House members to debate Circle K bill

The House of Student Representatives will debate a bill that requests funds to send members of Circle K International to its district convention.

The Circle K Texas-Oklahoma District Convention will be held March 19-21 in Arlington.

The House is also in the second stage of planning for a community service initiative. Last week, the House conducted a self-assessment to determine the type of service activity to pursue. Today they will vote on an area of service.

The meeting is at 5 p.m. today in Student Center, Room 222.

Jumpstart conference to prepare juniors

Registration deadline ends Wednesday for the TCU Junior Jumpstart conference.

Career Services will host a seminar for juniors March 6 at the Dee J. Kelly Alumni Center. The conference will feature different guest speakers and offer different opportunities to help students plan for their future.

Assistant Director of Career Services Melissa White said this will be the first year for Junior Jumpstart.

"We'll offer transitional programs designed to help TCU students after TCU," White said.

Similar to the Senior Conference, Jumpstart is designed for TCU juniors.

"People have told me from the Senior Conference that they wish they had something like this earlier," White said. "This way students can start earlier in planning for their life after college is over."

The conference is broken up into three different sessions beginning first with a focus on making career decisions. The second and third sessions includes information on finding a job or an internship and advice on applying to graduate and professional school.

The conference ends with the keynote address from Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Don Mills.

To sign up for Junior Jumpstart, students can fill out registration forms at Career Services along with a $20 registration fee.

NC State students arrested for child porn

RALEIGH, N.C. (U-WIRE) — Two North Carolina State students were arrested last Wednesday, in unrelated cases, for harboring and trading child pornography through their university Web sites, according to information from the State Bureau of Investigation.

Jon Richard Brock, a sophomore in computer science, was charged with two counts of second-degree sexual exploitation of a minor, while Timothy Gilrane, a senior in economics, was charged with third-degree sexual exploitation of a minor.

In the two cases, which are unrelated, according to a News & Observer article, Gilrane is accused of trading illegal pictures of minors and making them available to the public through his Web site. Brock is accused of storing pictures of minors engaged in sexual acts on his hard drive.

Payroll mix up puzzles officers

By Mel Korte
STAFF REPORTER

Students and administration officials are at odds over a mix up in which current Student Government Association officers have not received paychecks this semester, while three former SGA executive board members were paid until the last payroll deadline.

House Treasurer Ben Jenkins said the situation was caused by a mix-up between the SGA and the payroll department of the Office of the Controller.

"Certain departments at TCU perceived the SGA fell under other departments, rather than being one department," he said. "The student-run SGA did not receive the proper paperwork."

Jenkins said part of the miscommunication stems from the transition to the PeopleSoft system.

"Some of the former executive board members, who were previously on the TCU payroll, received paychecks into the 1999 spring semester," he said.

Jenkins said the problem may have stemmed from the previous semester's payroll. The first payroll sheet turned in for each executive member carried an end date, or the last day the member would be paid for the semester. Members already on payroll for another on-campus job may have end dates of a later time, causing their House paychecks to be continued past the set deadline.

"Originally, the treasurer submitted a payroll memo, and the board members received a check," he said. "In the new system, each department is responsible for the paperwork."

Jenkins said the mistakes have been corrected.

"I have talked to the correct departments and figured out the problems," he said.

Controller Larry H. Calloway said the problem was a paperwork mistake.

"It was a minor mix-up," he said. "Termination forms were not filled out correctly, and we are in the process of making corrections."

Students enjoy Tripping Daisy show, warm weather

By Lindy Hallford
STAFF REPORTER

Some students huddled around the stage, their heads nodding to the music of Tripping Daisy. Others relaxed barefoot on blankets listening to the band.

A crowd of about 300 people took advantage of the warm weather Friday to listen to Tripping Daisy by Frog Fountain.

Bubbles shooting out from machines on the stage floated over the crowd's heads. A table nearby was filled with band merchandise such as CDs, T-shirts, Tripping Daisy bubbles and 3-D glasses.

Many people brought out cameras and video recorders, and band members took the opportunity to take pictures with students and sign autographs after the concert.

Sponsored by Programming Council, the band's appearance was made possible by $5,500 from the Concerts Committee. PC is still reviewing its budget, and the exact amount they will be able to spend for other concerts this year is not yet known.

The band is the first step to accommodating students' requests for big name bands to play at TCU, said Danny Mogolov, Concert Committee chairman.

Tim DeLaughter, the band's lead singer, said he thought playing at TCU was a "refreshing" experience.

"I thought it was wonderful to play outside," he said. "I think it is refreshing that students can come from class and hang out here listening to music."

Lane Conner, a sophomore premajor, said Tripping Daisy is the reason he came to SuperFrog's birthday celebration.

"I think it is a great idea to have bands play that the students have heard of and care about," he said.

Tripping Daisy also serenaded SuperFrog with its own version of "Happy Birthday," after jokingly referring to the mascot as SuperToad.

Luke Townsend, a senior environmental science major, said the band added to the day's

Fifth annual symposium to honor female figures

By Karen Kassebeer
STAFF REPORTER

The TCU Women's Resource Center kicks off its fifth annual Women's Symposium today to honor and celebrate women and their impact on history.

Marcy Paul, program coordinator of the symposium, said the theme of the event, Faces in Herstory, focuses on women from a wide range of professions who have been important in the making of history. She said the symposium is a great opportunity for people to learn more about women in our history.

"It gives us a chance to celebrate women that are often left out," she said.

Tania Wilder, facilitator and intern for the symposium, said the presentation takes a different perspective that people may not ordinarily see.

