Decline in donors, blood drives misses its projected goals

W. Robert Padgett
Skiff Reporter

For the third straight semester, the number of pints donated to the TCU-sponsored blood drive has fallen.

This semester's total donation was 348 pints, according to Mark Hernandez, Clark Hall director and chairman of the recent blood drive. The blood drive's projected goal for spring 1985 was between 600 and 650 pints, Hernandez said before the drive began. In fall 1984, Hernandez said 407 pints were donated and that in spring 1984, TCU received 467 pints.

"We didn't get as much as in the past," Hernandez admitted. He attributed the lack of donors this semester to seasonal illnesses and inadequate publicity.

"There's a lot of colds and stuff going around," Hernandez said. "The lack of publicity might also be a big thing. We've been mainly focusing on the Student Center and hoping people come to the Student Center and give blood."

Hernandez said in the future the organizers of the blood drive will attempt to advertise throughout the entire campus and not limit the publicity to the Student Center. "We'll try to spread it (advertising) a little more next time," he said.

Despite the shortage of pints of blood donated this semester compared to past blood drives, Hernandez said Carter Blood Center—which gets the donated blood—is still appreciative of TCU's efforts.

"I talked to a guy—Bill Ball—down at Carter and he said TCU is still one of the best donating universities (to the blood center)," Hernandez said.

For the third time of the last four semesters, Clark Hall came away with the most points for an organization involved in the blood drive. Points are awarded to a group based on donation and participation in the program, Hernandez said.

Clark received 66 points, while second-place Colby Hall compiled 52 points and Brachman Hall earned 39. Panhellenic sponsored its own blood drive for the sororities. Alpha Phi sorority won that competition, compiling 39 points.

ARCO endows geology department

Diane Vallejo

Representatives of Atlantic Richfield Company, recently presented $3,200 to the TCU geology department.

ARCO employees Bill Goodman and Ed Mellor presented the check to Arthur Ehlmann, geology department chairman. Mellor is a 1978 geology graduate of TCU.

"It helps a great deal when a major employer such as ARCO likes the program and is willing to support it," Ehlmann said. "It means a lot to the prestige of the department to have that kind of support," Ehlmann said.

ARCO budgets a certain amount of money for educational support, Ehlmann said.

"We are a supplier of employees for ARCO, so that is probably why they chose to do this," Ehlmann said of the donation.

"They obviously have confidence in the program we offer here," he added.

"I've had comments from ARCO about the fact that they value the small number of students we have and the amount of attention students receive from the faculty," Ehlmann said.

The department does not always receive the amount of money it asks for, depending on the number of schools that are also asking for donations and the amount of funds available at the time, Ehlmann said.

"We're asked to make a request for funds. We're asked to apply if there are various kinds of needs," he said.

"We submit what it is that we want, why we want it and how it will benefit the program," he said.

ARCO hires people with master's degrees only and their support is based primarily on the geology graduate program, Ehlmann said.

Showers to be repiped

Stéphanie Cherry
Skiff Reporter

TCU students have been faced with a lack of hot water during the prime shower times this winter, but if repairs go as planned, those problems will be gone by the time students return next fall.

Ronnie Newman, the assistant superintendent of HVAC operation and mechanical maintenance, says work on the water pipes in Pete Wright residence hall is half done.

Work on the pipes in Colby Hall residence hall began last week.

"The piping for the showers is getting clogged up internally," Newman said.

He said repairing the problem involves tearing out the walls behind the showers, taking out the old pipes, putting in new pipes and replacing the wall. The process takes about three weeks.

Newman said the maintenance department plans to repipe all the showers in the building, working on one room at a time.

He said the repiping in both residence halls will be completed during the summer.

"We try not to get into it too heavy during the school year, so we don't create more problems than they (the students) already have," Newman said.

Waits and Foster residence halls have also had a lack of hot water, particularly in the mornings.

Newman said the city water that enters the tank is 75-80 degrees during the warmer months, but during colder weather, the water entering the tank is 35-40 degrees.

