Officer candidates speak about issues

Forum provides students with opportunity to hear speeches before House elections

By NICOLE FOY
TCU Daily Skiff

Officer candidates for House of Student Representatives spoke to students and administrators at a public forum at noon Monday in the Student Center Lounge.

Each candidate for president and vice president gave a short speech, and along with the vice president of programs, answered questions from a five-member panel. Questions were also taken from the audience near the end of the forum.

The moderator of the forum was Samantha Russell, a sophomore history major. The panel was comprised of Larry Markley, director of the Student Center; Don Mills, associate vice chancellor for student affairs; Jeff Sherman, treasurer of the House; and Laurie Trautner, vice president of Programming Council.

The three candidates for president are Andy Hernandez, a junior political science major; Joey Martinez, a junior psychology major; and Ben Walters, a junior broadcast journalism major.

Hernandez said, if elected, he will work to continue campus unity.

"I want to improve campus unity by concentrating on relations between Greeks and independents and also by focusing on minority relations," he said.

Hunger Week is one example of an event that encourages campus unity because students work together, Hernandez said.

Martinez said the backbone of his campaign was the diversity of his experience.

"I believe I understand issues on campus because of my experience both inside and outside the House," he said.

Martinez said his presidential style would be to lead the House with a group effort by incorporating the agenda of the executive officers along with the interests of students.

Walters said his experience as cur-

Walters planned the University Leadership Retreat in September and is currently involved in the campus recycling program.

Mills asked Hernandez why he believes campus unity does not currently exist on campus and what he would do about it if elected president.

Controversial gubernatorial candidate receives campaign money from Texans

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Louisiana gubernatorial candidate David Duke, a former grand wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, has received campaign contributions from nearly 400 Texans, a newspaper reported Monday.

The Austin American-Statesman said some of Duke's Texas contributors live in Dallas and Houston, but most reside in smaller towns like Amarillo, Longview, Waco, Temple, Junction, Alvin and Spring.

Some of the contributions have been sizeable, one for $1,000 and a few for $500 or more. But most of the 383 Texas contributors listed in the self-proclaimed Republican's campaign finance report gave less than $100.

In a dispatch from Metairie, La., the American-Statesman said repeated attempts to interview several of the donors were unsuccessful as they declined to return telephone calls.

At the same time, many other Texans are working against his candidacy.

At a business conference in New Orleans, Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot called Duke a "smooth talker who's telling them what they want to hear." He said he wouldn't start a business in Louisiana if Duke were elected governor.

Hazel Obey, a civil rights leader in Austin, has gone to Louisiana to help organize the state's black voters.

Other Texans are raising money for Duke's

Democratic opponent, former Gov. Edwin Edwards.

Travis County Attorney Ken Oden and former Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton have organized a political action committee to help Edwards. Oden said the committee would send Edwards a "meaningful contribution between $3,000 and $10,000."

Both candidates have received money from out-of-state contributors, and such donations haven't been a major campaign issue.

While both sides are taking money from outside Louisiana, Duke spokesman Howie Farrell said, "There is a difference between Duke's getting $10 from Mr. Farmer from

Presentation explores problem of date rape

By KRISTIN CORBETT
TCU Daily Skiff

A date rape forum will be held at 10 p.m. today in the Student Center Ballroom.

"It's an issue that the whole campus needs to look at," said Bill Hallgren, Lambda Chi Alpha public relations chairman. "It's not a Greek or independent issue, but it affects everyone."

The session will include a video, discussions in both small and large groups, and a testimony from an individual who has been raped, said Alyssa Spiegel, Kappa Kappa Gamma's sorority education chair.

The video shows the story of four rape victims and lasts 20 minutes.

In the small groups, a student will help lead a round table discussion of several issues. The groups will then meet as a whole and talk about their conclusions, Spiegel said.

The discussions will be facilitated by Kay Higgins, chair of the Acquaintance

Modern dance choreographer to visit campus, teach classes

Green Visiting Professor to lecture about importance of art forms

By JOHN J. LUMPKIN
TCU Daily Skiff

Using an endowment provided by Cecil H. Green, the ballet and modern dance department is hosting choreographer Bella Lewitzky, who will give a public lecture tomorrow and teach classes tomorrow through Friday.

"She's a real mover and shaker in the dance world," said Ellen Page Garrison, chairwoman of the ballet and modern dance department. "She's quite a wonderful and talented woman."

Lewitzky's public lecture, "Why Art?" will be held at 7 p.m. tomorrow in Moudy Building Room 141N.

According to Garrison, the talk will focus on the importance of all forms of art.

"In this day and age, with Helms' amendments and colleges having financial problems, art programs are the first to go," she said.

Lewitzky is noted for promoting modern dance on the West Coast while most dancers hail from New York.

In 1946, she and Lester Horton formed the Dance Theater of Los Angeles.

She formed the Lewitzky Dance Company in 1966. She performed there until 1981, and still choreographs for the group.

Lewitzky was the founding dean of the School of Dance at the California Institute of the Arts and dance chairwoman for Idyllwild Arts Foundation at the University of Southern California.

