Board reviews alleged hazing incident

Decision to bring charges against frats still pending

BY GINGER RICHARDSON
TCU DAILY SKIFF

The Fraternity and Sorority Judicial Board met on Thursday to determine if evidence warranted charges of hazing against two campus fraternities, but it made no decision in the matter, said Missy Evans, co-chief justice of the Fraternity and Sorority Judicial Board.

According to several officials speaking on a condition of anonymity, the Phi Kappa Sigma and Sigma Chi fraternities were involved in an alleged hazing incident just prior to winter break in 1994.

In the alleged hazing incident, a pledge member of a fraternity was beaten badly, suffering a bloody nose and several cuts and bruises on his face, according to a campus police report.

The police report also stated the student was allegedly seen the next day with other pledges that looked as if they had beaten. Several pledges of the fraternity named in the campus police report were also seen with bruises and cuts on their faces soon after the initial incident, according to witnesses quoted in the campus police report.

Rick Barnes, director of the Office of Fraternity and Sorority Affairs said the university had been investigating the incident since mid-January to determine whether the incident was hazing. The office turned its findings over to the judicial board for review, but did not make a recommendation, said Barnes, who serves as an adviser to the board.

Brian Ching, president of Sigma Chi, confirmed that while the Office of Fraternity and Sorority Affairs had

Senate urges Reed elevator addition

BY DENA RAINS
TCU DAILY SKIFF

A resolution to urge the administration to add an elevator to Reed Hall was passed 19-10 in Thursday's Faculty Senate meeting.

The resolution was changed from its original wording to ask for an elevator, possibly via a new wing for Reed Hall, and that no new construction be started until "a commitment to this project is made."

The original wording asked that a new wing to Reed Hall be added outright and that no new construction be started until it was done.

Spencer Tucker, a professor of history and chairman of the department, wrote the resolution. Tucker said access to the lower level of Reed Hall for disabled persons was a "torturous journey."

Several senators were opposed to this resolution, including Joseph Babitch, a professor of chemistry, and John Breyer, a professor of geology.

Babitch and Breyer agreed that installing an elevator was important, but including the construction of a new wing, which could include classrooms, seminar rooms and offices, was not an immediate necessity.

Other senators argued that the resolution's original statement, "no new construction be initiated on campus until this is done" would "hold hostage" other planned projects on campus, such as the Walsh Center for the Performing Arts.

Several outside individuals attended the meeting to show support for the resolution.

Fulbright grant awarded to instructor

BY JILL MELCHER
TCU DAILY SKIFF

When Mercedes Olivera opened a letter from the Fulbright Scholar Program Monday, she thought her application for a prestigious research grant had been rejected.

Fortunately, she was wrong.

Olivera, a TCU instructor in mass communications, will receive a grant from the program to teach and conduct research in Mexico during the spring 1996 semester.

"I opened it, and I read that first paragraph, and I must have jumped 10 feet in the air," Olivera said. "I was just jumping around like a little bunny rabbit. I couldn't get over it. I was ecstatic!"

Olivera plans to conduct research and lecture at TCU's sister university, Universidad de las Americas, in Cholula, Puebla.

Olivera's research topic covers ancient Mesoamerican and pre-Colombian female deities, she said. Olivera is teaching an extended education course on that subject this semester at TCU, she said.

She said the award came as a real surprise.

"I hadn't raised my hopes," Olivera said. "I just submitted the application and put it out of my mind. I didn't even tell anybody that I had applied."

"My first thought was that it was a rejection letter because it was so skinny," Olivera said. "It was only one page."

She said she read the notification letter over and over again looking for the "not" in the first paragraph.

"It's a very beautiful letter," Olivera said. "To me, it stresses the responsibility of what your presence overseas is all about as a representative of your country."

Olivera said this was the first year she applied for a Fulbright Scholar Award.

"I wanted to keep growing academically and professionally," she said. "To me, this was the next step, because I've gotten a lot into my research now. This is one of my biggest passions, and I felt that in order to keep growing, I was going to have to go for something that would allow the time for the Elementary-schoolers lead 'world tours'

Dressed in a sea captain's hat, Josh Terry greets passengers at the office, shows them to Antarctica and takes them on a tour around the world.

Josh has greeted hundreds of passengers and given dozens of tours, but he isn't a steward. Josh is a fifth-grader at Mary Louise Phillips Elementary School in Fort Worth.