"When they use it (the water) real fast, it can't come in and heat up quick enough," Newman said. However, heat exchanges are on order and will be installed by the last week of March.

"With the heat exchanges, the city water goes through them first and then goes into the tank, so we guarantee 80 degree water all the time," Newman said.

Jack Arvin, the coordinator of residence hall services, said other residence halls had been having problems with hot water, but the problems were minor.

"We have some that are temporary problems that are leaks, errors of some kind or another, or faulty controls of some sort. They are usually relatively easy to find and fairly quickly fixed," Arvin said.

Peres, pope attempt to smooth relations

ROME (AP)— Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres hoped his audience Tuesday with Pope John Paul II would smooth relations irritated by the Jewish state's annexation of Jerusalem and the Vatican's outspoken support for Palestinian rights.

Before Peres' visit, the last Israeli head of government to meet the leader of the Roman Catholic Church was Golda Meir, who held a stormy session with Paul VI at the Vatican in 1973.

Peres refused to say before his audience what he intended to discuss with John Paul but expressed hope the talk would improve relations between Christians and Jews.

"Too many tragedies have been caused by misunderstandings between Jews and Christians," he told reporters before leaving Israel Monday.

Haydon recuperating, outlook for Schroeder gloomy

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)— Artificial heart recipient Murray P. Haydon's doctors beamed about his recuperation as he resumed breathing on his own, but a "discouraged" and fever-plagued William J. Schroeder may never be well enough to leave the hospital, doctors said.

Haydon could only mumble yes and no Monday after a respirator was removed from his irritated throat, but his condition "is so good it's frightening," said Dr. Allan M. Lansing, medical spokesman for the surgery team that implanted the Jarvik-7 heart Sunday.

Haydon, 58, of Louisville, ate ice chips Monday night, his first step toward sipping fluids rather than taking them through a tube. Lansing said the "next plateau" would be ridding Haydon of all his tubes and monitoring lines, except for the compressed-air lines that keep the heart beating.

Meanwhile, Schroeder, the world's second recipient of a permanent artificial heart, continued to suffer an untraceable fever and memory lapses and was described as "withdrawn."

Lawmakers push second mortgages

AUSTIN (AP)— Texans want to use their homes as collateral on loans for educational, medical and other expenses, according to two lawmakers pushing a constitutional amendment on second mortgages.

"We're only trying to let people use equity for a purpose that is important to them," Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said at a Monday news conference.

Brooks and Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, on Monday filed the proposed constitutional change that is opposed by the Texas Consumer Association.

The two lawmakers said their proposal would not put borrowers in undue jeopardy of losing their homes to creditors.

Under the current law, a Texan can lose his home only for failure to repay a first mortgage, home improvement loan or taxes. Texas is the only state that bars second mortgages, according to Brooks.

The senator said second mortgages are needed by families who have "paid 18-20 years on the property, have their first lien down to $15,000-$20,000, have a home worth $70,000 and want to send the child to college or they have a catastrophic illness."

"This allows Texans to borrow on the equity of their homes," said Danburg. "The money is rightfully theirs."

The Texas Consumer Association said in a position paper that second mortgages are not needed in the state.

"The homestead exemption has played a role in the economic stability of the state and has worked well for Texas citizens," the association paper said.

Danburg said second mortgages could be used to help Texans start businesses. But the consumer association said loans for new businesses, and most other purposes, now are readily available.

"The reason lenders will not make most new business loans now is that they realize the high risk involved and yet they want to encourage people to mortgage the family homestead on propositions with the same degree of failure," the association said.

Brooks said opponents of second mortgages are using decades-old "horror stories" involving old ladies losing their homes.

"Almost all of them involved things that were against the law or unethical in the first place," he said of the "horror stories."

The consumer association maintains the bill is favored only by "large national corporations who see Texas homesteads as ripe for picking," including Citicorp, Sears, Transamerica and other lenders who have formed Texans for Home Value Access to push legalized second mortgages.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said Monday he is not ready to take a stand on second mortgages.

