Miss Johnson Is Bryson Winner in 1930 Contest

Awarded $10 Prize in Chapel for First Place.

CHARLES HANNA SECOND

Best Poem Submitted Is "To One Whom Grief Has Changed," Judges Decide.

Miss Lena Agnes Johnson, sophomore student from Corpus Christi, won the Walter E. Bryson poetry prize of $10 for 1930 with her poem, "To One Whom Grief Has Changed," it was announced Monday morning in chapel when Mrs. Artemisia Bryson of the English department presented the award.

Judges of the contest this year were Dr. John O. Beatty of S. M. U., Mrs. Grace Noll Crowell, Dallas poet, and the Texas Poetry Society.

Miss Helen Locke, a freshman, won the prize in 1921. It was not given in 1922, due to the illness of Prof. Bryson, but in 1923 Miss Camilla Boykin won the award, and Al B. Nelson the year following.

Smythe Lindsey won the prize in 1925, and in 1926 Carlos Ashley won it. Miss Evelyn Soames was judged the winner in 1927 and Amos Melton won the award the year following.

Miss Siddle Joe Johnson, sister of this year's winner, won the prize last year. Miss Lena Agnes Johnson, the new winner, was given third place in last year's contest. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Johnson of Corpus Christi. Her prize-winning poem follows:

TO ONE WHOM GRIEF HAS CHANGED. Now you are earth-bound, You who could see Only a level land and a tree. Now you are earth-bound, You who could hear Only the wind's cry against your ear.

Rest in that shadow; Pause where you stand. You have grown strange at sorrow's command. Now you are earth-bound, Feeling a new The thousand hurts that are stabbing at you.

White walks and level ground And the low, uneven mound Of red lilies. Sweet their scent. Wraps the grave with sacrament. Spent with grieving, yet you stand With fresh earth upon your hand. And there are crowding in your throat. A million voices too remote For utterance. No more you see Only a level land—a tree. For your eyes have looked upon A sheeted figure, straight and long.

Bind your hair with scarlet. It will not disguise The living, burning anguish Of your dark eyes.

Cement Work on Stadium Begins

Students and Officials Visit Scene of Action Daily.

Work on T. C. U.'s new stadium has been progressing rapidly in these first three weeks of construction. Most of the labor has been excavation, and as a result the progress is slow. Two steam shovels have been at work steadily, and cement pouring for the foundation is partially completed on one side.

So much excavation is necessary that it will be several weeks before the stadium will take on any material form. A short delay was caused by the fact that the city had to dig a storm sewer under the structure before too much digging was done.

Every day the building site is the object of many visits by T. C. U. students and officials. Pete Wright, one of the frequent visitors, announces that preparation of the playing field itself will be started as soon as the necessary land is cleared. A foot of loam will be imported first, and then grass in foot sections will be transplanted. Every effort will be made to have the turf ready by Sept. 10, which is the date set for the completion of the stadium itself.

Wealthy Friends Help Frosh When Speed Cop Visits

Being the owner of a handsome Ford "wreck" is not all pleasure, according to Lester Riggenger, a freshman of Clark Hall. Riggenger's well known campus motor is one of the most elaborately decorated of the Clark Hall vehicles.

"Since buying the car my popularity has increased greatly and all the girls beam upon me with dazzling smiles. But despite this fact, sorrow has come my way," said Riggenger. The sorrow, he explained, came in the form of a kiaki coated motor cop who visited him Thursday after classes and demanded a huge fine of $2 for passing up one of the red traffic lights down town. After a long and desperate search for some wealthy friends who were said to possess as great an amount as the cop desired, Riggenger was finally successful, and the cop went on his way, leaving a heavily mortgaged motor behind Clark Hall.

Bad luck seems to be following the said wreck, for Friday afternoon envious friends of Riggenger plotted evil things and Friday night the unlucky car was found parked "upside down" at the west entrance of Clark Hall. Some of the Clark Hall boys have been expecting to see a "For Sale" sign on the wreck.

"The birds sing better," said Dean Beckham, "when they are in company with others. I am going to get another one for Jarvis Hall." "They sing better," she continued, "when there is a great deal of noise. That is why Jacque sings so much in the cafeteria."

TO THE NEW.

Being elected to an office in the student body of a university is no small honor. It means that not only a class, an organization, or a particular group favored those who were elected, but that the entire student body chose them for leaders. The winners in the election are to be congratulated. And the student body is to be congratulated upon having so fine a group of officers for the coming year.

