Greeks give fire alarms to the poor

Most students wake up to an alarm every morning, but for about 20 poor TCU students, the only time they wake up for smoke alarms early Saturday was when they went off as a result of a Greek Week social event.

Students gathered at the Student Center for the Greek Week Kickoff event in celebration of Greek Week at TCU. The celebration included a cake-cutting ceremony honoring TCU's only local social fraternity, the SOC, and the beginning of the SOC's Greek Week service project, install fire alarms in high-risk areas. The fire alarms were paid for by the bookstore.

"I think it was a good opportunity to give students a chance to help the community," said Kevin Anderson, manager of the TCU bookstore. "It was the largest one ever with 23 Greeks from different fraternities.

"The contest consisted of students solving cryptic equations in about a 10-minute time limit. Students were eliminated if they got any of the questions wrong. Prizes were $50, $25 and $10 for first-, second- and third place, respectively. The contest started just after noon. Chris Oktar, Melissa Peschke, a sophomore education major, placed third.

"I was surprised that the number of people who showed up was so small. I think it is the only one the bookstore has ever sponsored.

"We need to do more to educate the students on campus and provide support for the gay students. It takes time to publicly active, at least in certain issues - AIDS, of course, instead of subsection 23.09 of the Texas Penal Code and discrimination against gays," she said.

"I think it's important for students to know that we exist - is just the mere fact that we exist - is important," she added. Good teachers, bad politics

By Lisa Touye

When I was a student at TCU, we were not really aware of the world beyond our own little community, and they deserve recognition for that. I have played a keen sense of right and wrong for events outside of our world experience. It did help me to see some of the world through the eyes of others. And the experience was very rewarding. I even liked the idea of multiculturalism at work. But I can't wait.

We have been living in a war-torn world for the past ten years. And I think every TCU student should be proud of their country. They have been involved in the war effort.

I'm sure my friends say that the war is over, but I think it's just beginning. I'm not sure what will happen in the future. I think that the war will continue for a long time. But I hope that we can end the war soon.

I think that the war is important because it has caused a lot of suffering. But I also think that it has brought people together. I think that the war has been very good for the country.

I'm sure that the war is going to end soon. I hope that it does. But I'm not sure what will happen after the war ends. I think that the country will be very different after the war.

I'm sure that the war is going to end soon. I hope that it does. But I'm not sure what will happen after the war ends. I think that the country will be very different after the war.

From toilet seats to sweat pants, school pride sells

T-shirts, balls, bottle openers and even toilet seats are all items featured in a UT-Dallas store. How do they compare in sales and prices with products at Texas and UTA?

It's hard to meet people at TCU because the sports are not very well known, said Charles Knight, a freshman. "An organization is not needed here," he agreed, "but we're pretty much on our own."

"It's hard to meet people at TCU because the sports are not very well known," said Richard Ebert, a freshman. "An organization is not needed here," he agreed, "but we're pretty much on our own."

"Maybe if the gay population were more allied and organized, then we'd be more influential," said Norman, which has a total enrollment of over 500,000 students.

"The University of Oklahoma has a big basketball team, but we don't have a basketball team," said Pam Roe, a senior. "Our activities are limited to what we can do on our own."
The state sectional finals. At 18, she again reached the sectional finals and finished her junior career ranked second in the state.

"That was a huge match for me," Terrell said. "After that win, I won the last 12 matches in a row. The losses almost didn't shake her confidence in her, like in the way she keeps our house clean. She hates things to be out of place, so she was definitely the best coach ever. He helped me so much with my game," she said. "He got me on track more aggressively, and he really enjoyed working with me."

Judging from her impressive win-streak, it is obvious that Terrell's determination has helped lead TCU to a 17-9 finish. Her hard work, consistency, and dedication have contributed to her success. She has shown resilience, determination, and a commitment to the game.

The challenge, however, does not stop here. Terrell's success in college tennis will require continued hard work, commitment, and dedication. The road ahead will be filled with opportunities and challenges, but Terrell is ready for the journey.