"I think it's something we ought to let the committee look at and study," he said.

Lewis said he would not favor a constitutional change that would "allow people to lose their homes," but added, "I can see the problems people are running into. They are frustrated when that equity is not available to use."

Boeing 727 crashes in Spain

BILBAO, Spain (AP)— A Boeing 727 belonging to the national airline Iberia crashed today in northern Spain, civil aviation authorities said. Initial reports said all 141 passengers and six crew members had been killed, but airport officials said rescue parties reported at least 20 survivors.

Civil aviation authorities said Flight 610 from the Spanish capital, Madrid, crashed into 3,340-foot-high Oiz Hill just before it was to land in this Basque industrial city.

Air traffic controllers said the aircraft disappeared from their monitors at 9:35 a.m. (3:35 a.m. EST), some 15 minutes before it was due to land at Sondica airport.

Civil aviation authorities, who refused to be identified by name, said the crash occurred 17 miles southeast of Bilbao near the town of Durango as the plane was making its approach.

The authorities said the weather was cloudy in Bilbao at the time of the crash, but airport officials said flights to and from Bilbao in similar weather conditions were common.

At first it was reported that 141 passengers and six crew members had perished. Later, airport officials told The Associated Press by telephone that rescue parties were reporting there were "at least 20 survivors."

There were no immediate reports about the nationalities of the passengers, although most of them were believed to be Spaniards.

Diversity builds profits

By Joe Wheelan

DENVER (AP)— Michael Feiner sought to put 2,500 families in new homes last year, a not too surprising ambition for what may be the nation's fastest growing homebuilder.

Feiner and his blunt business philosophy and flexible management style have made MDC Corp., whose better-known subsidiary is Richmond Homes, a big moneymaker.

During the past five years, a period that was unkind to many homebuilders, the concern's earnings grew 50 percent annually, while cash flow tripled.

"I think the commitment to profitability is the whole story," said Feiner, president of MDC. "We try to make a profit every day with everything we do."

He said he runs MDC "like a corporation, not like a home-building company."

The company has expanded from home building into development, mortgage financing and real estate management. Feiner expects revenues of $250 million and earnings of about $14 million for 1984. He is hoping for a record $400 million in revenues this year.

"Other companies have two-year and five-year plans for making profits. We do too, but we want to make a profit while getting there," he said.

He said many homebuilders are almost fatalistic about profits. When business is booming, they ride the crest. When there is a slump, they try to ride it out.

MDC, however, tries to make a profit all the time, which means diversifying when necessary.

When home sales lagged because of high interest rates, the company's senior management went to Wall Street for cheap mortgage money. The result was another MDC subsidiary, First Nationwide Mortgage Corp.

It also began to speculate in the land market and then to invest money in whatever opportunities came along. Two years ago MDC bought a savings and loan from a conglomerate and later sold its interest for a $3 million profit.

In 1983, the company returned to Wall Street and raised $185 million in long-term capital, enabling MDC to be opportunistic, and independent of the short-term money markets at the same time.

"When you have money in the bank you have liquidity; you have the ability to grow," Feiner said.

Another reason for MDC's success, Feiner said, is its managerial style, which requires adaptable, aggressive executives.

Its senior managers are lawyers, accountants and real-estate people, backed up by a team of 14 CPAs. In the wings are middle managers and Feiner's "emerging management team" of young executives.

For all its successful diversification, homebuilding remains MDC's bread and butter.

After being founded in 1972 as Mizel Development Corp., MDC was in the business of apartment construction and condominium conversion. Between 1978 and 1981, it built custom homes in the $145,000-$400,000 range. In the past three years MDC shifted again, to homes costing between $70,000 and $130,000.

"We are careful to locate in areas that we believe will out-perform the national economy, and then build the highest-quality affordable housing for the working class," said Feiner.

Seventy percent of MDC's business is in Colorado, but it is also active in Tucson and Phoenix, Ariz., and Orlando, Fla.

History, not awareness, needed

February has been designated as Black History month. There have been a variety of programs and presentations to inform the community of the achievements of black Americans.