She said that after attending the symposium last year, she realized the impact women have in today's society.

"I think the women's symposium is important for college men and women to understand where women stand and how it affects everyone's lives," Wilder said.

The first event, "A Dance and Poetry Informance: Behind the Shadow of a Word" begins at 7:30 p.m. today in the Student Center Ballroom.

Faculty, staff and students will make presentations from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday in the Student Center.

Jean Giles-Sims, a member of the Women's Symposium planning committee, said she will give a presentation titled,

"Beloved: Panel Discussion of Toni Morrison and Her Work," and host a table at Wednesday's dinner in honor of anthropologist Margaret Mead.

Several women, including Mead, Jane Goodall and Oprah Winfrey will be honored at the dinner at 6 p.m. Wednesday in the Student Center Ballroom.

Giles-Sims, a professor of sociology and criminal justice, said she has watched the symposium grow tremendously since its inception five years ago.

She said the event's organizers strive to increase involvement in the surrounding community.

Sims said her goal for the symposium is to raise awareness of some of the contributions women have made throughout history.

The symposium is free and open to the public, but Wednesday's dinner is $8 for TCU students and $12 for non-students.

RAs contribute to community

By Laura Head
STAFF REPORTER

For many resident assistants, Saturday was a day to paint, plant and play.

But they were not painting their dorm rooms, nor were they playing Frisbee at Frog Fountain.

About 70 RAs and members of the residential services staff participated in a service project to strengthen the residential services team while serving the Fort Worth community, said Kara Steffen, hall director for Colby Hall.

"Each semester we have RA inservice, which is something to give our resident assistants some continued education on their role in the buildings," she said.

Steffen said in previous semesters, all non-graduating RAs were required to attend various campus events to extend their training throughout the semester. She said the new service day was a way to create awareness of happenings on TCU's campus and the surrounding community.

"Our goal is to create a more hands-on experience and a more unique opportunity for the inservice," she said.

Lynn Turk, hall director for Wiggins Hall, said she chose four volunteer opportunities after surveying RAs to find out what type of community service they wanted

Binge drinking higher, study says

By Tom Sullivan
STAFF REPORTER

Are you a binge drinker? Do you drink to get drunk?

According to three studies on alcohol consumption, the number of binge drinkers at TCU was higher last year than both national and state averages among college students in 1997.

Binge drinking is defined as five drinks in a row for men and four drinks in a row for women.

A survey conducted by TCU's Alcohol and Drug Education Center last year revealed that 45.9 percent of TCU students surveyed are binge drinkers. The survey was conducted in the spring semester of last year and surveyed 259 students. The center conducts alcohol surveys every two years.

According to a report released in 1998 by the Harvard School of Public Health, the national binge drinking average among college students was 42.7 percent in 1997. The study included 130 schools and surveyed about 15,000 students across the country.

A report issued two weeks ago by the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse found that three out of 10 college students were binge drinkers in 1997. The survey included about 2,500 students from the

Mir needs money for operations or destruction inevitable

MOSCOW — The three new crew members who climbed aboard the Mir on Monday will probably be part of the last team on the 13-year-old space station unless Russia can find private donors to keep it aloft beyond August.

Two days after blasting off, Russian Viktor Afanasyev, Frenchman Jean-Pierre Heignere and Slovak Ivan Bella docked their Soyuz capsule with the Mir and joined two Russian cosmonauts who have been aboard for the past six months.

The station has been operating smoothly since a string of breakdowns in 1997. More than 100 men and women have lived on the Mir, which has circled Earth about 75,000 times since its was launched Feb. 20, 1986.

But the Russian government says it can no longer afford the $250 million required each year to keep the Mir going, and it may be abandoned if private funds cannot be found by August. To raise cash, the Mir has taken on a series of non-Russian passengers.

If no money materializes, Mission Control in Moscow is expected to fire the engines of a cargo ship attached to the space station and send the Mir crashing into the Pacific several days after crew leaves.

New fighting between Serb forces, ethnic Albanians on eve of deadline

RAMBOUILLET, France (AP) — With a new deadline imminent and the Serbs refusing to budge, ethnic Albanians met Monday night to decide whether to accept a self-rule plan for Kosovo designed to end their yearlong conflict.

They were told beforehand by Gen. Wesley Clark, the NATO commander, that a NATO peacekeeping force would ensure their security in event an agreement is reached.

New fighting, meanwhile, broke out between Serb forces and ethnic Albanians.

The threat of NATO airstrikes against Serbian targets hung over the talks, although Secretary of State Madeleine Albright has said that NATO would not carry out the threatened bombing strikes against Serbs if the ethnic Albanians continued to object to provisions of the agreement.

Albright shuttled between the two sides Monday, and Clark flew in unannounced from NATO headquarters in Brussels, Belgium, for a meeting with Hashim Thaci, the political director of the Kosovo Liberation Army, which has fought a bloody war for independence with Serb troops.

Some 2,000 people have died and about 300,000 more have been left homeless in the conflict.

U.S. and European mediators have pushed the ethnic Albanians to give their final approval to a Kosovo settlement. "We have tried very hard to explain the benefits of the agreement," said a senior U.S. official. "These are wrenching decisions."

Albright met separately with Serbian leader Milan Milutinovic, but without making any apparent headway in breaking down Serb resistance to the use of NATO peacekeepers to enforce a settlement.

She told him of her "deep concerns" about the latest outbreak of fighting and how important she felt it was for the Serbs to accept the settlement.