Josh is one of 520 students at Phillips Elementary who are participating in the "Around the World Tour."

Children in kindergarten through fifth grade, including special education students, act as tour guides — leading community members through the halls of their school.

The halls are decorated from ceiling to floor with scenes of different sites throughout the world. The children have been researching since September and decorating since January, but now the students are ready for tours.

Amy Church, a third-grader, is a guide in Antarctica, the first stop along the tour.

As Amy points to the ice-covered floor and the dozens of penguins on the walls, she tells visitors that after female penguins lay their eggs, the male penguins huddle over the eggs to keep them warm. The males can leave the eggs after their mate returns from eating, which is usually 65 days.

In Australia, passengers are greeted by Brandi Francis, a fifth-grader, who gives her talk with an Aussie accent. She uses her flashlight to point to the capital of Australia, and tells people how visi-

NEWS DIGEST

Moon heats Earth, researchers say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Grab the moon-screen and slap on those moonglasses. Researchers say the light of the full moon causes the Earth to heat up, ever so slightly. "Moonburn is not a problem," said climate expert Robert C. Balling. However, he said, precise measurements by satellites show that when the moon turns on its full reflected light the Earth temperature rises by .03 degrees Fahrenheit.

That's not enough to end winter early. And even a full jar of moonbeams would not lead to a moontanning fad.

'Bird Lady' continues work

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — City officials faced with a lawsuit have worked out a temporary arrangement that allows a rehabilitator to continue treating endangered wildlife. Midge Erskine, nicknamed the "Bird Lady," agreed Thursday to maintain the vegetation along three sides of her weedy property.

Mrs. Erskine was seeking a temporary restraining order to prevent the city from shutting her down. The City Council denied her a special permit after neighbors complained that her back yard stank, violated zoning ordinances and posed a health risk.

House unveils new tax cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republicans presented their long-promised tax cut for families, businesses and investors Thursday, declaring it would ease financial burdens on Americans and help companies create jobs.

Portraying the measure as a boon to ordinary Americans, House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Bill Archer, R-Texas, unveiled the package in a speech to the conservative Family Research Council.

The measure would cost $189 billion over five years, though its 10-year price tag is likely to balloon to about $700 billion.

Committee okays welfare bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A House committee on Thursday unanimously approved legislation to overhaul the state's welfare system, acting on one of Gov. George W. Bush's top priorities.

The Health and Human Services Committee voted 9-0 to send the bill to the full House.

Rep. Harvey Hilderbran, R-Kerrville and a co-author of the bill, said the legislation encourages welfare recipients to become self-sufficient by setting time limits for benefits.

Botched surgery victim recovering

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Willie King, who wound up a double amputee after a doctor mistakenly amputated his healthy foot, said Thursday he feels pain and fear, but not anger toward the surgeon. The 51-year-old diabetic said he takes solace in prayer, family, the warmth of strangers and his sense of humor.

King lost his left leg below the knee Feb. 20 when a surgeon at University Community Hospital cut off the wrong foot. His right foot was supposed to be removed because it was diseased, ulcerated and suffering circulation problems.

Allen encourages all students to attend the premiere of the show the week after Spring Break at noon in Moudy 164S. He said he feels certain students will get hooked and keep returning for more.

Senate

Jennifer Sweeney, interim coordinator of the Center for Academic Services, attended the meeting along with Scott Wheatley, student body president. Members of a social work class were also in attendance. Gregg Franzwa, president of the Faculty Senate and an associate professor of philosophy, said the social work class chose accessibility on the TCU campus as its project for this year.

In other business, Babitch proposed a motion that would change the timing of mandatory faculty evaluations from the fall to the spring semester. The motion failed by a 3-23 vote.

Babitch said one of his constituents asked that the motion be made, because the constituent taught a two-semester course in which the students who were leaving in the fall blamed the faculty member's teaching for their leaving.

Tennis rolls to win

Captures tourney with clutch matches

By ERNESTO MORAN
TCU DAILY SKIFF

The TCU men's tennis team proved worthy of its top seeding in last weekend's rain-soaked H.E.B. Team Tennis Championships, winning four straight matches to take home the title.

MEN'S TENNIS

It wasn't easy, however, as the Horned Frogs, ranked No. 8 in the Intercollegiate Tennis Association rankings, fought off four match points in the semifinals on their way to the tournament championship at Corpus Christi.