She has also received commissions from the National Endowment for the Arts.

"She is respected all over the U.S. and the world," Garrison said. "Her perspective is very broad."

Lewitzky is one of 12 visiting scholars endowed by Green. Each scholar spends three or four days on campus.

Every three years, the dance department hosts one of the scholars, Garrison said. In the past, the department has hosted dancer James Truitt, Alvin Ailey and ballerina Rebecca Wright.

Garrison also invited interested students to attend classes Lewitzky will be teaching later this week.

Library organization to host Texas poets

By KEVIN LINTZ
TCU Daily Skiff

Three Texas poets will read and discuss their poetry from 7 to 9:30 p.m. today in Moudy Building Room 141N.

Poets Dave Oliphant, Joseph Colin Murphey and William Barney are coming as guests of the Friends of the TCU Libraries program.

Roger Rainwater, special collections librarian, said he hoped a large turnout would be this evening. Although people from outside the campus have been invited, Rainwater said he would like many TCU students to attend.

"This is as much for the students as for anyone," Rainwater said. "And probably more."

Rainwater said these poets had a connection to the university because they had donated their works to the TCU Special Collections Library. Oliphant, founding publisher of the Prickly Pear Press, has published the works of Texas poets for almost 20 years. Some of Oliphant's recent works are "Maria's Poems" and "Austin."

Murphey is editor and founder of a writing magazine Stone Drum. His works have appeared in publications by the University of North Texas Press and Prickly Pear Press.

Barney was Texas' poet laureate in 1982-83. He won the Robert Frost Poetry Award for his poem "Killdeer Crying." His recent poetry includes "Long Gone to Texas" and "A Little Kiss of the Nettle."

Rainwater said the poets were coming to expose people to their work.

"I'm trying to bring poetry to those who want it," Rainwater said.

Corrections

The story "Texas A&M defense kills Frog offense" in the Nov. 8 issue of the Skiff was incorrectly attributed to Jeff Lea. The story was written by Ty Benz.

In the candidate profiles section of Friday's Skiff, the photographs of Holli Harry and Tiffany Swayzee were switched because of a printer error.

Also in the candidate profiles section, Tara Wokaty, a candidate for vice president, was incorrectly spelled Tara Wotaky. The Skiff regrets the errors.

Tyler and Edwards getting $5,000 from Mr. Oil Baron in Houston."

Mark McKinnon, an Austin political consultant who worked for outgoing Gov. Buddy Roemer until Roemer switched parties in February, said Duke has "created a racist populism, a whole new brand we're dealing with, that is frightening. It's not just happening in Louisiana, but he's getting support from across the country."

Edwards, who finished first in a multi-candidate primary, received few contributions from Texas before the primary, but they were for relatively large amounts: at least two for $5,000, one for $2,500 and two for $500.

More money is on the way, the American-Statesman reported.

On Nov. 1, Oscar Wyatt, chairman of the Coastal Corp., opened his Houston mansion for a fundraiser for Edwards that drew Louisiana's two U.S. senators and was the only out-of-state fundraiser that Edwards attended.

Payton Smith, Edwards' press secretary, said no figures were available on how much money that event raised.

Because of a scheduling conflict, Gov. Ann Richards didn't attend Wyatt's party. But she helped promote it and telephoned Edwards while he was there.

Rape Prevention Committee, and Joey Martinez, a junior psychology major.

"It's a different look at date rape than has ever been done at TCU before," Spiegel said. "It's taken one step further to discuss communication, which is where a lot of problems start."

The program is aimed at both men and women, and the problems both face in a dating situation.

"It's not so much just hammering guys, but it's going to address both sides," said Todd Royal, Lambda Chi fraternity educator.

The key to the program is educating the campus about the problem, Hallgren said.

"It's not anything that anyone should have to go through, but unfortunately they do," he said. "I don't know the stats at TCU, but if it happens once, it's too much."

Letters to the editor

Misinformation

Recently, it has been brought to my attention that certain editing mistakes in the Skiff have caused articles to be printed presenting false information. No doubt, editing must take place quickly, and sometimes mistakes can be made. The danger comes when the editing and titling alters the original meaning of the story. It is this type of situation that concerns me.

My concern lies in the ignorance of myself and a large part of the campus as to how an article in our newspaper is written and edited. Before this incident, I was not aware of the procedure that is followed. After speaking with those familiar with the Skiff, I learned an article generally goes through three phases. First of all, the writing phase occurs when the reporter writes the article. Next, the article is edited by a different person and then sent to the next phase without confirming any changes or deletions with the reporter. And lastly, an editor gives the article a headline. So, as a result, the article receives no less than two, sometimes three or more interpretations before it goes to print.

Across the country, more and more headlines seem to sensationalize the news. The Skiff too has fallen to this pressure. However, sensationalized titles can all too often misrepresent the news and bias a reader before the story is read. The problems with the process of editing an article lead to misinforming the public and giving a "tabloid effect" with sensationalized titles. The real tragedy here is that the news is presented carelessly and inaccurately. Unfortunately, the reporter has no control over the outcome of his or her article once it has been submitted, and then it is too late.