History books have failed to mention the contributions of blacks to American society. Black Awareness month has attempted to present the campus with a history of the United States that had long gone untold. It is important that this history be known.

However, February is not designated as Black History month at TCU; it is Black Awareness month. During February, the campus is asked to be aware of blacks.

It is the word "awareness" that has confused and disturbed people. How aware should non-blacks be?

Should black and white students be consciously "aware" of the differences between the colors of their skin? During February, should yellow, brown and red students study black friends in hopes of becoming more "aware" of any previously unrecognized differences? Do blacks want a designated time when others will be "aware" of them just for the color of their skin?

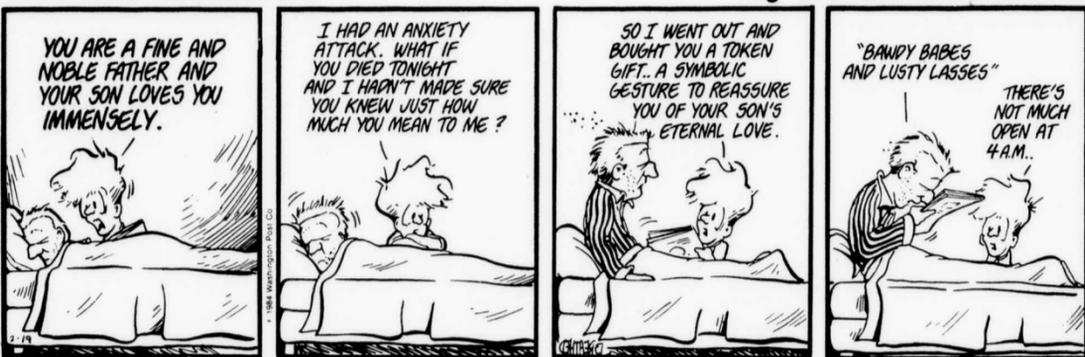

To be aware of something only means to be conscious of its existence. If there is a problem at TCU then a month of awareness won't remedy it.

If this month's programs are designed to make some positive changes by informing the community about the history of blacks then February should become Black History Month.

For equality to be a reality we must be less "aware" of our differences and more informed about our history.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

As I was sitting in the Student Center eating my lunch today, I watched the people going by, talking with each other, buying flowers, participating in the Job Fair and generally doing their thing.

It occurred to me that we don't appreciate our students enough. I know that speaking for myself, there are times when a student comes to my desk in the Controller's Office and gets a frown for his or her trouble. We all have bad days, but that's no excuse. I believe the students here at TCU to be a cut above the average population—any young population you care to name.

A lot of people reading this are going to say, "Oh, she's prejudiced. She works here." Exactly. I get to see almost every person at this university at one time or another up close and personal. I still think this particular group of students, faculty and staff are an outstanding group of folks.

We should all take the time to say to each other that we appreciate each other a little more. Heaven knows we hear enough about the bad things that happen and we talk about them more, too. This is my valentine to the student body. I think you're all pretty neat.

Stanford Needs A Few Good Men

STANFORD, Calif. (AP)— Stanford University wants 30 men to volunteer to watch pornographic movies while researchers measure their levels of sexual arousal.

The idea of the erotic research is to try to determine what causes men to experience a decline in sexual activity and excitement as they age, said Dr. Robert Rowland, a research fellow on the project.

Half the volunteers must be between the ages of 21 and 30 and the other half must be over 70, so that researchers can study the differences in sexual arousal and functioning in the two age groups, he said.

Rowland said the research might help shed some light on whether declining sexual arousal is due to psychological or physiological factors, or a combination.

Although sexual activity declines with age for many men, "there are quite a few individuals that continue to function sexually well into their 70s and 80s."

Vote keeps Elvis off the street

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP)— City Council members recognize Elvis Presley as a giant of the music industry, but they don't think a 10-by-20-foot cutout of the rock 'n' roll singer belongs on busy city streets.