Fulfilling the duties of a student body president is not as easy as it may seem to the onlooker. It entails much time and patience, a thorough understanding of the student group, and a great amount of work. For each of these things, A. T. Barrett, our new president, is qualified. His previous activities in T. C. U. have proven that he is capable of maintaining the high standards set by his predecessors.

It is not necessary to prophesy success for Curtis McHorse because we know from experience his ability as a yell leader. The same may be said of Jay Williams, who is to edit The Skiff next year. Every one knows Jay's skill in this line. Already he is forming plans for next year's publication.

Because of their wide acquaintance, their familiarity with the school and the students, and because of their willingness to work, James Dacus as vice-president, and Miss Jane Jarvis, as secretary-treasurer of the student body, will succeed assuredly.

Our only regret is that all who were nominated could not have been elected. It is hard to say who is "best" when there is such a desirable group from which to chose.

TO PROFESSOR BALLARD.

"In sincere appreciation of his true loyalty, his staunch friendship, and his constant efforts to maintain a greater T. C. U., we, the Senior class of 1930, dedicate this twenty-sixth volume of The Horned Frog to John W. Ballard."

Thus reads the dedication of the 1930 annual to one of T. C. U.'s finest professors. Professor Ballard came to T. C. U. in 1922 in which year the department of business administration started. The department has grown since that time until it lists for the past two years the second largest number of majors in the graduating class. In connection with his departmental duties, Professor Ballard has operated a students' employment bureau since 1923. It is estimated that between 1900 and 1100 students have secured positions through the bureau since it was founded. This service alone would merit the honor of an annual dedication. This professor has also been influential in building and maintaining the friendly relationship that exists between the University and the business men and citizens of Fort Worth.

Professor Ballard was chosen class professor by the members of the class of '30 when it entered as a freshman group in the fall of 1926. He has indeed proved his "true loyalty and his staunch friendship" to the class that honored him. The annual is fittingly dedicated.

COLLEGE GRADUATES AND JOBS.

A senior, with a very unhappy look on her face, was heard to remark that she didn't see how all college graduates should expect to get a job, when there are literally thousands of them turned out of the schools each spring.

This is a thing which lurks before the undergraduate and often discourages all thoughts of finishing college. Such discouragement should be overcome, however, by a little thought and investigation of the subject. A recent editorial in a college newspaper throws some light on the matter:

"There is, and always will be, a place in the world awaiting the college graduate who is willing to work and work hard. Each year spent in college has its distinct cash value, and gives the man or woman a better chance for the right job."

The editorial goes on to say that, "a recent check shows that with the exception of Harding, every president of this country has been a college graduate. For the last 125 years 40 per cent of our Supreme Court justices have held college degrees, and 36 per cent of Congress is made up of college graduates."—C. I. A. Lasso.

Gives Mental Tests 114 New Members Class Examines Intelligence of School Children.

The mental testing class under the instruction of Dr. J. A. Glaze consists of four members, Miss Elizabeth McKisick, Miss Etolie McFadin, Miss Margery Grammer and Claud Clark. The first half of the semester was spent in theory and practical work in statistics.

The last half of the semester was devoted to the giving of intelligence tests. This Group Intelligence Tests were given to the pupils of the Alice Carlson School near T. C. U. The Binet Tests of Intelligence were given to twenty-five children in the kindergarten of Baptist Seminary.

Practical work of this nature is interesting, and helpful to the student, and illuminating to the teachers of the children, according to Dr. Glaze. Often the teacher does not know whether a child does inferior work because of lack of ability or because of laziness. This course will also be taught in summer school.

AS MY TEACHER MAY SEE IT

Talking endlessly to a jumble of students, who do not care, but wriggle and squirm or read or sleep or sigh, or write, or yawn, until the bell rings once and then they are alert, and smile, and whisper, and primp, so they can rush away, to eat, or meet a friend, or see a movie show, or perhaps to punch an adding machine, or wait on people in department stores, or some to sleep, my God! what a life! to be a teacher of psychology in a school where all are fools or flappers.

THE SEAMSTRESS

Poor old woman Sewing a fine seam, Stitching all the night By a candle's gleam. Stitching all the night So she may buy bread. For her hungry children Sound asleep in bed.