TCU split the six singles matches with Minnesota (tied for the No. 25 ranking), taking two of the three three-setters. The Frogs went into doubles play needing wins in two of the three matches.

TCU took one match quickly, as No. 1-ranked juniors Paul Robinson and David Roditi won their No. 1 doubles match, 8-1. But TCU's No. 3 doubles team of senior Stefan Figley and freshman Andres Urencio dropped its match, 8-2.

The Frogs' hopes for a victory and a berth in the final rode on the shoulders of sophomores Ashley Fisher and Jason Weir-Smith, TCU's No. 2 doubles pair, who were facing Minnesota's Stefan Tzvetkov and Ross Loel.

Ranked No. 16 nationally, Weir-Smith and Fisher broke serve early on, but were broken back later. The match stayed even throughout, forcing a tie breaker. The Frogs quickly found themselves down 2-6 and facing four match points.

The Golden Gophers' Loel was serving, and Weir-Smith was returning.

"I reached out and just got my racket on it (the serve), and I lobbed it back and it bounced on the baseline," he said. "We (Fisher and Weir-Smith) were just about ready to walk up and shake hands. We both watched it bounce in and went up to the net. We won that point."

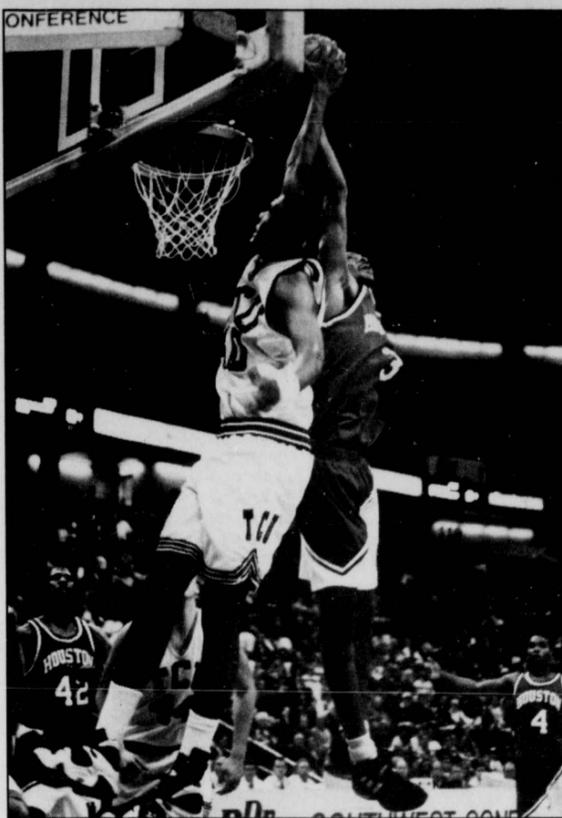

Weir-Smith then won two points on his serve, followed by a service return winner by Fisher. The duo took the next two points to win the match, 9-8 (8-6), gave the Horned Frogs a 4-3 win and set up a date for the final with Harvard (tied for the No. 25 ranking).

In the final, the Frogs were down 3-2 and needed to win the remaining singles match to stay alive and force doubles play. At No. 1 singles, Robinson, tied for the No. 13 ranking, came back from a one-set deficit to win, 5-7, 6-4, 6-4, and give the Frogs momentum.

Needing to win two of three doubles matches to win the title, TCU swept all three to earn the doubles point and a 4-3 victory.

The Horned Frogs stormed through the first two rounds, shutting out Michigan State and No. 35-ranked Clemson by scores of 7-0 and 4-0, respectively.

The Frogs will be busy over spring break, traveling to College Station this weekend to face Wake Forest and Clemson, and competing in the Blue-Gray Tennis Classic in Montgomery, Ala., March 16-19.

Jordan practices with Bulls for second consecutive day

By MIKE NADEL
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DEERFIELD, Ill. — Michael Jordan, estranged from the sport he adopted, may be returning to the game he once ruled.

Jordan practiced again with the Chicago Bulls on Thursday, the third straight day he appeared at team headquarters, fueling speculation that he'll trade in his baseball spikes for a new pair of Air Jordans.

"As far as Michael and all the speculation in basketball, we just have to hang tight here and wait to see what goes on," Chicago Bulls coach Phil Jackson said.

