Series of deaths cause concern

Earnest L. Perry
Skiff Reporter

Students returning to campus this semester received information about area violence and how to ensure their safety from the university administration.

The letter from the chancellor summarized recent events, including the discovery of a woman's body by two boys who were playing near the pond in Worth Hills Jan. 4.

The two boys told TCU police about the body and showed them where the skeletal remains were. TCU police then called the Fort Worth police, who dispatched their crime team and the fire department to recover the body from the drainage ditch.

"The kids informed one of our officers, who in turn called the Fort Worth Police, who took the case from there," said TCU Police Chief Oscar Stewart.

After four days of careful searching, remaining parts of the body were found and identified through dental records. The Fort Worth Medical Examiner's office identified the body as that of Cindy Heller, 23, of 5421 Pershing Ave.

Heller had been reported missing Oct. 23. She was last heard from when she delivered a message to the friend of a stranded motorist.

Her name was added to the list of women in the area who have recently been murdered or who are listed as missing. The Fort Worth police and the Tarrant County Sheriff's Department have set up a task force to investigate the disappearance and possible murders of five women.

The other murder victims on the list are Lisa Griffin, 20, and Sarah Kashka, 15.

Lisa Griffin's mother had last seen the 20-year-old on Jan. 8. Griffin, who had been shot to death, was found between 10:30 and 11 p.m. on Jan. 9 by a railroad crew near Highway 377 on Old Aledo Road. The remains were identified by LaVonne Griffin, Lisa's mother, Jan. 10.

Sarah Kashka was found stabbed to death in a wooded area of Dallas. She disappeared Dec. 31 from an area in southwest Fort Worth. Kashka lived in Denton, but was visiting friends who lived at 5325 Wooten in Fort Worth. Sarah was the daughter of Maisie Kashka, who is a member of the Harris College of Nursing faculty.

Doug Clarke, a police information officer of the Fort Worth Police Department said they have no leads and that there are no set patterns in the murders and disappearances, except that they all happened in the same area and that all the women were attractive.

Chancellor William E. Tucker said, "We just wanted the students to know what was going on and what happened during the Christmas break. That's why we passed out information sheets to each of the residence halls and distributed them to town students."

One missing woman has been identified as Catherine Davis, 23, who was reported missing Sept. 30 after her apartment at 3404 Park Ridge Blvd. caught fire. She lived less than a mile from the creek where Heller was found.

Angela Ewert, 21, of 7262 Merry Lane was reported missing Dec. 11. Her car was found at the 200 block of Southeast Loop 820, but she was last seen at the 7-Eleven store at 5356 Wedgmont Circle North.

"I think TCU is one of the safest campuses in the country, but we can't live behind a fence of security and feel scared to go outside. We just have to learn to be more cautious when we venture out," said Tucker.

Common sense touted as safety precaution

Earnest L. Perry
Skiff Reporter

TCU Police Chief Oscar Stewart says one of the best ways to protect yourself from being attacked by someone is to use common sense.

"If people would just be aware of what's going on around them and think before they act there would be less attacks reported," Stewart said.

Dean of Students Libby Proffer said that she's more worried about students who live off campus in apartment complexes because they've just started to pay attention to the security needs of their residents.

"Students who live on campus are a lot safer than students off campus. The TCU Police make regular rounds and are very visible at night. Students who live off campus in apartments are more vulnerable to attacks since apartment complexes have been apprehensive to security needs," said Proffer.

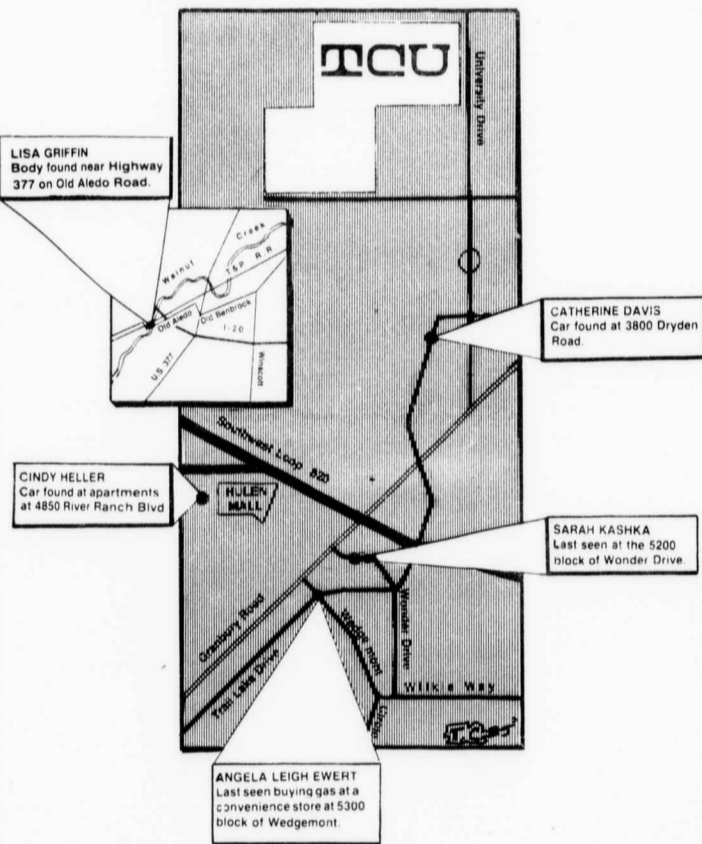

Four to five patrolmen work the evening and late night shifts and the field sergeants are required to work at night. More officers are on duty on weekends, and they change patrol routes so that all areas of the campus are covered.

"We know that more officers are needed in the early evening and night hours than during the daytime. Most of our women officers work during the daytime for obvious reasons. We haven't changed our normal pattern of operations due to the recent rash of murders and missing women in the area, but we have asked our officers to be more visible when patrolling the campus," Stewart said.

In the past, TCU police officers only had to have experience as security officers or in the military to qualify for the job. Today's officers have training at the police academy, along with an education in law enforcement.

Both Proffer and Stewart said that the best advice they could give to students is to be more suspicious of the people and events around them. "Don't set yourself up to be attacked. Don't jog or walk at 11:30 at night with headphones on so you can't hear what's going on around you. Common sense should tell you that's dangerous," Stewart said.

"The university will do all it can to protect the students, but the students have to do their part, too. If you have to go out at night, try not to go out by yourself if you're a woman. That applies to men too, but women are more vulnerable. Keep your car in good condition and walk where there is adequate lighting," Proffer said.