Ford Explorer owners complain of vehicles catching fire, smoking

WASHINGTON — A federal safety agency is investigating dozens of complaints of fires or heavy smoke in some earlier model Ford Explorer sport utility vehicles.

About a million of the Explorers, from model years 1992 to 1994, are on the road.

A report released Monday by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said there were 135 complaints of fire, smoke or burning smells coming from the ventilation system after leaves or other material entered through the Explorers' fresh-air vent, at the bottom of the windshield.

Two-thirds of the complaints involved fires or heavy smoke. A hot portion of the blower assembly may ignite debris that can collect in the venting system, the report said.

"Dealers can only advise consumers to avoid parking under trees," the report said.

Ford Motor Co. issued a recall of 48,000 Mercury Villager cars in 1995 for a similar problem.

The safety agency is also looking into complaints that some 1997 and 1998 Explorers continue to accelerate after the driver takes his foot off the gas or disengages the cruise control.

There are some 300,000 of the 1997-98 Explorers on the road. About 99 percent of the complaints involved problems with the throttle on Explorers with four-liter engines and a single overhead cam, the report said.

The NHTSA also opened an investigation into complaints that spare tires are falling off some Chevrolet S-10 pickups. The spare is stored under the truck and held in place by a cable.

In several cases the tires bounced back into the motorist's pickup or hit another vehicle, the report said. One injury was reported.

Clintons to hit ski slopes for Chelsea's birthday

WASHINGTON — The Clintons are heading back to the ski slopes for daughter Chelsea's 19th birthday, the White House announced Monday.

After two days in Arizona and California pushing his fix for Social Security and raising money for Democrats, President Clinton has three days of family time in Park City, Utah, blocked off on his schedule.

Last year the president, who has skied only once in his life, was just getting over a knee injury and opted to read by the fire while Hillary Rodham Clinton and Chelsea dashed down the slopes.

Clinton leaves Washington on Thursday for Tucson, Ariz., where he plans an address on his budget proposals for Social Security and education.

On Saturday, Chelsea's birthday, he heads to Park City, where he will remain until Tuesday, March 2.

Three bodies recovered from Galveston Bay after storm

GALVESTON, Texas — The bodies of a fisherman missing since Saturday and two other men who might have been working with him were recovered Monday from Galveston Bay.

Police divers located the body of one man in the wreckage of a commercial oyster boat that failed to return to port Saturday after a severe storm passed through the area.

Three men were aboard the 31-foot vessel, Coast Guard officials said.

The bodies of two other men also were recovered from the bay, but the Coast Guard was awaiting identification to determine whether they are the other missing fishermen.

One body was found near the Texas City dike. The third was found near a pier in the Galveston Channel. Another man whose body never was recovered fell off the same pier last month.

"We don't know if all these bodies are connected to this one fishing boat," said Coast Guard spokesman Don Merwin.

School bus hits tree but no serious injuries reported

HOUSTON — A school bus carrying 24 children veered off a road and hit a tree Monday, apparently after an 18-wheeler lost its load northwest of Houston.

All of the children and the bus driver were taken to area hospitals, but their injuries were not serious, Aldine school district police said.

The accident occurred about 5 p.m. near State Highway 249.

Witnesses said the truck swerved to avoid an accident and dumped a storage tank into the path of the bus, which was carrying students home from Shotwell Middle School.

The bus veered to avoid the load and hit the tree. Television reports showed the left front end of the bus lodged into the tree.

These stories are from the Associated Press.

TRIPPIN' TUNES

Thumbs up to 'big-name' bands

If SuperFrog could talk, he'd probably sing. Though he may not croon like one of our favorite alternative pop bands, our horned mascot was welcomed to legal age this year by one: Tripping Daisy. His birthday — held Thursday and Friday — was celebrated by many students in grand style: rousing swing dances, rounds of sumo-wrestling and a scramble or two up an artificial mountain wall.

Whether we were charmed by SuperFrog in a swing maneuver Thursday night or danced around a stage set up near Frog Fountain Friday afternoon, it's a perk to have an opportunity to see popular acts such as the Custodians and Tripping Daisy on campus. And it's a boost to school pride to host live performances of a band whose songs would usually be transmitted via the tinny speakers of a car stereo, endless MTV video marathons or hand-in-earmpit parodies courtesy of a redneck cousin, Bubba Joe.

Acting as sponsor of the events, of course, was Programming Council, which has taken strides during the years to bring big-name bands to campus. This semester, under the guidance of Danny Mogolov, the chairman of the Concerts Committee, PC hopes to book more shows that equal — and even surpass — the popularity and familiarity of big-label bands such as Tripping Daisy.

"Students deserve quality entertainment," Mogolov told the Skiff last week. "I am trying to be more aggressive about bringing major shows and bigger artists to play at TCU."

With that we agree, and we praise any move that would gather members of our campus together to strike a common chord in amusement and entertainment. Besides, it's part of the college experience to lounge, dance and sway to music with friends at a concert, whether in a crowded city venue or on the green lawns in front of the Student Center.

One of PC's goals this spring: enlarging the Battle of the Bands to possibly include a smashing performance by either the Nixon's, Violent Femmes or the Toadies. For homecoming events in the fall, programmers have looked into bringing the Goo Goo Dolls, Fastball and Barenaked Ladies.

Even if some of these options don't become reality, students should at least appreciate PC's efforts to provide students with big-name acts that bring recognition to TCU and on-campus entertainment options for free — or at least at a discounted price. It's what students have wanted, and perhaps what they should expect.

And with PC's plans, the student body may be pulling out those dancing shoes more often.

Think you can handle it?