Council members voted 5-2 on Monday to refuse Jimmy Velvet's request to put up the oversized cutout to draw attention to his year-old Presley museum, in a shopping center at the heart of Orlando's tourist district.

Velvet said he tried parking Presley's Lockheed Jet Star airplane out front, but tourists didn't recognize it for what it was and drove by. He hoped to solve the problem with the cutout, which was used to advertise the Warner Bros. film, "This is Elvis."

The giant Elvis violated the city's restrictions on the size of signs and the council wouldn't make an exception.

Mayor Bill Frederick told Velvet not to take the vote as "a personal insult." He said Orlando is "flattered" to have the museum, but the council doesn't want the cutout distracting motorists at a busy intersection.

Mayor Bolen declares Army ROTC day at TCU

Dan Petersen
Skiff Reporter

TCU's Army ROTC rappelled, marched and performed a mock assault Saturday in honor of what Fort Worth Mayor Bob Bolen has declared as Army ROTC day at TCU.

The mayor proclaimed Army ROTC day in honor of the Feb. 16 program for area high school seniors, their parents and counselors.

Lt. Col. Bruce Stacy, head of TCU's Army ROTC, said some area high school seniors who have already applied to TCU were interested in the ROTC program and this was a good way to expose them to it.

"In my estimation, you create an interest in the program before the students arrive on campus," Stacy said.

The day began in the Moudy Communication Building with a slide show, then the program moved to Amon Carter Stadium where the drill team performed precision marching exercises. The Rangers then rappelled from the highest part of the stadium; the first rappeller fell about half way down the side of the stadium and was jerked to a stop by a safety rope.

This demonstration was used to show that rappelling, as dangerous as it may seem, is safe if the correct safety measures are taken, Cadet Allen McCormick, Ranger commander said.

The Ranger squad, carrying M-16 rifles, performed a mock assault on the hill behind the stadium, which they successfully secured. The program was concluded with a hand-to-hand combat demonstration featuring different techniques in warding off a would-be attacker.

A three-year full scholarship is available to anyone with a GPA of 3.0 or above that is qualified to join ROTC, Greg Ellison, assistant professor of military science said.

Ellison said there are a lot of people who would qualify and the Army would pay all school fees, including books, plus a $100 per month allowance.

"Presently 27 out of 122 cadets are on full scholarships, with plenty of room for more. You can even take rappelling, marksmanship and other Army ROTC classes without being in the program," Ellison said.

Anyone wanting more information about TCU's Army ROTC program should contact Lt. Col. Bruce Stacy at 921-7455 or stop by his office in Winton-Scott Room 118.

Endowed position offers at UT are turned down by top-rank researchers

AUSTIN (AP)— Top-rank researchers, frightened by legislative proposals to slice state university budgets, have turned down offers to fill million-dollar endowed chairs in science and engineering at the University of Texas, according to UT officials.

"We've had individuals that were pretty well committed to coming here and joining our team who have now decided to cancel or postpone," said Earnest Gloyna, UT dean of engineering.

Gloyna declined Monday to identify those who have refused endowed positions, or even to say how many have rejected UT.

He said budget cut proposals "tell these people to be a lot more cautious about jumping in with us."

"The courtship required to bring people on board is much more difficult now," he said.

The budget proposals also were criticized by Bob Inman, chairman of Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp., which announced two years ago that Austin had won the high-tech sweepstakes to become the home of the consortium.

"If we were making the site selection decision for MCC in the spring of 1985 instead of the spring of 1983, I would have to think very carefully about whether I would recommend MCC coming to Texas," Inman was quoted as saying during the weekend.

The creation of 32 UT science and engineering chairs endowed for $1 million dollars apiece in April 1984 attracted national press attention and turned heads at the nation's premier research institutions, including Stanford University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. At the time, UT President Peter Flawn said university commitments in microelectronics and computer fields would establish a reputation for UT as "the place to be during the next two decades."

Gloyna said the university had intended to fill the chairs as soon as possible after they were announced.

