

TCU THIS WEEK

EVENTS AND INFORMATION FOR THE TCU COMMUNITY

VOL. 7 NO. 7

OCTOBER 8, 2001

Four Nobel Peace Prize Laureates will speak in Ed Landreth Thursday night

TCU WILL HOST A FREE INTERNATIONAL forum Thursday featuring four former Nobel Peace Prize winners from North, Central and South America. The event, held in conjunction with the American Airlines Leadership for the Americas program on campus this week, will be called "An Evening with the Nobels - Peace Prize Laureates from the Americas." It is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in Ed Landreth Auditorium. Moderator is former Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives Jim Wright.

Nobel Laureates will include Oscar Arias, former president of Costa Rica; Jody Williams, known internationally for her work banning landmines; Adolfo Perez Esquivel, recognized for his campaigns against Latin American military regimes and Norman Borlaug, a leader of Central America's "Green Revolution."

"We at TCU are very excited to host the evening with the Nobel Laureates in conjunction with the annual Leadership Program, bringing together present and future leaders of the Americas and, indeed, the global community," said Larry Adams, associate provost for academic affairs.

The American Airlines Leadership for the Americas program is a week-long "think tank" for students from 11 universities in North, Central and South America. Launched in 1999, it brings together the most talented collegiate minds across the Western Hemisphere to share ideas and discuss common issues. Students communicate via the Internet during the year and meet for one week at a participating campus to interact with each other and international figures.

CTAEC offering seminars to help managers refocus in aftermath of terrorism

CHARLES TANDY AMERICAN ENTERPRISE Center will hold two free seminars Thursday and Friday for professionals who want practical advice on how to channel emotions and refocus on work following the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. The seminars, which will be held from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in CTAEC's Tandy Hall conference room, also will give professionals tools to prepare for other possible work or emotional disruptions that could occur as a result of imminent U.S. military strikes.

Diana Newbern and Don Dansereau (psychology) will be facilitators, along with two professionals affiliated with CTAEC's Global Alliance Network, an organization of professionals who develop and implement many of CTAEC's course offerings. Space for the seminars, entitled "Building a New Foundation: From Chaos to Control," is limited to the first 50 respondents.

Both sessions will include such topics as the use of imagery to relieve stress, tips for managers on boosting employee productivity while acknowledging emotional stress and providing an outlet, and reaffirming those things most important in life like family, friends and faith.

"Part of CTAEC's mission statement is to represent and reflect American enterprise in all of its glory and challenge," said William Bigler, executive director of CTAEC and organizer of the seminars. "This small contribution allows us to show our support of businesses in the community as well as the spirit of American enterprise that the terrorists attempted to destroy.

(DeGeneres from front)

A native of New Orleans, Mrs. DeGeneres currently lives in Los Angeles. She was educated and employed as a speech pathologist and speech therapist, although she has shared in her daughter's show business limelight through appearances on commercials and Ellen's television show. She has spoken throughout the country to promote honesty about being gay or having a gay family member and supporting equal rights for gay people.

"As long as our gay sons and daughters face discrimination and are excluded from the basic protection of our laws, I will urge all American families to come out for fairness," says Mrs. DeGeneres.

Depression Screening Day comes to campus Thursday

IN CONJUNCTION WITH NATIONAL Depression Screening Day (NDS), TCU's Counseling Center and Mental Health Services will offer free, anonymous depression screenings from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday at the Health Center. The screenings fall exactly one month after the terrorist attacks and at a time when signs of severe depression from initial traumatic events may begin to emerge.

The 10- to 15-minute depression screenings will consist of a written survey and one-on-one visits with licensed clinicians to determine the participants' level of depression. Information and referrals to counselors will be given to participants whose symptoms are consistent with depression, manic-depression, grief or post-traumatic stress disorder.

"Given the events of Sept. 11 we felt it was important to really promote this service to the faculty, staff and students," said Monica Kintigh. "Now that a month has passed, people will be entering different stages of grief and anger and may be

Harris School of Nursing has new director

DR. PAULETTE BURNS, FORMER associate professor and coordinator for the graduate program at the University of Oklahoma, Schusterman Health Sciences Center, has been hired as the new director of TCU's Harris School of Nursing. Burns assumed her duties at TCU in August.

As director of the Harris School of Nursing, Burns plans to recruit and retain an adequate number of students to meet healthcare needs and increase graduate study opportunities for professional nurses. In addition, she hopes to contribute to the nursing industry by providing access to results of valuable research projects conducted by both faculty and students and by offering teaching seminars for professional nurses.

Burns, who obtained her Ph.D. in nursing at Texas Women's University, has conducted vast studies on infant mortality rates and smaller research projects on the impact of cigarette smoking in Native American women in relation to pregnancy.

She has received numerous teaching awards, most recently the Excellence in Nursing Education Award from Mu Iota Chapter of Sigma Theta Tau International in 1999.