Israel and Lebanon stop short of agreement

NAQOURA, Lebanon (AP)—A deadly car bombing in southern Lebanon prompted widespread strikes and protests today, and Israeli and Lebanese negotiators adjourned without agreeing on security measures to prevent a civil war when Israel's soldiers pull out.

A statement issued by United Nations spokesman Timur Goksel at the end of today's session between military delegations from Lebanon and Israel said that although Lebanon "expressed its reservations" about Israel's three-stage plan to withdraw its armed forces from Lebanon, negotiations would resume on Thursday.

As the delegates met in this town near the Israeli-Lebanese border, a general strike spread through Moslem areas of Lebanon to protest the bomb attack Monday night at the home of a prominent Sunni Moslem leader in Sidon, southern Lebanon's largest city.

Need-based Agent Orange settlements argued

HOUSTON (AP)—A $180 million settlement industries have agreed to pay veterans sprayed with Agent Orange should be based on need because doctors cannot agree what disorders were caused by the substance, a court-appointed special master said today.

Kenneth R. Feinberg was in Houston for the first of a series of meetings with Vietnam veterans' groups.

He will give U.S. District Judge Jack B. Weinstein a proposal for paying out the settlement. Eight firms involved in the manufacture of the herbicide, which was used to thin out Vietnamese jungles, have agreed to the payout.

Weinstein approved the settlement Jan. 7. He hopes to approve a distribution plan by April, Feinberg said.

Feinberg is the special master appointed by Weinstein to oversee the disposition of the money.

He said the judge has made it clear that the "scientific link between Agent Orange and specific medical problems is sufficiently tenuous" that need must be the major basis on which money is paid out.

No significant precipitation expected Thursday through Saturday. High temperatures mainly in the 40s.

Students' dean reassures parents

Cathy Chapman
Skiff Reporter

The first week of the semester is always a busy time for the Dean of Students' office, and the recent publicity surrounding the discovery of a body on campus and the string of women who have disappeared in the southwest Fort Worth area has made this week no exception.

The Dean's office has added handling interviews with the press and answering telephone calls from concerned parents to its regular agenda.

Calls from parents are being received by Libby Proffer, the Dean of Students, and by Carol Adcock and Buck Beneze, the assistant deans. Proffer said that she could not estimate the number of calls the office has received. Calls are taken by whoever is available, and all three deans have accepted calls at home. "Parents tend to call the people they know," Proffer explained.

Proffer said she probably receives about two or three calls a day from concerned parents. "There is a great

Dallas Morning News and the Houston Chronicle. She also did an interview for NBC's "Today Show" that never appeared. "Libby has handled all the interviews," said Assistant diversity about what people know," Proffer said. "The first thing I do is to assure them that a crime was not committed on campus and to reassure them of the safety of the campus. We also tell them that their sons and daughters will need to be intelligently cautious."

"I wish we weren't getting the publicity; there's no doubt about that."

Dean Proffer has also been in contact with the media and has done interviews with the local news on KXAS, KDFW and WFAA, as well as the Fort Worth Star Telegram, the Dean Beneze. "We needed to have just one person talking to the media." "I wish we weren't getting the publicity; there's no doubt about that," Proffer said. "Violence in society in general has just increased over the past ten years."

Proffer said that in the past ten years TCU has been increasing security on campus. Security guards on walking patrols and over a half million dollars of lighting have been added. "I don't think the risk to students is as great on campus as it is off campus," she said.

Proffer also said that panic is too strong a word to describe the way the parents of TCU students have reacted to the crimes. "They are all concerned though, or they wouldn't be calling," she said.

Assistant Dean Buck Beneze said that he has been receiving about three calls a day from parents and students. "They basically call for information on what has actually happened," he said. "I've personally found that parents have been worried, but not upset with TCU."

"What we're telling them is what actually happened and dispelling rumors and exaggerations," he said. "From all indications the body that was found was not dumped on campus, and from our knowledge there have been no rapes, murders or assaults on campus."

Awareness helps all

By Cheryl E. Phillips

During the fall semester of 1984 the TCU Daily Skiff publicized four different awareness weeks. The semester started off with a fire awareness week, followed by a deaf awareness week, alcohol awareness week and Hunger Week. Of these four awareness weeks, TCU participated in programs for all of them except fire awareness week. Fire awareness week did however receive an article in this publication.

This is great; everybody needs to become more attuned to the world outside campus life. As a result of fire awareness week, countless students, no doubt, ran right out to the nearest store and bought a good adapter for the myriad of extension cords that grace nearly every dorm room on campus.

Of course I feel sure that deaf awareness week had everyone on campus out buying a sign language book in order to communicate with the world's deaf population.

Alcohol awareness week was a big hit. One of the features of the week was a smashed up car parked outside the student center. Immediately following this week it seemed that students really were more aware of the problem. One student I know of told me that now he would get smashed, but leave time to sober up before driving home. Progress is the key word here.

Hunger Week was another killer (forgive the pun). My question here is after all these magnanimous students gave precious money out of their meal tickets, which most likely their parents paid for, and deposited pennies and nickels into rice bowls (keep in mind that only quarters can be used in laundromat machines), how many students continued in their aid to the world's underfed after Hunger Week ended. Sure, Hunger Week came to an end but the hungry of the world went on starving.

The problem is not with the awareness weeks, but with the students. I don't even totally blame the students, being one myself. I also suffer from too much homework and not enough time. I would, however, rather suffer with classes than starvation. As recipients of the privilege of education, we should at least give to those less fortunate than we.

I do think that we, as a student body, should make more of an effort to break away from the college campus syndrome. Yes, there is more to life than books, parties, and books. A whole wide world is out there. This world if full of things to be aware of, like self-defense, charity, and work programs to aid Third-World countries.

Taking responsibility is another big feature of the world outside. A feature that also should be a part of campus life. This responsibility needs to take form in students' responses to such things as awareness weeks. If a student really notices an awareness week then his or her lifestyle should change.

Fire prevention is something to be acted upon, not ignored. So quit hiding in the closet when the fire alarm goes off in your residence hall, go outside and stand in the rain with everybody else. It could be a real fire.

Don't just applaud the efforts of those who communicate with the deaf, get involved. Follow the lead of the 50 students who did sign up for the sign language class this spring.

I know a lot of people on this campus drink, I'm not gullible, people even get drunk, sometimes on purpose. Please exercise caution. If you are determined to drink, don't just allow time to sober up, you might be mistaken about how OK you really are. Ask a friend for a ride, or make arrangements ahead of time.