Warning: This column is too extreme for you!!! It might cause severe onomania.

Are you tired of those same old newspaper columns that just don't say anything? You know, the ones that beat around the bush and never really get to the point. I am talking about those quiet, well-reasoned arguments that don't get anyone riled up. What's the point, you bunch — of mealy-mouthed weenies?

Commentary

WILLIAM THOMAS BURDETTE

Well if you're sick of that — and I know you are — then read this column. It's LOUD. It's irreverent. I don't care who I offend. It's just like morning drive-time radio. It's a zoo. It's craaaaaazy, man. WOW! ZOWIEEEEEEE! BAM! KABOOOM. (Those are the pyrotechnics that will accompany all of my columns from now on.) If you like your "beer cold, your TV loud and your homosexuals flaming" (a la one of pop culture's most prominent and respected icons, Homer Simpson) then read this column.

Man, all those other newspaper columns out there are like those potato and corn chips that simply taste good but don't really make much noise. What's the use in that? Who's going to buy chips because they taste good? WEENIES — that's who.

Don't be a weenie, man. If you like snack chips that are !LOUD! and !CRUNCH! like you've never heard before, eat Doritos and read this column.

If you are thirsty, drink water. If you want the ride of your #!%@ing life, drink something EXTREME! If you like to go base jumping and hang gliding for your "soft" drink then drink Mountain Dew and read this column.

If you want to pretend like you don't care about your image and you are above all this EXTREME advertising, then wash down this column with a little Sprite. No, wait, drink a Mr. Pibb and PUT IT IN YOUR HEAD!

If you want a revolutionary taco, go to Taco Bell, get you a Gordita and start reading, 'cause this ain't yo' granny's newspaper column. In fact you might get disowned by your family and excommunicated from your church just for reading this...

(What? The word's getting too big. What? That's not good for the target audience? OK, I'll revise.)

... You could get kicked out of house, home and church for reading this column. It's dangerous, man!

(Still no good? OK, I'll throw in some more pyrotechnics and wacky comments.)

... ZOWIE ...

If you read this column, the pope is going to throw you off the balcony of the Vatican — BAM! SPLAT! — you'll hit the ground just as a truck full of little drink umbrellas zooms by and BAM! Just like Frogger. Just try to grab the pontiff's funny little hat first.

Reenacted date promotes responsibility

Rape results when individuals let heat of the moment cloud decision-making

I am having a conversation with a bunch of guys sitting around a table. There are no women here so we can be completely honest with one another without worrying about how we are perceived by our counterparts. I ask the group to play a movie game with me. You are cast as the male star and get to have any woman you have dated as your leading lady. The movie begins. You pick up your date from her room and she is looking great. You can't stop looking at her, but you finally stop staring long enough to hand her the flowers you brought. The two of you talk before dinner. Over dinner, you have a wonderful conversation, and you think to yourself how lucky you are. After dinner the two of you go to one of those romantic movies you like but you can't tell your buddies. During the movie, you put your arm around her and she moves in a little closer and smiles. Every now and then during the movie, she kisses you on the neck. After the movie, you walk hand in hand back to the car. As you open her door, she gives you the sexiest kiss you can remember. Freeze frame and fast forward.

Guest Commentary
DARRON TURNER

You are now back in her room, and she tells you that her roommate is gone for the weekend. You ask if it is OK to play some music. She agrees. You walk over to her, and the two of you embrace in a long, passionate kiss. You make your way over to the bed, kissing and fondling all the way. Both of your minds are racing. Moans and wet kissing break the silence in the room. You can't get enough of each other. You are clumsily trying to undress each other at the same time. Finally naked, you embrace as if giving thanks for the night to come. She feels as good as she looks. You are all over each other. You are touching and kissing for what seems like an eternity. Just before "sex," she mumbles something. You moan something back at her. You feel her pushing away, but you hold her tightly. She says something to the effect that she is not ready for this, but you continue to think all she needs is a little convincing. You notice she has a tear in her eye. You kiss her and tell her it is going to be all right, but you never stop. Later, you're sitting on the bed talking with her, but she is not very talkative. When she does say something, she keeps repeating "Why did you do this?" You respond, "I did nothing that you didn't want.

Why are you tripping? You've been all over me all night." She starts to cry again. You dress, hug her and whisper that you will call her later. Freeze frame and fast forward. Over the next couple of days you call her, but she is never in her room and doesn't respond to any of your messages. You see her on campus, but she avoids you. You finally get her roommate on the phone one day. She tells you that her roommate doesn't want to see you any more. That is the last time you talk to her about anyone. When your buddies ask about her, you tell them that she was tripping and you had to cut her loose. Commercial break. A person commits sexual assault if that person causes the penetration of the vagina, anus or mouth of another person with a sexual

End movie. Let's talk about what has happened so far: What I want you to do is roll the tape back slowly in your head and answer these questions as we review the various scenes: (Remember to stay in character.)
 1) Did you cross the line? Explain your answer.
 2) At what point did she give up the right to say no? a. When she agreed to the date; b. When you paid for dinner and a movie; c. At the movies; d. After the first kiss at the movies; e. When she told you her roommate was gone; f. After the second kiss; g. After she fondled you; h. After you became aroused; i. When you undressed each other.
 3) Did she make any bad decisions? If so, what should be the consequences of those decisions?
 4) Did you rape her?
 Take your time and discuss the question with your peers. I would love to hear from you. Drop by and see me in Student Center Room 139, or e-mail me at D.Turner@tcu.edu.

paid out of the operative budget of the House. The 1998-1999 budget allocates $2,060 per year in salary to the SGA President. The House vice president, SGA vice president for programming, secretary and treasurer are each allocated $1,760 per year.