Spirit

Homecoming 1991 was fabulous. Everything was wonderful, but many people did not understand what happened to the laser show and why the sound at the pep rally was poor. Since there was no follow-up story, I thought I needed to let everyone know what happened.

About 3 p.m. on Nov. 1, (the day of the pep rally), a problem was discovered with the argon tube. The laser company had the chair of TCU's physics department as well as the builder of the lasers on the phone, but there was nothing they could do about it. It was a $15,000 part that had to be rebuilt. The laser company received no payment for their work. Brian Allen, chairman of the pep rally, did a tremendous amount of work to bring the laser show to campus. Hopefully, we can try it again next year.

The sound problem was an unexpected one. The Homecoming committee had hired a sound company to bring more powerful equipment based on past complaints that people could not hear (the concerts). Unfortunately, the company chose not to show up at the pep rally. Next year, the committee will turn to a different company.

Despite these problems, Homecoming was a huge success. The participation at the parade and the pep rally was better than I've seen in my four years here. The concert was great, with over 800 student tickets sold. This comes close to the highest attendance at a student event. The campus was well-decorated, and many rooms had Welcome Home signs and lights in them.

For those of you who were not at the concert, the winners of Homecoming events were:

Endorsement

In regard to the editorial written by the Skiff staff supporting Ben Walters for student body president, I believe (it) was tacky, inappropriate and undermines all the campaigning all the candidates have done thus far and any they will be doing. Regardless of who I support or how I vote, I think that article was unnecessary.

I realize that it is common for newspapers nationwide to support a particular candidate prior to elections, but you are not the Dallas Morning News. In most situations, there are opposing newspapers supporting other candidates. Here, this is not the case.

I thought the Skiff editorials were supposed to "represent the views of the Skiff editorial board." I know of several editorial columnists who do not believe Ben Walters is the best qualified. This is misrepresentation.

Just one more thing — to the student body, listen to the candidates and find out what their views are and make your own decision. Don't vote based only on what you read!

Fee increase benefits student needs

By MATT HUNT
 Columnist

Elections are upon us. For the past few weeks we have been bombarded by the students campaigning for offices in the House of Student Representatives.

Posters have been put just about everywhere the administration will allow them.

Students are wearing buttons demanding we vote for certain candidates.

Candidates are speaking to groups and making their presences known on campus. And there is lots of talk about qualifications, multiculturalism, Greek-independent relations and campus unity.

The candidates are highly visible and everyone has at least some idea of who's running. Others even know what the candidates stand for, and from that, who to vote for.

But while the publicity for the candidates running for offices has been high, one of the items on today's ballot has received a low profile.

A fee increase.

It has been proposed the House fee be increased from $18 to $20. Such a fee increase has been suggested in past years, and every time has been voted down by the student body.

The reason for the fee increase failing is that students don't understand what the fee means. They just look at the ballot and think, "What! Another attempt to squeeze more money from me! No, no, no, no, no!" And vote against it.

Not smart.

The reason it is not smart is because these students are voting with their wallets and not their heads. It's making an uninformed decision, and that's not good.

You have to think about what the fee increase will do for you and for the campus.

"So what will it do for me and the campus?" you cry.

Think programming.

Think about programs like Elizabeth Dole coming to speak. The money for getting speakers like that comes from the House fee. That's where Programming

Council gets their money.

Organizations going on trips who want money to fund those trips where they represent the university, are funded through this fee.

Been to the movies at Student Center lately? One of the projectors is broken, so they have to stop every so often to change the reels because they have only one projector working. They might be able to get it fixed if they had more money available. Like from a fee increase.

Remember the Holly Dunn and Dan Seals concert? Did you like it? Do you want more big names come here? Guess what, we need more money to pull it off.

People clamor for more programs, for things to be better here. Well, one way to make things better is to increase the amount of money the House of Student Representatives has.

When you vote today you have two tasks. First, make sure the people you vote for will represent you the best and then give them the money they need to help represent you the best.

That's what being a voter is all about. That's what elections are all about.

Get the people who need to be in office there, and give them the resources they need to do their job. To do otherwise would waste an opportunity to improve the campus we love. And that would be a horrible thing indeed.

Duke not a whim of Republican minds

By JEFF JETER
 Columnist

The topic of Louisiana gubernatorial candidate David Duke continues to dominate political discussions and cocktail party conversations across the nation. And now from the deranged minds that make up the Democratic party leadership come absurd charges that the Republicans made David Duke who he is.

The Democrats' inane argument revolves around the ludicrous idea that the Republicans have facilitated the rise of Duke by pushing racist Willie Horton advertisements and opposing racial quotas. Before anyone buys into this lunacy, it is necessary to uncover several myths.

First, there is the myth of the Duke phenomenon. The David Duke phenomenon is really no political phenomena at all — it is neither political nor a phenomena. The mystique with David Duke has absolutely nothing with his politics or his stand on the issues; rather, it lies with his ugly past, tainted with racism. Without this past, David Duke would be just another politician trying to get elected. What makes David Duke stand out from the rest of the pack is his connection to the Ku Klux Klan. But even this is nothing unusual or phenomenal. There are hundreds of David Dukes in positions of power in local, state and federal capacities. There are Republican David Dukes and Democratic David Dukes. There are liberal and conservative David Dukes.