Hunger Week serves a valid purpose and makes a great contribution. The response of the students, I think, is wonderful, but how about sponsoring a suffering child for only 52 cents a day?

We are at the start of a new semester and probably new awareness weeks. Awareness is more than head knowledge about a problem, it is action to correct the problem. Please act.

Disregard for safety could be dangerous

Violence has increased in Fort Worth recently. Children have been kidnapped from their homes. A woman stabbed her assailant in the stomach with a paring knife. In September women started disappearing; three have re-appeared, dead. One body was found on the TCU campus.

Caution is the key word. Various campus organizations are considering an escort service for women walking alone at night. The administration distributed fact sheets on the murders and disappearances to hall residents as they checked in. Boxes full of the fact sheets are in prominent places around campus for non-resident students. The fact sheets also describe precautions for women to follow. The east and west doors of Sherley Hall are now locked at all times.

Caution is indeed the key word—or is it? The fact sheets are important. So important that residents toss them carelessly into garbage cans. Some residents do read the sheets, then throw them away. Those students must have photographic memories. Only a person with a photographic memory could expect to remember all of the precautions listed without posting that sheet somewhere.

Supposedly, residents and non-residents alike are using common sense. Rumor has it that people are walking in pairs, and no one will go out alone after dark. Note the word rumor in that last sentence. Admittedly not everyone on campus is foolish. Some people somewhere do follow safety precautions. The most visible signs around the residence halls, however, point to a flagrant disregard for safety.

Women are still walking from the stadium parking lot to residence halls alone, late at night. The fact sheets continue to be ditched into garbage cans. Residents forget their late-entrance keys and pound on windows of the lobby, hoping someone will be there to let them in. What if no one is there one cold, dark night? Not a pleasant thought.

Unfortunately, those unpleasant thoughts don't seem to cross the minds of many women who live in the residence halls. This isn't a game. Too often people repeat the fatal phrase, "it won't happen to me." A better phrase to remember would be, "I won't let it happen."

Five other women in the southwest area of Fort Worth might have once thought it wouldn't happen to them. News flash, it did.

Old problems are challenge

By WALTER R. MEARS

AP Special Correspondent WASHINGTON (AP)—Perhaps the second time around always is better, as President Reagan said. But the optimism of renewal is shaded by the limits and the lessons of four years in the White House.

The promises of an administration's first Inauguration Day often are greater for the fact that a new team is in power, new people with different ways of tackling old and intractable problems.

At the start of a second term, the challenge is to complete, to renew, to rededicate, to continue. It is the second act, usually played with much the same cast.

That applies to the second Reagan administration, even though the president's White House chief of staff is swapping jobs with his secretary of the treasury, and two of his top first-term aides are quitting the government. Former aides never are far away when the president needs advice.

Reagan's second inaugural address sounded the themes of his first, predictably. "Four years ago, I spoke to you of a new beginning and we have accomplished that," he told the leaders of government in the Capitol Rotunda, where they took haven against the cold that forced cancellation of the traditional outdoor inauguration.

He urged that the American economy be "freed from government's grip." It was a passage that recalled a theme of his first inauguration: "Government is not the solution; it is the problem."

In Monday's inaugural address, Reagan also renewed his call for a constitutional amendment seeking balanced budgets. He pushed that during his first term, but never past Congress. "Let us make it unconstitutional for the federal government to spend more than it takes in," he said. The amendment Reagan endorsed does not go that far. It would make it more difficult for Congress to approve deficit spending.

In an inaugural address, rhetoric sometimes prevails over specifics. Those will come soon enough, in the State of the Union message on Feb. 6, when Reagan tells Congress on his 74th birthday what he wants done in the year ahead.

Reagan calls for 'new boldness'

WASHINGTON (AP)— Launching his final four years as president with an appeal for "new boldness," Ronald Reagan has won promises from some members of Congress to help stop the arms race and reduce the huge federal deficits.

But congressional Democrats are warning that the president's initiatives on both the budget and defense could face a reception on Capitol Hill as chilly as the winds that forced Monday's inaugural ceremonies indoors.

Democratic leaders praised Reagan for striking a conciliatory, bipartisan note in his second inaugural address. But they criticized the president's mention of his proposed anti-missile defense and his call for a balanced federal budget in the face of the $200 billion federal deficit.

"It was nice rhetoric, but if he had to comply with his own call for a balanced budget, the government would have to shut down today," said Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

A chill of another kind—frigid air and strong winds—forced cancellation of the traditional inaugural parade down Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House and moved the swear-

'Let history say of us, these were golden years—when the American Revolution was reborn . . .'

—Ronald Reagan

ing-in ceremonies indoors. It was the first time since 1833 that brutally cold weather had forced cancellation of the festivities.

"Let history say of us, these were golden years—when the American Revolution was reborn, when freedom gained new life and America reached for her best," Reagan told a crowd of about 1,000 VIPs crammed into the Capitol Rotunda—only a fraction of the 140,000 who had held tickets to the planned ceremony on the West Terrace of the Capitol.

Speaking later in the day in a suburban sports arena to thousands of disappointed band members, Reagan said, "You would have been the greatest show on Earth."

A round of nine inaugural balls and scores of private parties culminated four days of inaugural festivities in the nation's capital.

Matching the jubilant mood of Washington, the New York stock market closed 34 points higher Monday.

Reagan delivered his inaugural address without benefit of a Teleprompter, unusual for a major presidential address.

The speech was solemn and, at times, poetic.

"We live in a world lit by lightning. So much is changing and will change, but so much endures and transcends time," Reagan said.

"We must think anew and move with new boldness, so every American who seeks work can find work; so the least among us have an equal chance to achieve the greatest things—to be heroes who heal our sick, feed the hungry, protect peace among nations and leave this world a better place," Reagan said, citing the "brotherhood of man."

"Our goal must be to bring those wonderful words to life by reducing the threat of nuclear war and by ensuring justice and opportunity for all our people," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., Reagan's chief congressional critic in his first term.

"I will do everything I can to work with President Reagan in making the 'brotherhood of man' a reality," the speaker said.

The Reagans celebrate with nine inaugural balls

WASHINGTON (AP)— President Reagan took his wife into his arms and danced Monday night to the "Tennessee Waltz" and "Nancy With the Smiling Face," climaxing four days of festivities celebrating the start of his second term.