Veterans revisit Iwo Jima on anniversary

IWO JIMA (AP)— American and Japanese veterans of the fierce five-week struggle to take this rocky speck of land returned today to place a memorial above the sands of Iwo Jima in hopes that so many lives—27,000—will never be sacrificed in war again.

Forty years ago Tuesday, three divisions of U.S. Marines waded through the Pacific, coming ashore on the volcanic ash beaches, 660 miles south of Tokyo.

When the battle ended March 26, 1945, nearly 21,000 Japanese had been annihilated after fighting from caves and tunnels and being cut off from reinforcements. About 6,800 Americans were killed in the fight, one of the bloodiest battles in World War II's four-year campaign in the Pacific.

For most of the Americans, it was the first return to the island, which now has small U.S. and Japanese military stations.

It was an emotion-charged experience both for the ex-Marines, who with wives and a few children numbered about 280, and the 110 Japanese, including 50 of the 1,000 or so who survived.

"It sure brings back a lot of memories, deep down inside," said Joseph Selby, of Maple Shade, N.J., who lost all but one of his eight-man machine gun squad in the first few minutes of fighting.

TCU hosts SMU tonight

Grant McGinnis
Skiff Reporter

If the TCU Horned Frog basketball team is uptight about facing the Southern Methodist University Mustangs Wednesday night, they aren't showing it.

TCU appeared loose as they warmed up for practice Tuesday afternoon at Daniel-Meyer Coliseum. After a disappointing loss Saturday night to Texas A&M, the Frogs look ready to take on the nationally ranked and league-leading Mustangs.

"I think we've had a few good practices since Saturday," TCU guard Dennis Nutt said. "We've got the (Southwest Conference) tournament to look forward to, so we can keep our hopes high."

Nutt said TCU was looking to play the same type of game as the last time the two teams met. SMU beat the Frogs by a score of 74-70 at Moody Coliseum in Dallas Jan. 19. At that time, the Mustangs had only lost one game.

"It'll be the same type of game," Nutt said of Wednesday's contest. "We always try to play them real close. We don't want to get into their kind of game."

Nutt said that guard Butch Moore is the key to SMU's attack. "If he's got it going, they're pretty hard to stop," Nutt said. "They've got the talent. It's just a case of whether they come out and put it all together."

The Mustangs come into the game with a 9 and 3 record in the SWC and a 20 and 5 mark overall. TCU's record now stands at 6 and 7 in the conference and 14 and 10 overall.

SMU is coming off a weekend victory over the University of Louisville. Although the Cardinals are not the national power they have been in recent years, the win nevertheless was a good one for the Mustangs' confidence level, according to Nutt.

Nutt said it was important to catch SMU on the right kind of night. Recent games have proven that the Ponies can be caught flat-footed, as Arkansas and Texas Tech proved with wins over SMU.

The Frogs and the Mustangs will tip off at 7:30 p.m.

Flutie wins Davey O'Brien Award, skips ceremony for Generals' camp

Skiff Reporter

Doug Flutie may be the hottest commodity in football today, but at the Fort Worth Club Monday night, he was only a hot topic of conversation.

Flutie was honored as the recipient of the Davey O'Brien National Quarterback Award but was unable to attend the ceremony because of his contractual obligations to his new team, the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League. The Generals, including Flutie, are in training camp in Orlando, Fla., this week.

Despite the absence of Flutie, several other luminaries were present to pay tribute to the former Boston College quarterback, as he was given the O'Brien Award, which annually honors the nation's premier collegiate quarterback.

The award is named for one of the greatest college football players in history, Davey O'Brien of TCU. In 1938, O'Brien captured virtually every football honor in the country, winning the Heisman, Walter Camp, Maxwell and Washington Touchdown Club trophies—the only player in history to win all four awards in one year.

The guest list at the award ceremonies included several past winners, including National Football League stars Earl Campbell, Jim McMahon, Todd Blackledge and Mike Singletary. From the USFL, the $40 million quarterback, Steve Young of the Los Angeles Express also showed up.

a freshman at BC, was there to receive the honor on behalf of his brother. Flutie's mother, along with BC coach Jack Bicknell and Dallas Cowboys' coach Tom Landry, were honored guests.