It is not just an isolated Louisiana problem. Duke is expressing ideas and sentiments that have an appeal that transcend state borders and political parties. Make no mistake about it, the Louisiana governor's race is not a racial contest. It has very little to do with black versus white. The race is a class contest — a struggle by the middle class and others who are weary of shouldering welfare and relief, and are tired of the inherent abuses in the system.

Second, the myth of Republican racism must be exposed. Anytime Democrats start hurling charges of racism at their Republican colleagues, the issues of quotas and Willie Horton raise their ugly heads. Affirmative action or quotas or whatever one chooses to call it is not an issue of race. The Republican party is as opposed to racism and discrimination as the ACLU or NAACP. How one deals with these problems, however, is the major problem. If someone has been unduly discriminated against because of race, retribution should be made. But provisions setting aside jobs, money or anything else are fundamentally wrong. Republicans argue people should be allowed to succeed on their own merits — not because of a federal handout or set-aside.

Then there are the Willie Horton advertisements. These were the Bush campaign spots that ended up destroying Michael Dukakis in 1988. The Democrats have long charged that the ads were rooted in racism and played off of the public's racism. Now, let's see if this can be cleared up once and for all. The Willie Horton ads were not appalling because Horton was an African-American. They were appalling because they pointed out the reckless policies that enabled a dangerous criminal to receive furlough passes which enabled him to kill again. This was what disgusted Americans. Willie Horton's race was inconsequential. If he had been white, it would not have reduced the fact that Dukakis' policy was ill-conceived and raised serious questions about his leadership.

Also, the myth of negative political repercussions should be exposed. President Bush has done a magnificent job of distancing himself from David Duke. If Duke is elected, there will be serious repercussions for the state of Louisiana, but President Bush will remain fairly insulated. The American voter has a relatively short memory, and David Duke will be the least of George Bush's problems.

If there are any political ramifications from David Duke, it has absolutely nothing to do with racism. David Duke is a message to incumbents — both Republican and Democrat — that the middle class in this country is fed up with programs and policies that have (in Dukesian terms) "discriminated" against them. Take heed, Democrats, this means you, too. Indeed, the middle class is so tired of what is going on that they are even willing to elect an ex-KKK Grand Wizard like Duke.

And then the myth of Democratic logic needs to be exposed. It requires a great leap of faith to say the Republican party made David Duke. To take this argument to its logical end, it is akin to saying that Congressman Barney Frank's homosexuality was the result of the Democratic party's support of the homosexual lobby or, that the Democrats' stand on abortion gave Ted Kennedy his driving record.

David Duke poses a serious threat, not just for Republicans or for the state of Louisiana, but for the entire nation. His racism, however, is not a product of his political affiliation. Racism is not a political issue, nor is it a partisan issue. It is a human issue that must be dealt with by all of us.

SWC Women's Basketball Preview 1991-92

By TY BENZ
and ALAN DROLL
TCU Daily Skiff

This is the first installment of the SWC Women's Basketball Preview 1991-92. Today the lower division of the SWC is previewed. With Arkansas' departure to the Southeastern Conference, all eight SWC teams will qualify for the post season tournament. It should be a wide open race this year. A look at Baylor, TCU, and SMU is featured today.

Baylor BEARS

HEAD COACH: Pam Bowers
LAST YEAR'S RECORD: 9-17, SWC 3-13
RETURNING STARTERS: 4
PREDICTION: 8TH

Improvement is again the goal for the women's basketball team at Baylor this season as the Bears must overcome the loss of their star player from last year and an overall lack of height.

Graduated center Maggie Stinnett was the heart of the Baylor team during her five years there. Stinnett led the team in scoring and rebounding last season, averaging 17.8 points, 9.6 rebounds a game, was named to the All-SWC First Team and finished her career as the SWC all-time scoring leader in women's basketball.

Two years ago, Stinnett sat out the season to have a baby and the Bears finished 4-23. This season, Baylor hopes to avoid another fall.

"The rest of the kids are going to realize that they have some responsibilities to fill," said Baylor head coach Pam Bowers. "Last year they just let Maggie do it all, and kind of let her do everything. Losing her should give us a more balanced look offensively."

The biggest problem for the Bears will be a lack of height. Baylor will not have a player over 6 feet tall until December, when sophomore transfer Kristen Mann will be eligible to play. Until then, the Bears will have trouble matching up inside against other teams.

"We are very, very small and will have to overcome that with intensity," Bowers said. "We'll have to be very aggressive defensively and play a lot bigger than we appear. I think we will."

Offensively, the Bears will focus on two things: the inside play of center LaNita Luckey and bombing away from three-point range.

Last season, the Bears lived behind the three-point line, attempting a team record 253 three-point shots and making a team record 93. Junior guard Jennifer King led the assault by setting team records of 127 three-pointers attempted while also setting another record by making 49 of them, a 38 percent clip.