"He and I spoke about this possibility happening last September and October," Jackson said. "It's a reality, but it's still not a reality. We're not trying to throw up a kite that's not ready to fly."

Spokesmen for the Bulls, the Chicago White Sox and Jordan's agent said no announcement was forthcoming.

Jackson said the distraction made it tough for the Bulls to remain focused, but might help energize a lethargic team.

Jordan led them to NBA titles in 1991, 1992 and 1993.

Jordan, who hadn't played baseball since high school, batted .202 at Double-A Birmingham last season. He went to spring training hoping to move up to Triple-A Nashville this season, but the major league players' strike left him in limbo and he returned to Chicago.

senior forward Michael Thoele fouled Houston forward Damon Jones.

Jones hit the first free throw, but missed the second. The Horned Frogs, however, were not able to get the defensive rebound.

The Cougars outrebounded TCU 54-43 for the game, including 19-11 on the offensive boards.

Houston forward Willie Byrd then hit one of two free-throws to give the Cougars a 78-75 lead with 14.3 seconds left in the game.

TCU had a chance to tie the game, but TCU freshman guard Juan Bragg missed a three-pointer that would have made it an even score.

Byrd hit a pair of free throws to clinch the game for the Cougars.

Tubbs said TCU's offensive woes, including only 30 percent shooting in the second half, prevented the Horned Frogs from winning.

"The second half was the worst half we have played in a long time," Tubbs said. "Our offense disappeared in the second half. We made the defensive plays to get back into it and even win the game if we would have done anything on offense."

TCU is 0-5 against the Cougars in the postseason tournament. Lifetime, the Horned Frogs are 11-20 in the SWC tournament.

it might play the choke artist in Thursday's drama.

Most of the Cougars' big men got in foul trouble early in the second half, but managed to rotate enough fresh players in to do the job.

Like many times earlier this season, the Frogs squandered the lead, and were forced to play catchup late in the game.

Perhaps the sports adage on tournament jinxes rang true Thursday. TCU dropped to 11-20 in the SWC Classic, while Houston owns five postseason titles and has been in the final game two of the last three years.

Although Tubbs naturally gave Brooks and the Cougars credit for the win, most in attendance at the game would disagree.

Thursday afternoon, the better team did not win.

estranged husband, Nick (Jay Villiers) and a Macedonian photographer, Aleksander (Rene Serbedzija), whom she has recently met.

In part three, "Pictures," Aleksander ventures back to his childhood home in Macedonia, only to find that the people and country have changed.

Each part is fascinating within itself, but the way all three stories are woven together at the end is masterful.

The acting is credible, with Serbedzija standing out among the many good performances.

First-time writer-director Milcho Manchevski has crafted a compelling and relevant film about the current situation in the former Yugoslavia — of which Macedonia is a part. This story, however, transcends time. It is about how war anytime and anywhere can tear apart lives and relationships.

Of the three foreign film nominees I've seen, this one clearly rates as best.

Grade: A-

"The Secret of Roan Inish" (PG)

A young girl searches for the truth behind a legend in "The Secret of Roan Inish," the latest film from writer-director John Sayles ("Matewan," "Eight Men Out").

When young Fiona (Jeni Courtney) is sent to live with her grandparents on the western coast of Ireland, her grandfather (Mick Lally) tells her a story about her lost cousin Jamie and a secret island where they used to live called Roan Inish.

Fiona enlists the help of her other cousin Eamon (Richard Sheridan) and searches the countryside for the truth behind her grandfather's tale.

This sweet, old-fashioned Irish fable is nothing less than charming. The story is simple yet intriguing, and the acting is up to par, particularly young Courtney, who has a sparkling screen presence. Although the film never goes too deep, it also never gets bogged down.

The picturesque Irish scenery is beautifully captured by cinematographer Haskell Wexler. This pleasant Irish fable certainly marks a new step for American director Sayles, one which he has taken without missing a beat.

glass eye and both legs in braces. That's the funny part, but I think it's supposed to be the scary part. It's not.

If you must see it, see it for a dollar. It may not even be worth that much.

Grade: F

"Muriel's Wedding" (R)

"Muriel's Wedding" is an adorable little story about a girl whose only desire is to get married. It doesn't matter to whom, really, just as long as she can participate in the pomp and circumstance of it all, and walk down the aisle and be a queen — even for just for a day.