The president and Mrs. Reagan criss-crossed Washington throughout the night in near-zero weather to attend all nine inaugural balls, promising supporters "You ain't seen nothing yet," and dancing with each other at most of them.

The Reagans, however, left the partying into the wee hours of the morning to others. Before midnight, they were back in the White House—45 minutes ahead of schedule—after winding up the evening at a veterans salute to 180 Congressional Medal of Honor winners at the Washington Hilton Hotel.

"We're all here; we love him," said Forrest L. Vossler of Syracuse, N.Y., a World War II Medal of Honor winner.

The Reagans kicked off the celebrations shortly before 9 p.m. at a Young Americans ball for the 18- to 30-year-old crowd at an armory.

"I'm glad we started the evening here," Reagan told the 8,000 guests, many of them precinct workers and campus Republican leaders.

The president one-stepped with the First Lady, who was wearing a white gown embroidered with thousands of white satin bugle beads and glittering trim, before switching partners with a young couple early into the waltz.

The Reagans joined Vice President George Bush and his wife Barbara at the Kennedy Center ball for supporters from Alabama, Idaho, Kansas, Pennsylvania and Texas.

At one of the other balls, Bush and his wife greeted a woman in a skin-tight blue skirt and scanty jeweled top identified only as Gladys, a dancer with the Xavier Cougar orchestra.

Mrs. Bush gave a quick glance down at the woman's outfit as Bush smiled and looked her right in the eye.

Reagan was relaxed and obviously enjoying himself throughout the evening.

At one point, he referred to George Washington's first inaugural in New York City and said that the first president's "favorite dance was the minuet."

Belushi murder suspect gives up fight against extradition to California

TORONTO (AP)— Cathy Evelyn Smith, a former rock singer accused of murdering comedian John Belushi with injections of cocaine and heroin, has ended her fight against extradition to California and turned herself in to police.

Brian Greenspan, attorney for the 37-year-old Toronto woman, said his client gave up her formal challenge of the extradition request after a 22-month fight because "discussions and negotiations" with the Los Angeles County District Attorney's office "provided an acceptable basis for Smith's voluntary departure."

Greenspan said Smith would fly to Los Angeles for a court appearance there Tuesday. He refused to say if prosecutors had agreed to reduced charges.

"It just wouldn't be proper; it would be inappropriate to comment further," he told reporters.

Store has purple profit

Rob Thomas
Skiff Reporter

Sales at the University Store didn't increase on all items last semester. "Just anything purple," said store manager Mike Gore.

While sales increases have occurred through each year at the store, Gore said that the fall semester has shown the greatest improvement he has seen in the sale of TCU emblazoned items. Normally the bookstore sells 500 bumper stickers. This year they have gone through 7000. Clothing sales have increased 48 percent and glassware sales have increased 100 percent.

"We had to bring in five or six extra people to help out temporarily," said Gore.

There were weekends that were particularly hectic at the store. The University Store had five times its normal business during Homecoming, and ten times its normal business on the weekend of the game with the University of Texas.

Business was so good that the University Store decided to open an outlet in the Westin Oaks Hotel where the TCU football team and many of their fans were staying during the Bluebonnet Bowl week. Sales for the first two days didn't amount to much, but on game day the outlet sold three times the TCU paraphernalia than they do on an average day at the home store.

"We sold as much stuff as three of us working could sell between 8:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. I had to send my son from floor to floor restocking us," said Gore.

Business outside the TCU community picked up considerably at the hotel store, and on some days that business was even greater than the TCU business. Gore said he believes that the outside business has continued to help with sales of other items in that some parents have started buying school supplies for their children and other items that are not normally bought by TCU students.

Although sales for all TCU items have been excellent, Gore said the sweatshirts with "TCU" sewed on have been the biggest seller. Gore said that eventually they were just selling the sweatshirts straight out of the boxes without ever getting them hung up.

"I think that these shirts are the greatest kind of advertising. It will help kids become familiar with the university," said Gore. "All of this can be attributed to Coach Wacker and the turnaround of the football team."

The University Store got caught up in the media attention that hit campus. "We had three or four television crews in the store a half dozen times. One even got carried away and filmed for two and one-half hours," said Gore.

As good as this year has been for the University Store, Gore doesn't think the boom is over. "I'm totally convinced that we'll have another increase in sales next year. I'm just not sure where we'll put it."

Brite Divinity sets precedent

Tim Dowling
Skiff Reporter

January 1986 will be a landmark for Brite Divinity School. Kenneth L. Teegarden, general minister and president of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), will assume the title Distinguished Minister in Residence at Brite. It will mark the first time that a president of the Christian Church has served on the faculty at TCU.

Teegarden, who is expected to retire from his current post as the denomination's chief executive officer in August after 11 years of service, will be involved in both teaching and the counseling of students in Brite.

"As a distinguished Disciples leader and an ecumenical church statesman in our time, Teegarden will add an important dimension to the program of Brite Divinity School," said Chancellor William Tucker.

Teegarden is presently a member of the Brite board of trustees, and is himself a graduate of Brite Divinity School. Because of this, Teegarden was attracted to TCU when approached by the seminary about serving as a teacher after his term in office concluded.

"It was really a confluence of circumstance that brought me to finish my years here at TCU," said Teegarden. "As a graduate of Brite and a long-time member of the board of trustees, I was attracted (to the appointment)." Teegarden added that he had planned to move his family to Fort Worth upon retirement in any case.

Noting that the university has had a strong relationship with the Christian Church since its inception, Teegarden said that he hopes to further the relationship of the seminary to the congregations of the Southwest in his capacity as distinguished minister in residence. Brite is the largest of the Christian Church's four seminaries.

Prior to his election as general minister and president of the Christian Church, Teegarden had been executive minister for the Christian Church in both Arkansas and Texas. He still serves as a member of the governing board and executive committee of the National Council of Churches, and was a delegate to the World Council of Churches assembly in Nairobi in 1973 and in Vancouver in 1983. In 1960, Teegarden organized the Little Rock Conference on Religion and Race, and later presided over the Arkansas Council of Churches and was a director of the Texas Conference of Churches.

In addition to a bachelor of divinity degree from Brite, Teegarden also holds both a bachelor's and master's degree from Phillips University and has been awarded honorary degrees by Phillips, Bethany College, Lynchburg College, Culver-Stockton College and TCU.

Plane crashes upon takeoff from Reno

Commuter-trains collide in Indiana

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—While investigators tagged yellow body bags in a Nevada field, friends and relatives waited in Minnesota to learn the fate of those who took the doomed Galaxy Airlines chartered gambling junket.

