley Conference, won its preliminary round game in the NCAA basketball tournament Tuesday night, edging North Carolina A&T 70-69 on Guy Minnifield's 20-foot shot with only four seconds remaining. Next up for the Eagles: Louisville. If Morehead, 24-5, manages to upset the Cardinals at Milwaukee Friday night in the Midwest Regional, the third-ranked Kentucky Wildcats could be next.

"Every time we play Louisville, it's a nightmare," said Morehead Coach

Wayne Martin, whose Eagles lost 85-50 to the Cardinals earlier this season. "We race at Latonia and they're in the Kentucky Derby."

Minnifield didn't let the pressure of the opening steps in the race to the Final Four bother him. His game-winning basket was his only one of the game.

"Guy has been in that position before," said Martin. "He's done it on several occasions for us."

After Morehead's victory at Dayton, Ohio, Alcorn State pounded Houston Baptist 79-60. At the Palestra in Philadelphia, Northeastern downed Long Island University 90-87, Richmond belted Rider 89-65 and Princeton took San Diego 65-56.

The Morehead-NC A&T game was an historic one. The referees used a television replay with 26 seconds remaining to determine which Aggie should attempt a pair of free throws after an intentional foul was called on the Eagles' Earl Harrison. James Horace hit one of two free throws to put the Aggies ahead 69-68.

Harrison was charged with a deliberate foul after he pulled the jersey of one of the Aggies' players. But the referees couldn't determine which player was fouled. At first, Eric Boyd of A&T was sent to the line. But after watching a replay, the refs awarded Horace the free throws.

Baseballers maul Kansas State

By Peter Blackstock
Staff writer of the TCU Daily Skiff

In what TCU baseball Coach Bragg Stockton described as "maybe our best day yet," the Horned Frogs swept a doubleheader from Kansas State on Tuesday with convincing scores of 11-3 and 7-1.

"This was a really good day for us," said Stockton. "We've been working really hard, mainly to keep from beating ourselves. It's not so much what people have done to us (in earlier losses), but what we've done to ourselves."

The Frogs, however, did very little to hurt themselves Tuesday. TCU fell behind early in both games but came back quickly and in full force both times.

Kansas State took a 1-0 lead in the first game when outfielder Brian Bascoe doubled and was singled home by first baseman Otto Kaifes in the top of the second inning. The lead did not last long, however, as TCU responded with a staggering eight runs in the bottom half of the inning.

After catcher Darrin Roberts doubled to lead off the inning, Brent Barker flew out to right field. Roberts then advanced to third on a wild pitch and scored on Donnie Millender's sacrifice fly. Though this tied the score at 1-1, it also gave TCU two outs with no one on base.

But the Frogs were far from finished in the inning. After reaching first base on a walk and advancing to second on Drew Watkins' single, freshman Andy Dow scored on a base hit by Kenny Crafton. Outfielder Johnny Morgan then tripled to score Crafton and Watkins, and TCU was up 4-1.

After freshman John Fertitta drew a walk, designated hitter Mike Ramsey doubled to score both Morgan and Fertitta. Roberts, who had led off the inning and scored the Frogs' first run, followed with a homer to give TCU an insurmountable 8-1 lead.

Barker and Millender followed with a single and a double, respectively, but both were stranded when Dow's fly out to the shortstop finally ended the inning.

The Wildcats narrowed the gap to 8-3 in the fourth inning by scoring two runs on the strength of three hits and a wild pitch by TCU starter Brian Ohnoutka.

The Frogs then tacked on three "insurance runs" in the bottom of the sixth on three hits, two walks and a sacrifice grounder.

Ohnoutka quickly shut down any Wildcat hopes for a last-gasp rally by fanning the first three batters he faced in the top of the seventh, and TCU came away with an 11-3 victory. Ohnoutka, who raised his record to 1-2 with the win, allowed just six hits and tallied 12 strikeouts in the contest.

The Wildcats jumped out to an early 1-0 lead in the second game as well when Cary Colbert walked and advanced to second on Mark Goodwin's infield hit and scored on Eric Gossett's single to right field.

TCU evened it up in the bottom of the first when Morgan singled, advanced to third on a single by Crafton and scored on Ramsey's sacrifice grounder.

The Frogs took command in the bottom of the third despite not getting a single base hit to the outfield. Three Kansas State errors, a bunt-single by Ramsey, an infield hit by Roberts, a sacrifice bunt by Barker and a sacrifice fly by Millender combined to produce three runs for TCU.

The team added three more runs in the next inning, this time behind strong batting rather than scrappy play. Consecutive doubles by Shawn Doherty, Morgan and Crafton produced two runs, while a single by Roberts drove home Crafton to account for the final run of the game as TCU coasted to a 7-1 win.

Junior pitcher Kight Higgins went the distance for the Frogs, allowing six hits and striking out seven as he evened his season record at 1-1. The Frogs stand 8-5 after Tuesday's wins.

UNC stars top All-American list

NEW YORK (AP)—Michael Jordan and Sam Perkins, who led North Carolina to the No. 1 ranking and an unbeaten record in the Atlantic Coast Conference regular season, Wednesday were named to the Associated Press first team All-American college basketball squad.

Three of the nation's premier big men —7-footers Patrick Ewing of Georgetown, Akeem Olajuwon of Houston and 6-feet 9-inch tall Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma —complete the first team.

Jordan, a 6-foot 6-inch junior swingman who has been the Tar Heels' clutch performer since his freshman year, led North Carolina in scoring with a 19.6 average while hitting 55 percent of his shots from the field. The Wilmington, N.C., native, who was named the ACC's Player of the Year, also averaged 5.4 rebounds and made 49 steals.

Perkins, a 6-foot 9-inch senior forward-center from New York, made 60 percent of his floor shots while averaging 17.5 points and led the team in rebounding with a 9.5 average. He had 66 blocked shots in helping the Tar Heels to a 27-2 record.

Ewing, a native of Jamaica who played high school ball in Cambridge, Mass., was the co-Player of the Year in the Big East Conference. He led the Hoyas to both the regular-season and postseason league titles and the No. 2 ranking in the nation with a 29-3 record.

An imposing presence defensively as evidenced by his 118 blocked shots, Ewing, a junior center, averaged 10.1 rebounds and 17.2 points on 67 percent shooting from the field and was named the Big Eight's most valuable player.

Olajuwon, a junior from Lagos, Nigeria, averaged 16.3 points on 67 percent shooting from the field, 13.8 rebounds and had 189 blocks —16 against Biscayne —in leading No. 5 Houston to a 28-4 record, including the Southwest Conference's regular season and postseason crowns. He has been playing basketball for only five years and late last season blossomed into an outstanding performer.

Tisdale, a sophomore who became the first freshman in history to make first team All-American last season, poured in an average of 26.8 points on 58 percent shooting and averaged 9.6 rebounds. He had 74 blocked shots.

Tisdale was named the Player of the Year in the Big Eight for the second straight year. The Tulsa, Okla., product was the only returning starter on the seventh-ranked Sooners, who posted a 29-4 record and won the Big Eight regular-season championship.