The three officers, former SGA Vice President for Programming Carl Long, former House Vice President Willy Pinnell and former House Secretary Christie Hobbs were paid for the previous two payment cycles.

Jenkins said the former officers were responsible for correcting the payment mistakes.

Pinnell said the payroll problems were a result of the transition to the new PeopleSoft system.

"This is a miscommunication issue," he said. "Since the previous

House officers had not begun receiving paychecks until the beginning of February 1998, I assumed the executive board would be paid until the new officers were officially installed at the end of January.

After talking with Ben [Jenkins], I realized we were never supposed to get the paychecks."

Pinnell said the incident was a mistake.

"I assumed they would take the amount off of my student account," he said. "This is a university matter, dealing with the General Reserve accounts the university set up for the House."

Pinnell said he has not been contacted and told what he is supposed to do with the money.

Hobbs said she returned the money when she realized the mistake.

"I received my paycheck, and realized I had been paid for the House," she said. "I returned the money to the SGA."

Long said he did not realize the problem at first.

"I received the first paycheck, and thought it was for my other job as a resident assistant," he said. "After I received the second paycheck, I went to the controller's office to correct the situation.

"There was a confusion over when I was supposed to be terminated from my job with the SGA," he said. "They don't know where the error came from, either the controller's office or the SGA."

Assistant Provost for Information Services David Edmondson said the transition to new software can be problematic.

"Anytime you change software, you will have temporary problems," he said.

Edmondson said he was unaware of any problems.

"I am not in charge of the day-to-day operation," he said. "It doesn't sound like a PeopleSoft problem."

to participate in.

"The top three were working with children, painting and working with the homeless," Turk said. "The only one of those we didn't do was work with the homeless."

The four services that were selected were cleaning a city park, planting trees, painting over graffiti and working at three different community centers. Each RA that attended the session chose the area in which they wanted to volunteer.

Matt Lantz, an RA in Milton Daniel Hall, said he enjoyed playing basketball and pool with children at Greenbriar Community Center.

"We got to be there and play with the kids," said Lantz, a junior English major. "We got to be someone different for them, and a lot of RAs appreciated the opportunity to serve."

He said the new service day was a good way to get involved and to give back to the community.

"It's always good to get out into the community," Lantz said. "It gave us a chance to get TCU's name out in Fort Worth."

Luis Vasquez, a recreation specialist for Greenbriar Community Center, said the residential staff made a positive impact on the 11 children that were present.

"There were more volunteers than kids," he said. "I even had a good time myself."

Vasquez said the RAs and the children participated in many different activities, from bowling to spin-art.

"The kids range in age from six to 12," he said. "They like it when they get attention."

Carlo Capua, an RA in Milton Daniel Hall, said he participated in Graffiti Abatement, a program that painted over graffiti in north Fort Worth.

"It was a type of RA staff development," said Capua, a junior marketing major. "It was also a way to build camaraderie as well as to benefit the Fort Worth community."

Capua said the RAs met after they completed their service to discuss what they did. He said the group supported the change in programming.

"A lot of us decided it was something we'd like to do every week," Capua said.

Kathy Kruse, hall director for Milton Daniel, said the new service project was done because the Residential Services office is committed to training the RA staff. She said she thinks the idea of a campus-wide community service day is one that could succeed at TCU.

"It would be great to eventually extend it to everyone," she said. "I hope it will grow and grow and grow."

Crystal Schwake, an RA in Colby, said she thinks the program was successful because it strengthened the residential services staff.

"I think the RAs are always a team," said Schwake, a senior religion major. "It's a nice opportunity for all the RAs to get together because the only time we get together is during training."

Schwake said she was impressed by the staff members who participated in the volunteer work.

"It showed that they want to put in as much as we put in rather than them being up in the office while we're down in the trenches," she said.

state's 10 largest private and public universities.

Leanne Fondren, substance abuse counselor at the center, said she wasn't surprised about TCU's percentage and counsels many students with alcohol and drug problems. The center tries to make students aware of the effects of alcohol, and it also offers counseling.

Fondren said TCU students are aware of the definition and dangers of binge drinking.

"Our students seem to have a better understanding of what responsible use means," she said. "That means using a designated driver and following the 1-2-3-4 rule."

The "1-2-3-4 rule" is a method of explaining the consequences of alcohol. "1" means don't drink more than one drink an hour; "2" means use a designated driver and never drink alone; "3" means drink no more than three days a week; "4" means drink no more than four drinks per occasion if you are a woman, or five drinks if you are a man.

Andy McMillan, president of Sigma Phi Epsilon and a junior political science major, said binge drinking is a problem at TCU.

"You can see it on any given weekend," he said. "I hear people talking (in the Student Center) about getting drunk and bragging about it."

The Harvard report also said most binge drinking occurs in college fraternities and sororities.

The report said four out of five fraternity members are binge drinkers.

Angie Taylor, director of the Alcohol and Education Center, and Kristen Kirst, director of fraternity and sorority affairs, said alcohol consumption among TCU's Greek students is lower than the national average.

"I don't think our fraternities and sororities are making students drink," Kirst said. "Our fraternities and sororities are some of the best educated in terms of the rules with alcohol."

Kirst said the biggest problem with binge drinking in fraternities and sororities is accountability.

"I don't think they hold (minors) responsible," she said. "Drinking is a problem across the board."

McMillan said binge drinking isn't just a common occurrence among fraternities and sororities.