Joining King outside will be seniors Mitzi Williams and Charlene Hudlin. Williams, the starting point guard, compiled 89 assists last season while averaging over 10 points a game, and shot 36 percent from three-point range. Hudlin averaged 4 points a game last season while shooting 37 percent from the field.

Inside, the Bears are led by Luckey. The senior will again be the soul of Baylor this season. Last season, Luckey averaged 15.4 points and 8.1 rebounds per game and was named to the second team All-SWC team.

"LaNita means a lot to our program," Bowers said. "She's a great athlete, hard worker, very competitive and is one of the premier players in the conference."

Luckey is the only inside player with scoring potential, so Baylor will be forced into an up-tempo, outside-oriented attack with aggressive play on defense. If Baylor is going to be competitive this season, it must avoid half-court, slow-paced games.

"We're going to try to spread people all over the court this season and hopefully avoid half court situations," Bowers said.

"But I like our chances this season because of one big reason: heart. Last year the kids had a lot of heart, but this year they are playing with a lot of heart," she said.

TCU HORNEFROGS

HEAD COACH: FRAN GARMON
LAST YEAR'S RECORD: 5-22, SWC 2-14
RETURNING STARTERS: 3
PREDICTION: 7TH

Last year was a disaster for TCU's women's basketball team as the Lady Frogs slumped to 5-22 and last place in the SWC. But this year the Lady Frogs hope to bounce back and make an impact in the SWC.

Inexperience and a tough schedule proved to be too much for TCU last year. The Lady Frogs had only one senior and suffered through a season-long shooting slump, hitting only 37 percent from the field while averaging a mere 52 points a game. Turnovers also plagued the Frogs. But, thanks to five juniors returning, TCU is trying to turn it around.

"Last season I misjudged our talent and overscheduled," said TCU head coach Fran Garmon. "We lost our confidence early and never recovered."

This year could be a different story for the Lady Frogs because TCU finally has some upperclassmen. TCU returns seven upperclassmen, which means that all of them have been seasoned by last year's calamity.

"I still feel that we are going to benefit from last season," Garmon said. "Anytime a team goes through a season that bad, they come back with a vengeance. We're going to do what we have to do this year to avoid another season like that."

TCU returns its entire backcourt rotation, consisting of junior guards Rachel Hesse and Andrea Boris, and back up senior April Ham.

Hesse led the backcourt by averaging 8.4 points, 3.9 rebounds and 2.8 steals a game last season. Boris and Ham both struggled through shooting slumps last season, with Boris shooting only 29 percent from the floor and Ham 30 percent. The guards must shoot better to relieve some of the pressure inside.

Another question mark for TCU will be at small forward. Deana Giles and Traci McKinley rotated here last season without much success. Giles decided not to return this season, so TCU will go with McKinley as the starter, who needs to play with more consistency. Last season, she shot only 31 percent from the field.

Power forward is in the capable hands of junior Liz Zeller, who led the Lady Frogs in scoring and rebounding last season by averaging 12.3 points and seven rebounds a game. She also might spend time at small forward this year.

"Liz is the leader of our team," Garmon said. "Liz is a very versatile player. I plan on using her at both small and power forward, with the possibility of having her play some guard, where she played in high school."

Center could be TCU's strength as two players, junior Laurie Berlind and sophomore Amy Bumstead, will compete with sophomore transfer Kim Venik for playing time. Bumstead and Berlind were backups last year, while Venik redshirted while sitting out the year because of her transfer from Montana. Somebody needs to step up and contribute here.

TCU will be improved from last season, but questions of scoring and a lack of consistency must be improved for the Lady Frogs to compete.

"We need to start over this year and not dwell on the past," said Zeller. "We're going to do well because of our versatility and different attitude. We're going to be real aggressive this year, win some games and do the best we can."

"We're going to play one game at a time and get better and better as the season progresses," Garmon said. "We are going to take it one step at a time and build a solid foundation. People will be surprised with the Lady Frogs this season."

SMU MUSTANGS

HEAD COACH: RHONDA ROMPOLA
LAST YEAR'S RECORD: 9-19, SWC 4-12
RETURNING STARTERS: 5
PREDICTION: 6th

After eight years as an assistant, Rhonda Rompola takes the reins from Welton Brown at SMU. All five starters return from last year's 9-19 (4-12 SWC) team that tied for sixth with Rice in the conference.

That familiarity should help SMU in the clutch situations this winter. Rompola has brought renewed intensity to practice, smoothing over the transition from assistant to head coach easily.

Senior point guard Suzanne McAnally has noticed the difference.

"Last year, (practice) was so relaxed, and this year, we're just totally all over each other pressing each other which is going to help us in our games," said McAnally.

"The program intensity level is just unbelievably high," echoed Brenda Bruggeman. "Hopefully that will carry over to the court when we need it in our ballgames."