"I know that door's going to open and Louis's going to come in with all his suitcases and everything. I know he's going to," said Annette Fragale, whose husband, Louis, went to be best man when his brother Sam married Kay Meyer in Reno Saturday.

Fragale and the newlyweds were among those feared dead, although some relatives held out hope because not all those who had gone on the junket had taken the return flight.

Only three of the 67 people who did board survived when the four-engine Lockheed Electra turboprop crashed Monday, shortly after take-off from the Reno, Nev., airport en route to Minneapolis-St. Paul.

The survivors were George Lamson, 42, a carpenter from St. Paul, his son George Jr., 17, a student, and Robert Miggins, 45, a high school teacher in suburban Minneapolis. Lamson and Miggins were reported in critical condition at Nevada hospitals Tuesday; the younger Lamson received only minor injuries.

"I'm not a religious person, but this is the one time I believe in it," said Lamson's wife, Adrienne. "It seems God must have been listening to me."

Meanwhile, FBI investigators headed for the crash site with dental charts and other materials to assist the identification process. Red Cross and Washoe County sheriff's office spokesmen said no crash victims would be identified without complete confirmation.

A "bad feeling" prompted Douglas and Bev Abalan of Bloomington, Minn., to postpone the flight home, their son Russ said.

"They won some money while they were there and my mom was pretty tired, so they decided to take another flight," said Abalan.

On his return home Monday night, the elder Abalan said his feelings were "a mixture of sheer terror, and of being grateful for having not been on that airplane."

Bob Odell was at the Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport charter terminal trying to learn the fate of his 32-year-old brother, Roger.

"We realize most people died on the plane," said Bob Odell. "Let's face up to it. Let's get the list so we can get on with living."

GARY, Ind. (AP)—Two commuter trains, traveling on the same track during evening rush hour, crashed head-on in an accident that injured 129 people, a train spokesperson said.

Rescue crews had to use crowbars to free some of the people from the wreckage Monday evening, said Gary Fire Chief Bobby Joiner. But only 12 of the injuries were serious enough to require hospitalization.

The trains, part of the last electric inter-urban railroad in the United States, were on the same track during evening rush hour because sub-zero weather had damaged overhead electrical lines, said Richard Bunton, a spokesman for the South Shore Line.

The eastbound train "full of passengers" from Chicago struck the westbound train between stops in Gary, said Bunton.

Patricia Shadwick, 30, an insurance broker riding from Chicago to her hometown of Gary, said, "I was for-

... I went around to help people before I thought, I better sit down."

—Patricia Chadwic, train passenger fortunate that my injuries were not serious. There were four people on my car who were taken out on splinter stretchers."

"Everyone on the train pitched in, in fact, I went around to help people before I thought, I better sit down," Shadwick said.

"One car derailed, and the leading cars of each train were severely damaged," Bunton said.

"These are electrically propelled trains with an overhead system," he said. "The extreme cold gets into wire or any metal contacts. I assume that happened with the weather we had Saturday."

Temperatures fell to as low as 27 degrees below zero in Chicago early Sunday.

"The wires got torn down, both east and westbound, but we repaired the eastbound wires, and were working on the westbound when the accident occurred. We were single-tracking in the area," he said.

Tucker's home robbed

Earnest Perry
Skiff Reporter

All the security systems in the world can't seem to stop a thief when he wants to get in.

Chancellor William Tucker found the cold hard truth about being the victim of a robbery a little hard to take. While Tucker and his wife were away with the TCU Horned Frogs at the Bluebonnet Bowl, their home was robbed. The thieves took jewelry and silver that belonged to the Tuckers, as well as items which were owned by the university.

The burglars broke in through the Tuckers' roof and tore a hole through the ceiling leading to the wash room. When they found they were not in the main part of the house, they went back into the ventilation system and cut a hole into the kitchen.

"I guess they didn't know the house very well and missed the kitchen. It wasn't a pretty sight to see the way they broke in," said Tucker.

The TCU Police keep regular watch on the Tucker home and had made a routine check at 5 the morning of the robbery. They discovered the break-in on their 8 a.m. check of the home.

"They called us as soon as they discovered the break-in. Since the police were called and had started investigating the robbery, we felt that there was no need for us to rush back to Fort Worth and then rush back to Houston for the game the next day," Tucker said.

Tucker said the dollar value of the property stolen has not yet been assessed by the insurance company because their property as well as that of the university had been stolen.

The burglars carried the stolen goods away in Tucker's luggage. Since the robbery, a new security system has been installed that Tucker says should make it more difficult for someone to break in.

College faculty salaries fail to make the grade

AUSTIN (AP)— Faculty salaries at Texas' public colleges and universities are 4.1 percent higher this school year than last, but officials say that isn't enough to keep Texas on par with other states.

The state's average salary for the top four faculty ranks—professor, associate professor, assistant professor and instructor—rose from $30,278 in 1983-84 to $31,532 in 1984-85, according to figures released by the Coordinating Board of the Texas College and University System. The University of Houston-University Park paid the state's highest average salary at $35,665.

Nationally, salaries for those four ranks increased from $27,476 to $29,400, according to a Chronicle of Higher Education survey cited by the coordinating board.

Kenneth Ashworth, Texas' commissioner of higher education, said that the state's pay could be harming Texas' reputation in the national higher education community.

"The rest of the country is beginning to raise their salaries while ours are flattening," Ashworth said. "If we don't improve the salaries for the next biennium, we would slip below the national average again."

"When that happens, you are immediately in the position of not being able to recruit top-notch faculty, and you begin to lose ground," he added.

Ashworth and other administrators said the Legislative Budget Board proposal of 25 percent cuts in higher education allocations now before the Legislature also will hurt the quality of faculty even if budgets are not cut.

The Legislature probably won't set allocations until later in the spring, said Texas-Dallas President Robert Rutford.

Winter cold drives homeless to shelters

The fierce winter cold that flashed out of the arctic into the cities of Europe and North America this month flushed the homeless from the doorways and alleys, the park benches and sidewalk grates where they bundle in worn blankets, cardboard and newspapers.

From Paris to Nashville, from Rome to Philadelphia, from Brussels to Chicago, from Madrid to New York, they emerged from the urban shadows to seek shelter.

By President Reagan's Inauguration Day, thousands were settled in emergency shelters in New York, Chicago and other major cities. The mayor of Philadelphia ordered the police to sweep the streets and alleys of the City of Brotherly Love and bring in the homeless, whether they wanted help or not.