"I have been in both situations (as a non-member), and I think the opportunity to binge drink is the same among non-members," he said. "I believe non-members abuse it as much as fraternities ... but I know people feel differently."

the band added to the day's atmosphere.

"It was a beautiful day to watch bubbles through the air and listen to Tripping Daisy," he said.

Barbara Bowersox, a senior biology major, said she did not think the event was publicized enough, although she did stay for the concert.

"I didn't know about it until I was walking by after class and asked what was going on," she said.

She said she decided to stay and watch the band for several reasons.

"I like Tripping Daisy," she said. "It is a Friday, it is pretty outside, and there is nothing else to do."

Andy Gray, a sophomore pre-major, said the concerts helped to bring students together.

"I think it is good for the campus and good for the school," he said. "It promotes school unity and brought out a diverse group of people."

Tripping Daisy band members said they are heading to their hometown Dallas for a few days of rest after Friday's concert.

DeLaughter said the band is recording another album and have released a new set of songs called "Tops of Our Head" on its Web site, TrippingDaisy.com.

Slackers, relax Under bill, career students would face tuition increases

By Peggy Fikac ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — A 1997 law that could mean drastic tuition increases for so-called career students — those who take many hours beyond what's needed for their undergraduate degrees — wouldn't affect those currently enrolled under a bill approved 31-0 Monday by the Texas Senate.

"We essentially grandfathered those students and said, OK, we're going to start this thing with students who enter in September of 1999 so everybody's gotten notice of what the rules are going to be," said Senate Education Committee Chairman Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo.

Bivins championed the 1997 idea and wrote this year's bill, which goes to the House.

The 1997 law called for state funding to be cut off to universities for undergraduates racking up 170 credit hours, with some exceptions. Beginning this fall, the law would allow universities to charge out-of-state tuition rates to those taking more than the allowable number of courses.

That could mean huge increases in students' tuition bills.

For fall 1999, resident tuition is slated to be $38 per semester credit hour, while non-resident tuition will be $254. An estimated 11,500 students would be affected in fall 1999 by the 1997 law.

"That caught a lot of students in mid-stream," Bivins said of the 1997 measure. "Once this (1999) bill passes the Legislature and is signed by the governor, everybody will have four years' notice of what the limits are going to be."

Under the bill: — Current students would be grandfathered. The credit hour limit would apply to freshmen entering in fall 1999.

— The limit would be changed to account for differences in the number of hours required for different degree plans. The new cap would be 45 hours over an individual's degree plan.

MLB Rangers' Wetteland injures ankle

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) — The Texas Rangers were worried about John Wetteland's arm going into spring training, but the concerns had to take a back seat to an ankle injury he suffered on Monday.

Wetteland, who had elbow surgery in the off-season but has been throwing without any problems, suffered a strain in his right ankle during a workout.

The Rangers said Wetteland could miss the next one to two weeks while the swelling goes down.

The Texas reliever wasn't happy because it set him back in his rehabilitation program.

"It's frustrating because I put in a lot of sweat and hard work to get back to where I was feeling pretty good," Wetteland said. "It just shows that the ankle is an important part of the body, too."

Rangers pitchers and catchers reported to camp last week with the full squad due in on Thursday.

Suns hand Mavericks ninth loss

PHOENIX (AP) — Jason Kidd shook off the flu for his third triple-double in five games Monday night to lead the Phoenix Suns to a 101-83 victory over the road-weary Dallas Mavericks.

Kidd had 17 points, 12 assists and 10 rebounds for his 23rd career triple-double. He left the game for good right after his 10th rebound with 4:20 to play and Phoenix leading 89-72.

Rex Chapman, shooting just 26 percent from the field entering the game, was 7-for-12 for 18 points for the Suns, who beat Dallas for the seventh consecutive time. Danny Manning scored 12 of his 17 points in the fourth quarter for Phoenix.

Cedric Ceballos scored 21 and Michael Finley 17 for the Mavericks, who were playing their seventh road game in 11 days, the longest trip in franchise history.

Dallas trailed by 18 in the second quarter, cut it to four early in the third, then fell behind by 19 in the fourth.

The Suns, who hadn't led after one quarter in their previous seven games, shot out to a 12-2 lead and were up 23-15 at the end of the period.

Dallas, which finished the road trip 1-6, made just three of its first 17 field goals and shot 28 percent in the first quarter.

Rookie Pat Garrity scored four during an 11-0 run that gave the Suns a 38-20 with 6:45 left in the half. But the Mavericks outscored Phoenix 14-6 over the last 4 1/2 minutes of the half and cut the lead to 49-41 at the break.

Dallas scored the first four points of the third quarter, but the Suns went on a 14-5 run, punctuated by Kidd's spectacular one-handed slap pass on a rebound to Luc Longley for a dunk to put Phoenix up 63-50 with 5:21 left in the third.

Manning scored eight during a 10-4 spurt to start the fourth quarter to boost the Suns' lead to 81-65.

Hoops put on winning performance

Senior night played out like a movie for the TCU women's basketball team with an 87-66 win against Air Force Saturday night.

"It was a perfect senior night," head coach Mike Petersen said. "We could not have scripted it any better."

The script included award-winning performances in scene, acting and plot.

The scene was a rowdy crowd of almost 3,500 people offering praise to seniors Misty Meadows, Ginger Usher and their families before the game at Daniel-Meyer Coliseum.

The acting was up to the praise. Meadows missed a double-double by just one rebound, and Usher scored 11 points.