But it's hard for Muriel. She lives in Porpoise Spit, Australia, in the ugliest, most maladjusted family in town. She is the proverbial ugly duckling, dreaming behind closed doors to the backup sounds of Swedish '70s band ABBA.

After taking one insult too many, Muriel decides to skip town with a load of money and change her look, her name, and find herself a MAN.

Toni Collette is precious and heart-breaking as Muriel, and it is her spirited performances that makes "Muriel's Wedding" the jewel that it is.

Even if you hate ABBA, it fits. Muriel is the "Dancing Queen" we heard about as we grew up.

You'll love it. I laughed, I cried. I swear I did. Any woman, whether she is single, engaged, or married, will identify with poor Muriel's hopes and dreams for freedom from her current life — all the while chasing her magical future.

You find yourself hoping her dreams come true.

This is a fantastic movie. Men may not understand it, but the women will. And we'll all laugh at it together.

POLICE BLOTTER

Campus police reported the following offenses and violations from March 4 to March 9:

DRIVING WHILE INTOXICATED

March 4: Campus police reported arresting a non-student for driving while intoxicated at 3:50 a.m. on West Devitt Street. The man was seen changing a flat tire in the middle of the road. When campus police stopped to assist him, they determined he was intoxicated, according to campus police reports. The Fort Worth Police Department was called by campus police, and the man was transported to jail.

March 9: A campus police officer observed a moving vehicle with its headlights turned off on Main Drive at 2:22 a.m. The vehicle did not stop promptly, according to the campus police report. The officer determined that the driver was a TCU student and resident of Colby Hall dormitory. The officer reported that the driver was unstable on her feet, had slurred speech, and "smelled as if she had consumed a whole bottle of breath freshener." The student told the officer she was a Wiggins Hall resident. The other passengers in the vehicle told the officer that the driver lived in Colby.

The hall director was notified and the student was escorted back to Colby. Later that night, the student attempted to leave campus in a vehicle with a male student, but was seen and brought back to Colby by a campus security guard.

SUSPICIOUS PERSON

March 8: A man in plastic white pants and a dark coat attempted to enter the Ranch Management Building at 10:42 a.m. A campus police officer approached the suspect and asked him if he had a TCU ID. The man replied that he wanted to use the restroom. The officer escorted the man off campus. The man then went down the street and began to do lawn work in the backyard of a nearby house.

Books are their business

TCU Press may be little-known, but it's well-respected

By MICHA CORTESE
TCU DAILY SKIFF

The TCU Press' reputation is growing as a publisher, but some people haven't noticed.

People still call the TCU Press asking how much an advertisement in the Skiff costs or when kickoff time is for the next football game.

Judy Alter, director of TCU Press, said she and editor A.T. Row work on publishing eight to 10 books a year that focus on the history and literature of the American West.

"The University Press exists to contribute to the existing body of knowledge," Alter said. "We reach a different audience than football does. We reflect the academic life at TCU."

The TCU Press also prints some fiction works and scholarly studies, but only ones that could conceivably sell 1,000 to 1,500 copies, she said.

The publishing group acquires and edits manuscripts and uses freelance designers, she said. They use a short run printer in Michigan that prints 2,500 copies rather than large orders such as 100,000 copies, she said.

"The books are warehoused at the Texas A&M University Press," Alter said. "They also take all the orders and do the billing and collection."

The TCU Press works with other universities, including the A&M Press, Rice University Press, Southern Methodist University Press, the Texas State Historical Association and the University of North Texas Press.

"This gives us the leverage of a larger press," Alter said.

Alter said the press offers students the opportunity to learn about book publishing.

"We have an internship through the English department," she said. "Our interns usually go on to get jobs in publishing."

The TCU Press usually publishes four to five books each season, spring and fall, Alter said. This season they published five books and are still trying to translate the sixth book into English from Spanish, she said.

This season's books are: Texas Siftings by Jerry Flemmons; Windmills, Drouths and Cottonseed Cake

by John A. Haley; Walking Backward in the Wind by Helen Mangum Fields; In an Arid Land by Paul Scott Malone; Cherub in Stone by Catherine Gonzalez; and El Viaje de Hector Rabinal (The Journey of Hector Rabinal) by Donley Watt.

The reprint edition of Elmer Kelton's Good Old Boys is available for purchase at the TCU Press, Alter said.

Alter said a movie based on Kelton's book was shown on the TNT cable network Sunday night. The movie featuring Tommy Lee Jones will probably be playing throughout the week, she said.