In Chicago there were an estimated 10,000 homeless youths on the streets, some as young as seven, and perhaps 25,000 homeless adults. As the wind chill off Lake Michigan dropped to 80 below zero, there were less than 2,000 available shelter beds.

In Nashville, Tenn., where the temperature dropped to an all-time record of 17 below zero Monday, rescue mission patrols and the police found the homeless huddled in parked cars and buses or numb with cold, walking the streets.

The surge of arctic air dropped temperatures to record lows throughout the Midwest, the East and deep into the South. On Monday it was 8 degrees below zero in Water Valley, Miss., and it was cold enough in New York City to freeze a glass of water in half an hour. The wind chill was 35 below zero in Atlanta.

In Europe this month, temperatures sank to 12 degrees in Rome, 9 degrees in Florence and 21 degrees in London, 10 degrees in Zurich and 4 below zero in Geneva and Paris. There was snow in Rome and 8 inches of downy white covered the beaches and palm trees of the Riviera.

The homeless were sleeping in the subways of Paris, Brussels and Vienna. In Washington, D.C., where the cold forced Reagan's second inaugural inside the Capitol, Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler took a walk in the winter wind and promptly sent a truckload of 300 blankets to a Washington shelter where 800 homeless people had sought relief from the bitter winds.

The wind chill was 16 below zero in Washington Monday.

New York City was housing some 20,000 homeless people a night.

The urgency in Europe was the same.

Everywhere, in Europe and the United States, some hardy souls refused help. In Spain, one said that help should go to the more needy. In Philadelphia, a city official said outreach efforts were beginning to meet some resistance, since most of those who wanted shelter were already there.

One Philadelphia relief worker said he had tried unsuccessfully to get a woman in her 60s to go to a shelter. She asked him, "Why are you crying? Why do you care what happens to me?"

But some undoubtedly were like the 69-year-old Spaniard who said he's been homeless since he lost his bricklaying job 10 years ago and his wife left him.

"I prefer to remain on the street," he said. "The street has been all for me the past 10 years. I can do what I like. In a shelter I might have to share a bed with Lord knows who."

Victory against gay rights may result in mayoral bid

HOUSTON (AP)—With a successful campaign against two proposed gay rights ordinances under his belt, Houston Councilman John Goodner says he may seek another victory—the mayor's post.

Goodner spearheaded efforts to defeat two laws that would have blocked the city from discriminating against homosexuals in its hiring practices. The efforts were successful, more than 80 percent of the ballots cast in Saturday's referendum opposed the proposals.

Goodner told The Houston Post in an article published Monday, it is "very possible" that in November he will run against Mayor Kathy Whitmire, who supported the gay rights proposals.

The councilman said several people called him Sunday saying they believe the referendum vote is a mandate for him to run for mayor. However, Goodner said he didn't think the mayor's defeat would eliminate her chances at reelection.

"... I really think Kathy can be beaten if someone were to focus on other issues too, like personnel problems and her lack of leadership."

—Houston Councilman John Goodner on Mayor Kathy Whitmire

"Because of that issue, she's hurt, but not mortally wounded," he said. "But I really think Kathy can be beaten if someone were to focus on other issues too, like personnel problems and her lack of leadership."

Whitmire told the Houston Chronicle the referendum represented only one issue. She said she is "very optimistic" leaders will unite to work on other problems "because there are so many things on which we can work together."

Houston city officials had the day off Monday in observance of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday. Mayoral aide Clarence West, reached at his home, said he would ask Whitmire to comment on Goodner's views, but he did not return a call.

A poll released by radio station KTRH Monday morning stated the vote "probably will have absolutely no real impact on the November elections at all," managing editor Mike McKean said.

The scientific poll of 711 registered voters in the city showed 52.4 percent look favorably on Whitmire's performance and 36.9 percent disapprove. Ten percent either had no response or did not recognize the mayor's name.

Goodner drew 26.9 percent favorable reactions and 7.5 percent unfavorable. Sixty-five percent of those asked either did not know who he was or had no opinion on his performance.

Commission requests study on snuff

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Federal Trade Commission today asked Surgeon General Everett Koop to launch a full-scale investigation of the dangers of snuff and chewing tobacco.

The agency called on Koop to organize a panel of experts similar to that set up in 1964 to look into the hazards of cigarettes. That effort eventually led to warning labels and a ban on broadcast cigarette advertising.

Ralph Nader-founded consumer organization, asked the FTC last year to require makers of snuff and chewing tobacco, the so-called smokeless tobacco, to warn consumers that use of the products can lead to cancer and other mouth dangers.

Transfer hours didn't transfer to computer

Erin O'Donnell
Skiff Reporter

Upon receiving their grade reports for the 1984 fall semester, many students were alarmed to find that they had not accumulated as many hours as they once thought, or were suddenly classified as freshmen again. But according to Marvin Keith, associate registrar, the discrepancy is nothing for students to worry about.

Keith explained that the recently replaced Sigma 9 computer system had no transfer credit hours in its memory and all transfer records were in paper form. When the conversion from the old system to the IBM system occurred during the summer of 1984, transfer work was not carried over into the new system's memory.

"We knew that the gap from the old system to the new system was one we would have to bite the bullet on," Keith said. "We knew we'd have to face the problem, so that's why we included the discrepancy on the grade reports—so students would contact the (registrar's) office and we could correct the problem."

The registrar's office is now in the process of updating students' records on the new system. Marvin explained that the process will span most of the spring semester, since it entails manually feeding transfer credit hours into the new system.

Vince Rodriguez, a senior journalism major planning to graduate in May, expressed concern for the "missing" transfer hours. His credit hours earned were off by a total of 30, 12 of which were pass/no credit hours which should not have been figured into his grade point average. Rodriguez also did not receive credit for six hours of Spanish which he tested out of. His concern remains in the fact that an accurate grade point average is required when applying for a job. "This morning I typed out a letter to the newspapers where I'm sending resumes explaining that I should have an accurate grade point average soon," Rodriguez said.

Shannon Green plans to graduate in August in psychology, and realized that her hours were also incorrect. "I'm graduating in August, so I wanted to make sure my hours were correct," she said.

Those students finding discrepancies with their transfer credit hours should notify the registrar's office.

Protests, prayer mark anniversary

Associated Press

Twelve years after the U.S. Supreme Court legalized abortion the issue remains surrounded by controversy, and activists on both sides are using today's anniversary of the ruling to make their point through protest and prayer.