A supporting cast of junior Diamond Jackson, who had a game-high 20 points, sophomore Amy Sutton and sophomore Karen Clayton rounded out the cast by each contributing double-figures in scoring.

The story line had a couple of twists and turns. The Frogs planned to go inside and utilize their height as an advantage over Air Force, and the antagonist offered little resistance.

"They play with a perimeter-based team," Petersen said. "We got the lead and kept it by going inside and taking advantage of our height."

Another twist was one of redemption. Jackson said she wasn't pleased with her previous game against Nevada-Las Vegas. She set out to redeem herself, and her game did exactly that.

"I think all competitive people want to play well, and want to improve it if they don't think they did," Petersen said. "She played very well (against Air Force) and made it a game of redemption."

Even with the different story lines culminating, it was the climax that took the prize.

TCU and Air Force played even early, and with 11 minutes to play in the first half, the Frogs led 17-15. That was as close as Air Force could get as TCU went on a 26-7 run over the next eight minutes to capture a 43-22 lead.

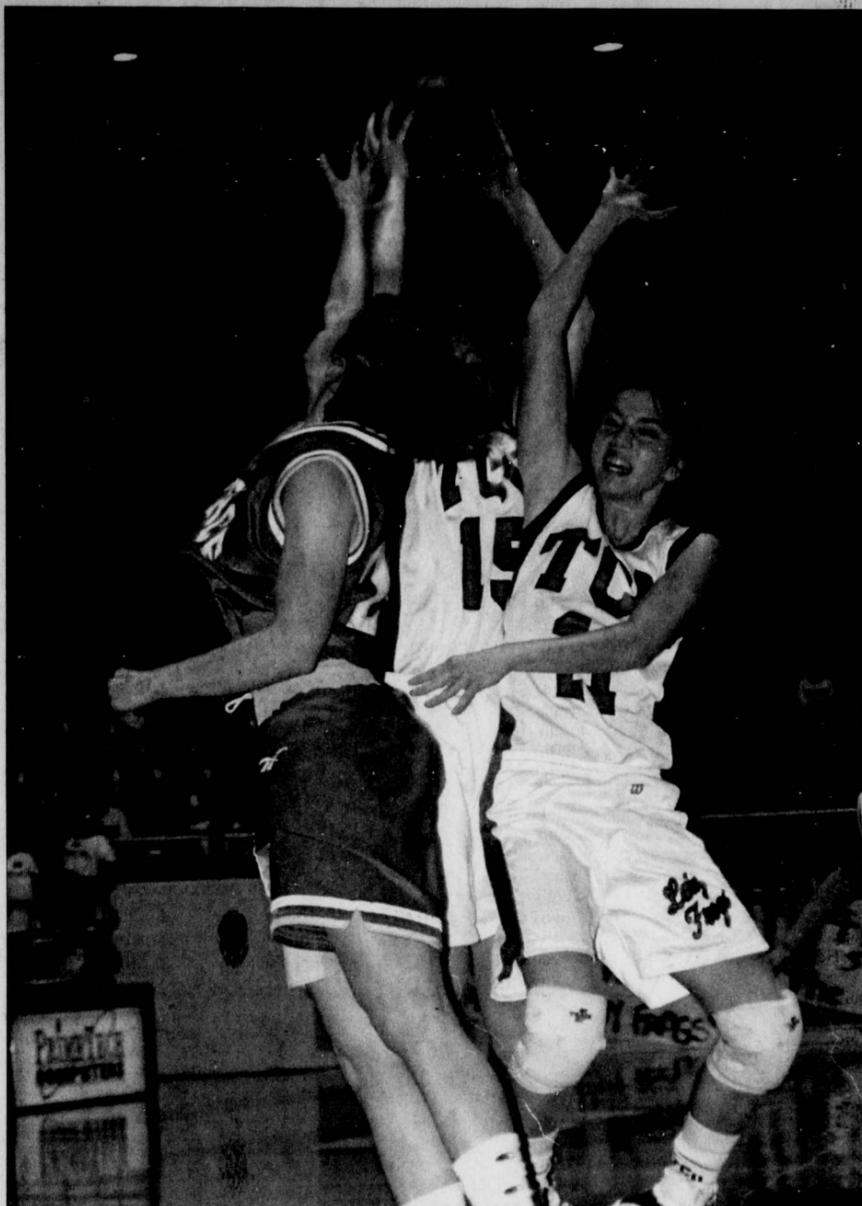

Although the Frogs extended the lead to 27 points with nine minutes left in the game, Air Force pulled back to within 16 with 2:33 remaining.

"Air Force played a little better in the second half, and we couldn't keep them off of the free-throw line," Petersen said.

Air Force's play late in the game allowed for a 40-40 second half score, but that couldn't make up for the already existing TCU lead.

The Frogs are now lifted to 15-9 overall and 7-5 in the Western Athletic Conference. They have almost completely wrapped up the No. 4 position for the WAC tournament, and with two road games at Rice and Tulsa this week, TCU has its sights on the No. 3 spot.

The TCU women's basketball team wrote a nice script for senior night, but the WAC tournament may be a time to re-enact an old script — Cinderella.

Senior forward Ginger Usher (15) and sophomore guard Amy Sutton tangle with an Air Force player in Saturday night's victory at Daniel-Meyer Coliseum.

Alou may miss season with torn ACL

By Ben Walker
ASSOCIATED PRESS

All-Star outfielder Moises Alou ripped up his left knee when he fell off a treadmill and likely will miss most, if not all, of the season — a loss the Houston Astros called "devastating."