WORKER

Burly, heavy sordid—man of iron and steel, Builder of a stronger race—man big and real. Fighter, drinker, worker—driver to the bone. Man that towers, reaches—does it all alone. You are making; you are building, for this world today.

Stories of racketeers are popular. Stories of the World War are popular. Therefore stories of racketeers and the World War combined are doubly popular.

It sounds plausible, but it doesn't work out. "Born Reckless," starring Edlund Lowe at the Majestic this week, is commendable as a satire on various current film stories, but we

'I'll Tell Yeh,' Says the Newsie, 'Cy's a Keen Guy'

"Extra — extra — papee—Leland wins again!" A newsboy was hollering from the street corner.

A man eating pop-corn from a paper bag turned to his neighbor and inquired, "Who is this fellow Leland?"

The neighbor grinned and started to answer, but his words were taken from his mouth by the newsie.

"Say, don't you know who Cy Leland is?" the lad questioned with a look of pity on his small dirty face.

"Well, I'll tell yeh. Cy's a keen guy he is; he's a big football player, and a fast runner and when he wins I sell lots of papers. Oh! I almost forgot, I gotta get to work; wanna papee mister?"

The enlightened "mister" did and was heard to remark, "Keen guy," as he mounted the street car, paper in hand.

And to the newsies, Leland is another one of their many "keen guys," ranked with such personalities as Lindbergh, Hoover, Jake Atz and Frank Norris—all with names that mean instant sales of their papers.

Students' Ideals Are Intelligent

Youths and Good Looking Girls

In a boy it's intelligence; in a girl it's good looks. This, at least, is the opinion of T. C. U. students who were questioned as to their ideals in the opposite sex.

"My ideal must be bright in psychic powers," said Miss Margery Dale Grammar. "He must be neat in personal appearance and have lovely manners. And know what to do on every occasion. Above all, he must be a one-woman man."

Miss Maxine Russell would like for her ideal to be able to answer to the following adjectives: courageous, no-mad, urbane, attentive, reliable, appreciative, ardent, sophisticated, scrupulous, and philosophic.

"He must be a tall brunet with a lot of common sense," said Miss Susan Callaway. "He must not be tight, but should be willing to show me a good time. And he must not be too conceited."

Miss Elizabeth Newsom said that her ideal man must be highly intelligent, have a sense of humor, and not consider himself superior to girls.

"It is essential that he have technique in love-making," she said.

The boys chorused the desire for a modern girl. Victor Robertson and Elbert Lavender coincided in their descriptions. "She must have a sweet disposition," they said. "She must be beautiful, intelligent and have a sense of humor. She should be very modern, but not frivolous. Her weight should be 115 pounds and her height 5 feet 4 inches. She must dress well, and her figure must be perfect."

"My ideal girl would be very modern, with intelligence and good looks," said Buck Barr. "I would want her to be trusting and to have confidence in me."

Cy Runs Century In 8.4 Beating Paddock's Record

Physics Department Is Recorder of Dash By Apparatus.

BOUNDARY TAPES USED

Electrically Timed Device Is Set Up By Prof. Sanders and Brant Conway.

Using an electric timing device and getting a flying start Cy Leland, T. C. U. speed ace, ran the 100 Tuesday afternoon in 8.4 before a small group of men from the physics department who had devised the electric timer. Charles Paddock, the champion, ran the century in 8.9 seconds with a flying start.

Working in association with Prof. C. J. Saunders, head of the physics department, Brant Conway, student assistant, set up the apparatus for his experiment.

"It is a known fact," said Conway, "that judges in speed events usually differ and it is necessary in the majority of cases to average the total time. This difference in time totals is brought about by the different rates of speed that the human mechanism responds to an impulse such as the firing of the starter's gun in an event of this kind. With the electric timer practically no measurable time elapses between the time of the start and that when the mechanism is set in motion."

At present the device necessitates the runner making a flying start and at the start of the mapped course a silk thread is run through. This pull on the thread causes a piece of celluloid to be drawn between two electrical contacts and the closing of the contact sets a device known as a Reaction Time Device to clocking the time like a stop watch. This machine has previously been synchronized in a dark room by means of the rays from a neon tube.

The difference in time caught by the electrical device and the stop watch is estimated at about three seconds. Mack "Boss" Clark, track coach, caught Cy at 8.7 with his stop watch.