The TCU Press sponsors the "Annual Autograph Extravaganza" in the fall, Alter said. It has 35 authors available to sign books at the Botanical Gardens, she said.

"We try to encourage people to give autographed books as Christmas presents," she said.

The Press also sponsors the "Absolutely Amazing Book Sale" at the TCU Press in October where used books, for example, are sold for a dollar, Alter said.

"Everyone can get some really great bargains at the sale," she said.

The TCU Press co-sponsors the TCU/Chisholm Trail Western Seminar, along with the Office of Extended Education and Chisholm Trail Round Up Inc., which will be in June, Alter said.

This year's seminar will focus on Plains Indian fact, fiction and film works, she said.

been in contact with him, the judicial board had not.

"I have not been in contact with the judicial board," he said. "I don't know why they are calling this hazing — it wasn't hazing."

Ching, a junior finance major, declined to comment further on the matter.

Sean Craig, president of the Phi Kaps, could not be reached by press time.

Evans would say only that the board was talking about hearing the case.

"I'll tell you what I am going to tell you and everyone else is going to tell you," Evans said. "When and if there is a story you'll know about it. The Fraternity and Sorority Judicial Board is currently talking about hearing a case — that's all."

"I have no further comment at this time," she said.

Barnes said no action would be taken until after spring break.

"Right now we are just at the stage where we want them (the judicial board) to let us know what they're thinking," he said. "They can't even begin to take care of anything until the week after Spring Break."

Evans said she did not know how long the review process would take.

"It varies with case to case," she said. "I have no idea how long it will be before we make a decision regarding this matter."

Hazing, as determined by the state of Texas, is "any intentional knowing, or reckless act, occurring on or off the campus of an education institution, by one person alone, or acting with others, directed against a student that endangers the mental or physical health or safety of a student for the purpose of pledging, being initiated into, affiliating with, holding office in or maintaining membership in any organization whose members are or include students in an educational institution," according to a memo sent each semester to all campus organization presidents from Don Mills, vice chancellor for the Office of Student Affairs.

The memo also states that hazing under the statute includes, but is not limited to, offenses that subject the student to an unreasonable risk or harm or that adversely affect the mental or physical health or safety of the student.

HAROLD'S

Group offers support for learning disabled

By AMANDA BRONSTAD
TCU DAILY SKIFF

For the typical student, both in grade school and above, studying for a test may be difficult because it requires a lot of time and energy. But for some students, the test demands much more.

A local support group is ready to help students with learning difficulties as well as their parents.

Learning Differences Support, Inc., which meets at TCU's Starpoint School, is a group which was "founded to promote understanding and support of children and adults with learning differences," according to a press release from the group.

Patricia Post, vice president of the group, said LDS has monthly meetings for parents or other adults concerned about students whose learning abilities are challenged in a traditional educational environment.

"The 'support' in LDS means supporting all learning differences, as opposed to being a support group," Post said.

Some of the learning differences that LDS addresses in its meetings are Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD and ADHD), dyslexia, educational behavior, problems with reading, spelling, writing, math and language.

However, the group recognizes all learning differences that students may have, Post said.

"We try to be comprehensive," she said. "If a student is hearing impaired, we recognize this as a learning difference as well."

Students whose parents attend LDS group meetings attend public or private schools from all over the area, Post said.

"The target for LDS is for parents of children from ages 3 to 18, but the program also includes any adults with learning differences," Post said.

LDS will hold its March meeting tonight from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Starpoint School. The title of the meeting is "Alternatives to Medications or Additions to Medications" and will consist of six speakers followed by any questions from the group.

The speakers will offer six different medical methods of approaching learning differences. The topics included are Vision Therapy, Herbs and Vitamins, Feingold Diet, Allergies, Sensory Integration and Biofeedback/Hypnosis.

"Dr. Leonard White's 'Vision Therapy' will emphasize training the eye through eye exercises and motor skills," Post said.

In addition, Dr. Mary Ann Block's "Allergies" lecture will attribute concentration problems to allergic reactions, Post said.

Post said parents or concerned adults are welcome to attend the meeting today. There is a $2 charge for nonmembers, she said.

LDS is also offering a seminar on Saturday, April 22 titled "The ADD Experience."

Dr. Rita Sherbenou, director of Winston School in Dallas, will host the seminar at the M.J. Neeley School of Business.