Alou tore his anterior cruciate ligament last week while training at his home in the Dominican Republic. The Astros hoped the injury was not serious, but an MRI in Houston on Monday revealed the damaged ACL.

"This is a devastating blow for our team," Astros general manager Gerry Hunsicker said by telephone from training camp in Kissimmee, Fla. "Clearly, this was the worst-case scenario we could have imagined."

"He's probably facing missing most of the year, possibly the whole season," Hunsicker said. "I think the best we could hope for is that he returns sometime in late August or early September."

Astros call it a "devastating" loss

Alou, 32, finished third in the NL MVP voting last season behind Sammy Sosa and Mark McGwire. Playing his first season in Houston, Alou hit .312 with 38 home runs and 124 RBIs in helping the Astros win the NL Central championship.

Surgery has not been set, though Hunsicker said he hoped it would happen sometime next week.

"Everybody was so shocked by this diagnosis, I think everybody is going to take a day or two to gather themselves before anything is scheduled," Hunsicker said. "I think he was really stunned."

Minus Alou, a World Series star for the Florida Marlins in 1997, the Astros will rely on Carl Everett and young Richard Hidalgo to fill the void in left field.

Everett hit .296 with 15 homers and 76 RBIs and Hidalgo, 23, batted .303 with seven homers and 35 RBIs in 211 at-bats.

"But you don't replace an All-Star caliber player," Hunsicker said. "We all understand that injuries are part of the game and we live in fear of one of our star players being struck down with a serious injury."

Hunsicker said Alou was hurt Thursday when he tried to adjust the controls on a treadmill that was going too fast. Alou slipped and caught himself in the crevice between the treadmill belt and frame.

At the time, the Astros were optimistic the injury was not too serious. They knew he would not take part when position players began spring training Tuesday, but Hunsicker thought it might be a cartilage problem that would take 3-4 weeks to heal.

"There doesn't appear to be any structural damage, which is good news, but we don't know the extent of it until he gets the tests," Hunsicker said last week. "He can put weight on it, which is also a good sign."

But the MRI showed far more extensive damage. Alou traveled to Houston on Sunday night and was examined by team physician Dr. David Linter on Monday.

Alou set career highs in almost every offensive category last season with 182 hits, 34 doubles and 104 runs as the Astros won their second straight division title.

The Marlins traded Alou to the Astros after the 1997 season. Under his five-year contract, Alou could have demanded a trade after last season but elected to stay after the Astros agreed to give him an extra $3 million payment in 2002.

Sophomore Esteban Carril anticipates a serve in a match on Feb. 13. Carril is the No. 5 singles player in the nation according to the Intercollegiate Tennis Association rankings.

Frogs victorious against WAC rivals BYU, New Mexico in weekend play

Matt Stiver
SKIFF STAFF

TCU will remain a member of the Western Athletic Conference in 1999. Brigham Young University and the University of New Mexico will leave the WAC to join the Mountain West Conference in 1999.

So when BYU and New Mexico paid a visit to the Bayard H. Friedman Tennis Center this weekend, would that fact weigh on the minds of the TCU Men's tennis team? Would it provide the team any extra motivation?

"Not really," TCU Men's tennis coach Michael Center said after his team defeated No. 44 BYU 6-1 on Friday. "What they do next year is of no concern to us."

The No. 32 Horned Frogs, playing for the first time since a Feb. 13 victory over Ball State, ran their home record to 2-0 with the victory.

"This was a pretty good day," Center said Friday. "I thought we played hard."

"Overall, I was pleased." Playing from the No. 1 singles position, sophomore Esteban Carril demolished Manuel Calvo in straight sets, 6-1, 6-1. Following the match, Carril moved up to No. 5 in the Intercollegiate Tennis Association national singles rankings.

"I thought I played real good tennis today," Carril said. "[Calvo] is a real good player, and the score should not reflect how he played."

No. 2 sophomore Trace Fielding won in three sets, 7-5, 4-6, 6-1, over Gert Vilms.

No. 3 sophomore Martin Jirak dispatched Damien Ward in straight sets, 6-1, 6-4.

Sophomore Scott Eddins, the No. 4, took a straight sets victory as well. Eddins defeated Nic Losee 6-2, 6-2.

Sophomore Sebastian Iannariello was defeated by Jeff Harbach, 6-2, 6-4.

No. 6 Petr Koula, a sophomore, rounded out singles play with a 6-3, 6-4 victory over David White.

In doubles, the No. 50 team of Carril/Jirak improved to 3-0 with an 8-5 victory over No. 36 Vilms/Ward.

On Sunday, The New Mexico Lobos stepped onto the Bernard "Tut" Bartz Varsity Tennis Courts hoping to reverse a trend. TCU and New Mexico have played 10 matches in this series; the Frogs won nine of them. The TCU team upheld that tradition with a 6-1 victory. The Frogs are 3-1 this spring after the win.

"This was a very good win," Center said after the match.

Carril celebrated his rise to No. 5 in the ITA rankings with a 6-4, 6-2 victory over Nicolas Dubey.

Fielding dispatched Takeshi Itoh in straight sets, 6-3, 6-2.

"Trace played really well today," Center said. "[Itoh] was quick."

"Trace really played hard, and this was his best match."

Jirak suffered his first loss of the spring, 6-3, 6-4 to Matthew Amgwerd. In doubles competition, TCU won all three matches.

Center said that this was the best match for all three doubles teams.

"I have seen improvement with each match," Center said.

The men will play at 2 p.m. today at University of Texas-Arlington. The Frogs will return home this Saturday to do battle with Texas Tech at 1 p.m.