In Cleveland, supporters of legalized abortion planned a potluck supper at Cleveland State University, where they will listen to music and write letters to elected officials thanking them for their continued support.

A few blocks away, the Greater Cleveland Right-to-Life chapter will hold its annual "Respect of Life" memorial service at the Masonic Temple auditorium.

While the Religious Coalition for Abortion Rights in Kansas holds a prayer breakfast, members of Kansans for Life plan to picket outside. The anti-abortion group also will be at the statehouse tonight handing out red roses to legislators and talking to them about right-to-life positions.

In Washington, demonstrators were to gather before noon Tuesday on the Ellipse a quarter of a mile from the White House before beginning their annual March for Life to the steps of the Supreme Court on Capitol Hill. Before the march, President Reagan was to address them on a loudspeaker hookup from the Oval Office.

Activists on both sides said that in commemorating the anniversary they wanted to avoid the violence that has haunted the abortion issue with increasing regularity in recent months.

In North Dakota Monday, abortion rights supporters ended a vigil that had lasted more than 60 hours at the Fargo Women's Health Organization, but clinic staff said a security guard would remain on duty to ward off any vandalism.

Three men were arrested Saturday in connection with eight anti-abortion bombings in Washington, D.C., Virginia and Maryland in the past year.

At least 24 such bombing attacks have occurred since last January, and the National Organization for Women sponsored round-the-clock vigils at 25 family planning centers and abortion clinics in 18 states to protest the violence.

The Supreme Court's decision Jan. 22, 1973, overturned a Texas law that had prohibited abortions except to save the life of a mother.

Koncak leads SMU over Frogs, 74-70

Grant McGinnis
Skiff Reporter

They may not have gained a victory out of the contest, but Jim Killingsworth's TCU Horned Frogs gained plenty of respect Saturday afternoon at Moody Coliseum in Dallas. The Frogs, behind the 28-point performance of guard Dennis Nutt, fell 74-70 at the hands of the third-ranked Southern Methodist University Mustangs.

TCU entered the contest with only one victory in the Southwest Conference, and not many of the 7,325 people in attendance expected the game to be so close. But close it was, as the Frogs gave the Mustangs a bit of a scare. Meanwhile, the Ponies stretched their overall record to 15-1.

"We played as hard as we could play," Killingsworth said. "We just fell a little short."

Short is a good word to describe the reason for the loss. The Frogs just didn't have the height to effectively guard SMU's big man, Olympian Jon Koncak. Although TCU held Koncak scoreless for the first eight minutes, the 7-footer poured in 29 points on the day, added 13 rebounds, two blocked shots and a steal to lead the way for the Ponies.

SMU Head Coach Dave Bliss was pleased with Koncak's play. "I thought Jon Koncak played a good game," he said. "They just weren't tall enough to handle him."

"It's always intimidating when you have to play someone that big," said TCU forward Carven Holcombe. "He uses his body real well."

Nutt echoed Holcombe's sentiments. "Koncak is the key to SMU," he said, "but they have everyone out there playing together."

The Frogs did some playing together of their own in the first half. Killingsworth elected to go the entire 20 minutes with his starters. "They did so well that I just left them in there," Killer said. The half ended with the Mustangs ahead by two, 31-29.

"We showed them a real patient offense that mixed them up a little," Holcombe said.

Killingsworth agreed. "I thought for the most part we kept our poise and kept control of the game pretty well," he said. "I thought we did a decent job of what we were trying to do."

At least until midway through the second half, that is. With just over 12 minutes remaining in the game and TCU up 43-41, the roof fell in on the Frogs. TCU's Tom Mortimer committed a foul on Koncak. When Koncak missed the second of two free throw attempts, SMU's Johnny Fuller pulled down the rebound and hit a 4-foot jumper.

Ten seconds later, SMU's Butch Moore stole the ball from Nutt and set up Fuller for another basket. Fuller was fouled on the play by Marc Houston, hit the first free throw, but missed the second. Another steal, this time by Carl Wright off Holcombe, set up Koncak for one of the big man's patented stuffs. All of a sudden the Ponies were up by six.

TCU lost the lead at that point, falling behind by as much as 10 points. The closest the Frogs came was the final 4-point spread.

TCU's starting five got in foul trouble early in the second half. "We picked up the fouls," Killingsworth said, "and no matter what you say, they

(the players) won't play as aggressive because they want to stay in the ball game." Holcombe, Nutt and Tracy Mitchell played all 40 minutes for the Frogs, and it showed in the late stages of the second half. "They just kind of wore us down," Nutt said.

The Frogs did have one more chance with just over 20 seconds left, but TCU's Greg Grissom lost a Holcombe pass out of bounds and the contest was over.

Bliss was especially impressed with the play of Nutt and Holcombe. "Next time we play TCU, they've gotta have a rule that everyone has to shoot, not just those two," he said. "That makes it a tough two hours on us."

For the record, Holcombe had 17 points and seven rebounds to go along with Nutt's 28-point performance. Holcombe's performance came despite a sprained ankle he suffered earlier in the week against Texas A&M. If the ankle was bothering the sophomore forward, he didn't show it.

"The real athletes don't seem to let those things bother them," Killingsworth said. "They realize there is something more important going on."

Frog's center Marc Houston had 10 points and multiple bruises to show for his day against Koncak. Grissom came off the bench to score eight for TCU while Tracy Mitchell added six and starter Michael Washington scored one point.

For SMU, Koncak led the way with 29, Wright had 15 (before leaving the court for the locker room after being benched by Bliss in the last minute), and Larry Davis scored 13 points. Fuller totaled 11 points, most of them during those crucial two minutes in the second half. Terry Williams, with four points, and Scott Johnson, with two, rounded out the scoring for SMU.

The Frog's record now stands at 1-5 in the conference, 9-8 overall. They'll have the remainder of this week to rest up for the Texas Longhorns.

Frogs lose Bluebonnet Bowl New Year's Eve

Earnest L. Perry
Skiff Reporter

By now almost everyone has heard the 31-14 score, but for those of you who spent your break in other parts of the country, here's how the TCU Horned Frogs ended a memorable season on a sour note.

From the opening kickoff to the end of the game it was all Mountaineers. West Virginia used the same game plan that Texas and Texas A&M used on the Frogs: keep the high-powered TCU offense off the field, pick away at the weak spots in the Frog defense and do whatever it takes to score more points than the Frogs.

Using an offensive game plan in which the run set up the pass, the Mountaineers gained ample yards on the ground, but found touchdown heaven using the pass.