McAnally has dished out 300 assists in her career while serving as the spiritual and court leader of the Mustangs. With 28 more assists, McAnally will break Tomi Hollis' school record of 327 assists. As a junior, McAnally led SMU in assists (140), three-point field goals (40) and steals (71). Rompola looks for McAnally to step up her role as floor general of the Mustangs.

According to Rompola, SMU will use a quicker tempo this season, playing high-pressure defense and being more aggressive on offense. McAnally will look to get the ball into senior post players Bruggeman and Vicki Walterscheid.

After being redshirted out of junior college with a knee injury, the 6'3" Bruggeman was named to the SWC All-Newcomer team last year, leading SMU in rebounds (7.6 per game) while averaging 10.5 points per game.

Baptist moderates struggle for control of Baylor

By TERRI LANGFORD
Associated Press

WACO, Texas — Moderate Texas Baptists fought off a last-minute attempt by fundamentalists Monday to return Baylor University to total control of the Baptist General Convention of Texas.

Delegates at the convention's 106th annual meeting defeated the substitute measure by a vote of 5,976 to 4,714.

The alternate proposal would have nullified a proposed agreement that returns most of Baylor's governance to school officials.

The move clears the way for a vote on the original agreement, which allows the BGCT to elect only 25 percent of the school's newly-created board of regents. Delegates were expected to vote again later Monday.

A record number of more than 10,600 convention delegates, called messengers, packed Ferrell Special Events Center on the Baylor campus to decide the crucial issue.

If the plan is rejected, the school will continue with the plan without the convention's approval.

The substitute measure was offered by a Houston minister who called the agreement to reduce Texas Baptists' role in Baylor's affairs a "dangerous precedent."

The move from the Rev. Ed Young called for evangelist Billy Graham to oversee an arbitration team to restore Baylor's ties to the BGCT.

"I am in a difficult place," Young said. "We need all of Baylor University in the Baptist camp."

For 146 years, the convention has selected every member serving on the governing board.

Young's motion called for an effort to force Baylor to return to its original charter by rejecting the proposed agreement.

It also called for an arbitration team to look into ways to restore the school's board of trustees and dismiss the newly-created board of rejects.

Young proposed the arbitrators be handpicked by Graham.

Young said Graham had agreed to oversee a team of arbitrators.

Under Young's proposal, the BGCT would have sought any means possible, including a lawsuit against the school, to restore convention control if the arbitration failed.

Baylor trustees voted Sept. 21, 1990, to create the Board of Regents to insulate the Central Texas school from fundamentalist control. At first, Baptist leaders considered suing the university for the change in the school charter.

But after a year of meetings, Baptist leaders backed off earlier threats and released more than $6 million in annual funds designated for the university that were frozen after the charter change.

Baylor officials have complained that fundamentalists have been trying to wrench control of Baylor by appointing their own to the school's governing board.

Young's move was endorsed by the Rev. Joel Gregory, pastor of First Baptist of Church of Dallas, who opposes the new agreement.

"If Texas Baptists approve the unilateral and unconstitutional move by Baylor trustees, it will set a precedent," Gregory said. "This is not a fundamentalist-versus-moderate issue. I believe it is a separatist versus Baptist issue."

Fundamentalists have complained for years that the university is too liberal and have been at odds with Baylor President Herbert Reynolds because he does not support biblical inerrancy, the belief the Bible is without error.

Many Baptists have criticized the convention for hurting the faith's image. With 15 million members nationwide, the Southern Baptist Convention is the largest Protestant group in the United States.

There are an estimated 2.5 million Southern Baptists in Texas.

Honor society inducts members

Golden Key selects best students based on service, academic excellence

By ANGIE KAUFMAN
TCU Daily Skiff

Golden Key Honor Society will hold its induction for new members at 5 p.m. today in the Reed Hall faculty lounge.

The society will induct over 180 juniors and seniors, adding to the 90 present members.

Golden Key is an honor society open to juniors and seniors in the top 15 percent of their class and is dedicated to service, said Shannon Luttrell, Golden Key vice president for publications.

During the induction, Stephen Pracht, director of chapter development from the national office, will give a presentation and regional director Kent Hattery will pin new officers, Luttrell said.

Don Mills, associate vice chancellor for student affairs, will give the keynote speech.

Five honorary members will also be inducted.

"These are people that we feel have served TCU and the community," Luttrell said. "They have exemplified Golden Key ideals."

Two winners of the National Golden Key Scholarship Award will also be announced.

Each year, one junior and senior are selected by the national office for this award, Luttrell said.

project is called the "Best of America," she said.

"Peer Educators," is the service project for the TCU chapter," she said. "It sends university students out to schools in and around the Fort Worth Independent School District to give presentations about goal setting, decision making and positive lifestyles without the influences of drugs and alcohol."

Golden Key also works with smaller service projects around the community, Luttrell said.

The TCU chapter of Golden Key was chartered in April of 1990 and was awarded "Best New Chapter" by the national office in August of this year.

"It's been really good," Luttrell said. "The response from students has been great, especially compared to other chapters."

"It's good to get everything rolling," she said.

"I think students are only loyal to their own organizations," Hernandez said. "As president, I would support an all-campus retreat to bring all students from different organizations together."