Bicknell expressed disappointment that Flutie could not collect the award in person. "He's a better kid than he is a player," Bicknell said. "When you watch him play, it looks like he's out there having fun, and he is."

Young, who knows the pressure put on a rookie quarterback thrust into the savior's role in the USFL, expressed concern for Flutie. "When everyone said that he would do what Joe Namath did for the AFL (American Football League), I said hey, that's what they said about me," Young said.

Landry summed up the quality of the crowd best when he said he was pleased to be the guest speaker. "After last season (when the Cowboys missed the playoffs), I'm just glad to be around these winners."

TCU's Tatum robbed of track win

Grant McGinnis
Skiff Reporter

For the second time this year, the TCU men's track team has become the victim of a change in the rules.

The first incident occurred at the Dallas Times-Herald Invitational Track Meet when TCU's mile relay team was denied a spot in the finals because of a last minute rule change.

Friday night at the Tarrant County Convention Center, the Frogs were denied a victory in the 60-yard dash, 30 minutes after it had been announced that they were the winners of the event at the Southwest Conference Indoor Track and Field Championships.

The individual Frog involved was freshman speedster Roscoe Tatum from Carthage. Tatum was proclaimed winner of the event, but an unclear picture of the photo finish led meet referee Earl Stewart to change the original decision.

'One of the refs told me that I had won.'

"One of the refs had told me that I had won," Tatum said. "I went jogging to warm down and they came up and told me that they had taken it (the win) away and given it to Rod Richardson."

As a result, the 60 was won by Richardson, the two-time National Collegiate Athletic Association and SWC champion from Texas A&M in a time of 6.13 seconds. Ironically, Tatum's time was officially given as 6.15—a huge margin for a photo finish that produced no immediately clear winner.

Tatum, who finished third behind Olympic gold medalist Carl Lewis at the Times-Herald meet, has now posted seven times under the NCAA standard of 6.22, a mark which qualifies him for a birth in the national meet.

Tatum said he was shocked by the decision, but that he hadn't seen the photo. "My track season's gone a whole lot better than my football season anyway," Tatum said.

The overall title was won by the University of Arkansas for the fifth consecutive year. The Razorbacks picked up a total of 156 points to run away from the field. TCU finished in eighth place with 22 points.

In the women's division, Texas won the last five events to overtake the defending champs from Houston, 159 to 149. TCU finished fourth overall with a total of 36 points.

Basketball team takes unique approach to intramural competition at TCU

Laura Rhoads
Skiff Reporter

The intramural athletic program at TCU is designed for fun and recreation, though many teams take the competition seriously. One team in particular has decided to take a more scientific approach to a winning strategy.

Andrew M. Kinney, spokesman for the Peruvian Fraternity Council, explained his team's philosophy: "Having already won the Pub 500 (a beer drinking contest at the University Pub) for two consecutive years," Kinney said, "the Peruvian Fraternity Council has decided to expand their interest to basketball."

Kinney, whose team has a record of 1 and 2, said the two sports fit together well. "We believe that the consumption of large amounts of carbohydrates is essential to athletic success."

Kurt Amling, one of Kinney's teammates, said he feels confident even though the team has started off slowly. He said the team is headed for an upward swing in the near future.

With intramural basketball beginning its third week of play, no teams, as of yet, have emerged as leaders.

"Most of the teams have only played two games so far," said Maggie Mabee, intramurals director at TCU. "I haven't figured out any of the standings. It's still too early," she said. Rankings will be determined after teams have played four or more games.

Although the deadline to enter a basketball team in the competition has now passed, other sports events are coming up in March for interested students.

Basketball one-on-one and free throw tournaments will be held March 2. Organized racquetball games will also begin in March, with baseball starting after spring break.

Forty-nine basketball teams now play approximately one game a week in this season's program. Mabee said that this was a typical number of teams for intramurals.