West Virginia's biggest break came when TCU All-America running back Kenneth Davis was carried off the field on a stretcher in the first quarter (The injury was diagnosed as a sprained lower leg and a stretched nerve).

Up to that point, the Frogs had managed to stay within one touchdown of West Virginia. But after Davis went out, the running game was shut down and the Frogs seemed to regress to their 1-8-2 form of a year ago.

The Mountaineers opened the game with a nine play, 80-yard drive that culminated in a 2-yard pass from quarterback Kevin White to wide receiver John Gay. TCU struck back on a 5-yard pass from quarterback Anthony Gully to flex end Dan Sharp.

From then on it was all West Virginia. The first quarter ended with the Mountaineers leading 14-7 after White hit a wide-open Gary Mullen behind the Frog secondary for a 62-yard touchdown.

On the play following Davis' injury, running back Roscoe Tatum fumbled a Gully pitch. The ball was recovered by West Virginia's Van Richardson at the TCU 2-yard line. Three plays later West Virginia had a two-touchdown lead.

A 5-yard touchdown pass from White to running back Ron Wolfley and a 21-yard field goal by Paul Woodside gave the Mountaineers all the points they needed. From that point on, all West Virginia had to do was sit on their lead, and they did.

In the second half, the Frogs could only put together one score, a 20-yard pass from Gully to wide receiver Keith Burnett.

West Virginia held the top-ranked Frog offense to 337 yards with the TCU running game generating a mere 150 yards on 44 carries. The passing game was not much better.

Thanks Frogs

Grant McGinnis

The temperature was 26 degrees below zero outside, and there was plenty of snow on the ground. Inside, the mood was anticipation and excitement for New Year's Eve and the Bluebonnet Bowl.

I had gathered my closest friends with the invitation to a party and the promise that my beloved TCU Horned Frogs would warm their hearts, still cold from the brisk Canadian winter outside.

When game time arrived, we had warmed up with plenty of beer and pretzels. The crowd eagerly awaited go a whoop of joy as the Frogs got on the board with Dan Sharp's 5-yard reception from Anthony Gullely. It was seven-all and I figured, no problem.

But then, suddenly, there was a problem. Kenneth Davis went down with an injury and all my hopes for a TCU bowl victory went out the window. The Frogs had ruined the party.

I'm sure mine wasn't the only party spoiled that night, although I'm pretty certain it was the coldest. The wonderful Horned Frog season of 1984 was over, and it couldn't have ended in a worse way.

All that happened several weeks ago, and I've placed it far behind me. Today, I look forward to the future of Frog football under Coach Jim Wacker, and reflect on all the memories of the tremendous season past.

Never again will we see the likes of Maness, Sharp, Linwood and Thomas on the turf at Amon Carter Stadium. Instead, they may appear on our TV screens Sunday afternoons in the uniforms of the Los Angeles Raiders, the New York Giants, or heaven forbid, the Arizona Wranglers.

Others from the team may not be heard from again in the football wars, or perhaps in any other place. They might go on to careers as doctors or lawyers or salesmen. We may even see them around the campus from time to time as they work toward finishing their degrees.

Yes, the Frogs of 1984 are gone, but certainly not forgotten. They didn't win the big one, but they did win a lot of hearts. Thanks for the memories guys. Fort Worth and TCU will always be grateful.

Lady Frogs fall to SMU: sixth loss in a row

Karen R. Furlong
Skiff Reporter

TCU's Lady Frogs cemented their hold on last place in the Southwest Conference following a 94-74 pounding by the Southern Methodist University Lady Mustangs at Moody Coliseum in Dallas Saturday.

Aided by Shasta Smothers-Johnson's 36 points, which set an SMU single game scoring record, the Lady Mustangs were able to prevent TCU from acquiring their first conference win. Instead, the Lady Frogs suffered their sixth straight defeat in the Southwest Conference, dropping their overall record to 4-12.

SMU took an 8-point lead at just over two minutes into the game, before TCU finally got on the scoreboard with a layup by center Carol Hlavaty. SMU then scored two unanswered goals, increasing their lead to 10.

With 12:49 left in the first half, SMU held a 15-point lead before Hlavaty and guards Staci Ward and Terri Janak each scored to pull the Lady Frogs within 11 at 26-15.

SMU took the opportunity to extend their lead to 30-15 when TCU forward Carol Glover fouled Smothers-Johnson twice. With half the period remaining, SMU had a 17-point lead, but TCU made a threatening comeback by sinking five consecutive baskets. The break pulled the Lady Frogs to within 7, and with only five minutes remaining in the half, TCU had narrowed the Lady Mustangs lead to 37-35.

Despite SMU going nearly four minutes without scoring, TCU never led and at halftime were trailing 50-45.

TCU managed to keep pace with the Mustangs for much of the second half, narrowing the score to 60-56 on a Glover layup with 13:39 remaining in the game. It wasn't enough however. Eight minutes later the Lady Mustangs had scored seven straight times to increase their lead to 84-61 and the game was all but over.

After the game, TCU Head Coach Fran Garmon was frustrated with the loss. "We had expected us to be doing better by this time," she said. "We have no killer instinct and we're intimidated by teams who give it to us. Nobody wants to take it to the basket."

Hlavaty agreed with Garmon's assessment of the team's lack of aggressiveness: "Intensity's a key to winning a game and we need to hustle more," she said. "It seems like we're just down 2 points and we look up and we're down 20. We just lose our concentration."

'Intensity's a key to winning a game and we need to hustle more.'
-Carol Hlavaty, TCU center

Garmon voiced her disappointment with the team's fortunes this season. "If we could do well against one team," she said, "things would be different, but until then..."

Hlavaty led the Lady Frogs in scoring with 18 points, followed by Terri Janak with 16 points. Julie Hendrickson had 11 points for the Lady Frogs and Staci Ward chipped in with 9.

TCU's next action is this Saturday at 5 p.m. when they'll take on the University of Texas' nationally ranked Lady Longhorns. The game will be part of a double-header at Daniel-Meyer Coliseum with the men facing Texas at 7:30 p.m.

COMMENTARY

the opening kickoff. When that kickoff came, the party started to go downhill.

The West Virginia Mountaineers opened the game with one long pass, followed quickly by another lengthy reception. Before we knew what had hit us the Horned Frogs were down by seven.

"Don't worry," I assured my doubting buddies, "the Frogs have been down plenty of times early in the ball game and have always come back."

Well, my prediction came true, and we all breathed a sigh of relief and let