Markley questioned Martinez on his stance on the fee increase for the House.

"Prices are rising because of inflation and that limits the number of programs that the House can support," Martinez said. "This increase could bring over $20,000 to the House for bigger and better programs."

Voters will decide today whether to raise the House fee from $18 to $20.

Sherman asked Walters to be more specific on the issue of campus unity and communication between campus organizations.

"I think the House should fund certain programs aimed at bringing people together," Walters said. "And I think I have the ability to relate to all types of groups in order to improve such communication."

The candidates for vice president answered questions from the panel. The candidates are Todd Boullion, a sophomore political science major; Tito Garcia, a sophomore international relations major; Chris Hightower, a sophomore political science major; Matt McClendon, a sophomore business major; and Tara Wokaty, a sophomore finance major.

Trautner asked Boullion to describe one goal he would like to accomplish as vice president.

"I think campus unity is the most important issue of this campaign, and it can only be reached with the effort of the whole student body," he said.

Mills questioned Hightower on what specific mechanism could be used to appoint students to university committees.

"I think that it is important to find out what committee would fit each student best," Hightower said.

Sherman asked Garcia to describe one position he has held that best qualifies him for vice president.

"As president of Black Student Caucus, I had to work with students, administrators and faculty on issues such as a holiday for Martin Luther King Day," Garcia said. "I had to effectively communicate student concerns, and I got to know the students in the process."

Responding to a question from Markley on the duties of vice president, McClendon said he would listen to the questions and concerns of all committees.

"I think we need enthusiasm in committees, and I believe I would be the best choice to start that enthusiasm," McClendon said.

Trautner asked Wokaty what advice she would give to the vice president if she was not elected.

"I would tell the vice president that excitement is the key to get people involved," Wokaty said.

The candidates for vice president of programs, Kim Bierwirth, a junior education major, and Jay Warren, a sophomore broadcast journalism major, also answered questions from the panel.

Voting will take place today from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. at the Student Center Lounge and Worth Hills Cafeteria. Students will decide on the House officers, an increase in the House fee and the Teacher Excellence Award.

Another junior college product, Walterscheid averaged 10.4 points per game in 1990-91 in her first year as a Mustang. At 6'2", Walterscheid also pulled down 6.3 rebounds per game and had 17 blocked shots last year.

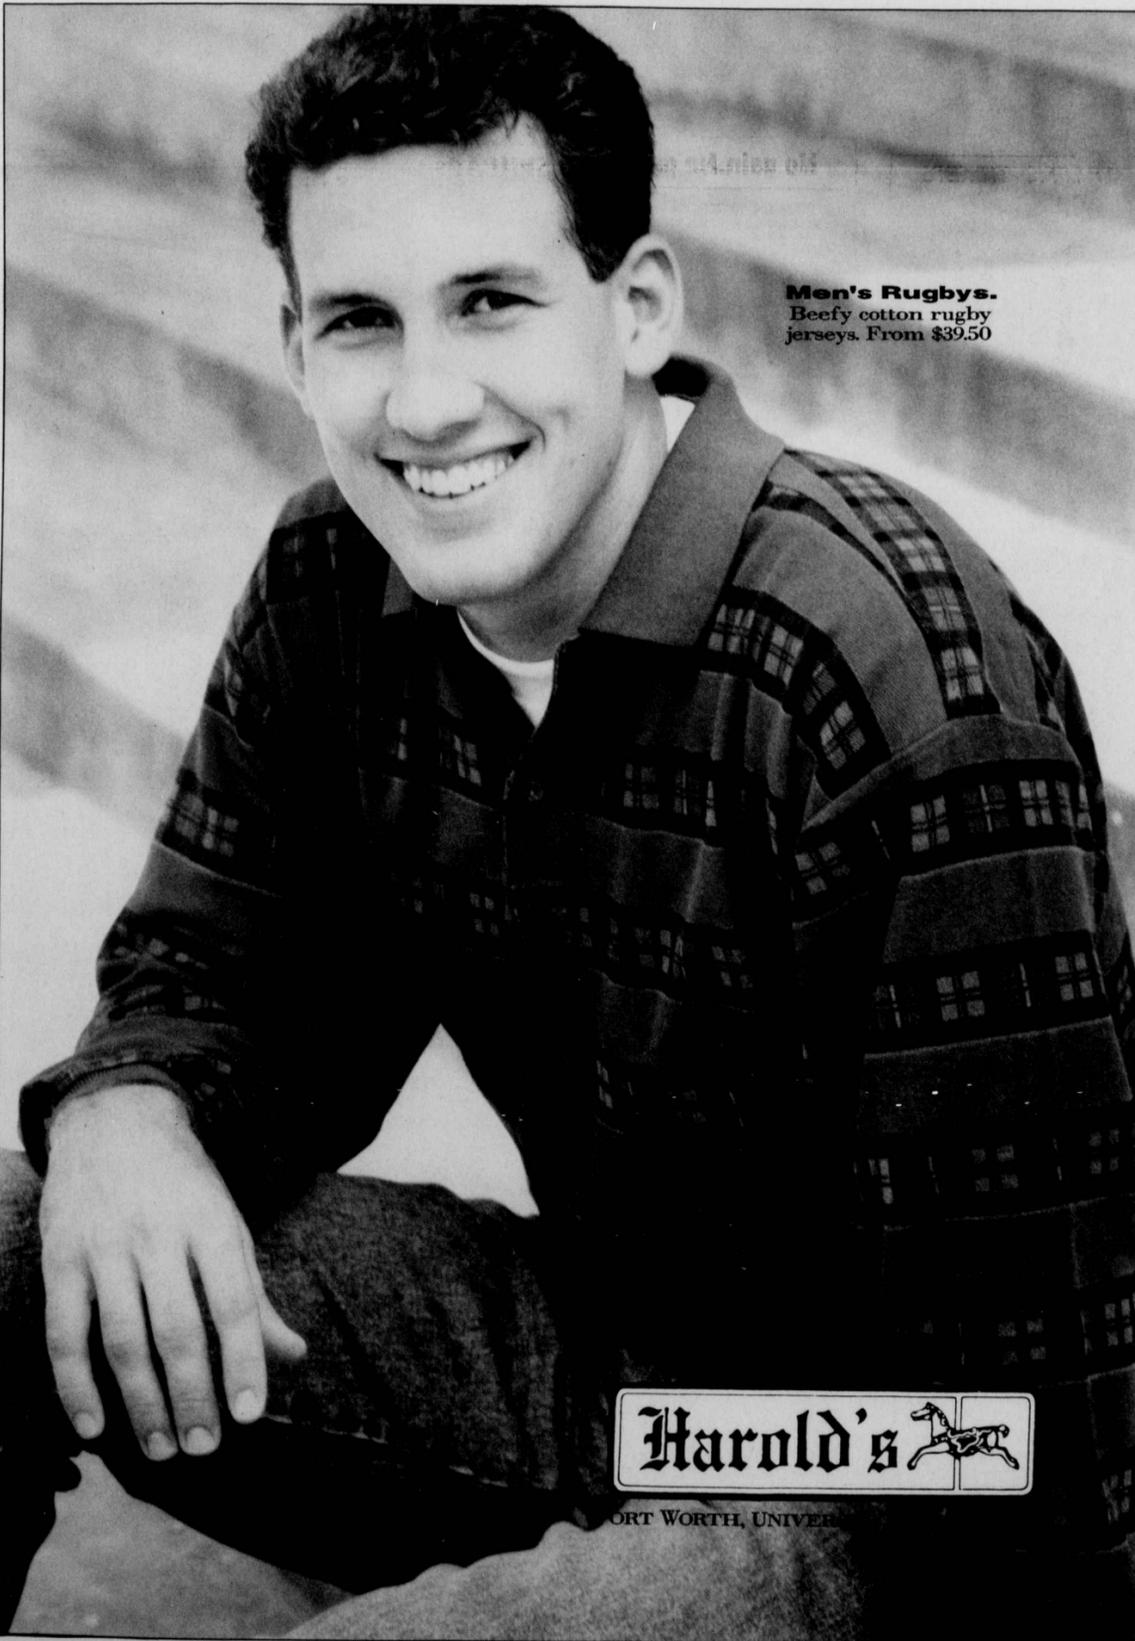

Leading scorer Shanell Thomas returns at forward for her junior year after averaging 14 points a game. Rounding out the Mustangs' starting five is Missy Parker, a feisty defensive player who finished second to McAnally in steals last year with 2.4 thefts per contest.

Six other letter winners return for SMU, giving the Mustangs a surplus of depth off the bench. That depth could come in handy, since the Mustangs will attempt to pressure opponents out of their half-court game.

Rompola has a lot going for her in her first head coaching assignment. She is already familiar with the players, and so far the Mustangs have responded to the changes Rompola is trying to make with the Mustangs.

The question is how quickly can the Mustangs adjust to the exhausting style of play Rompola is implementing and how well will the bench perform.

PLAY THE ON CALL "HOME FOR THE HOLIDAYS" THANKSGIVING GAME

We at ON CALL know that many students aren't able to visit their families at Thanksgiving, so we decided to hold a contest that gives winners a chance to fly home instead of hanging around their dorm rooms over the holiday.

It's a FREE telephone call, and if you answer correctly, you could be the winner of a $500 travel certificate compliments of GTE Directories' ON CALL. This certificate can be used ANYWHERE!

Here's how to play: Make that FREE call to ON CALL, metro (214) 621-2200 in Dallas, or metro (817) 329-2200 in Fort Worth, from any touch tone telephone (except from pay phones and hotels). When you hear the ON CALL welcome, enter the four digit code 1122.

Then get ready to play! You will make choices to escape the Evil Liver Gang or to help out Super Turkey. Save the day, and you might just be on your way home!

If you survive the Turkey Game adventure, you'll be asked to spell your name, leave your age, address, and school name. Trip winners will be notified by November 20th, 1991. Even if you don't win the trip, ON CALL will be giving away other great prizes until November 30th, 1991.
