Chancellor's "welcome back" e-mail highlights happenings for the new academic year

IN A LETTER E-MAILED CAMPUSWIDE THIS morning, Chancellor Victor J. Boschini Jr. provided a summary of all that's new and special for TCU during the coming year.

More than $150 million of construction is under way or will be completed in 2007 — all in addition to the $300 million investment in the campus in recent years:

■ College of Education faculty and students begin the semester in the wonderful new J.E. and L.E. Mabee Foundation Education Complex which incorporates the new Betsy and Steve Palko Hall with the totally renovated Bailey Bldg.

■ Students have moved into the Amon G. Carter and the Kellye Wright Samuelson residence halls, and the Teresa and Luther King and the Mary and Robert J. Wright residence halls are scheduled to open for the spring semester.

■ Work on the Brown-Lupton University Union is on target for a summer 2008 completion.

■ Construction is under way on the 34,000-square-foot TCU Barnes & Noble Bookstore, scheduled to open this spring.

■ The Horned Frog football team is breaking in the new Sam Baugh Indoor Practice Facility & Cox Field in preparation for the first game with Baylor on Sept. 1.

■ The new Teresa and Luther King Entrance, which occupies the southwest corner of S. University Drive and W. Cantey Street provides another defining entry for the campus.

Over the last three years, 59 new faculty and instructional positions have been added, including 20 this year.

The freshman class, chosen from nearly 12,000 applicants, boasts record SAT scores (32 points higher than last year), more males (41 percent of the class) and more students of color (a record 18 percent).

The universitywide theme for the fall is "Rights, Responsibilities and Respect - This Semester Has Been Rated R." Launched during orientation with a common reading of the Bill of Rights and related materials, the theme semester is designed to encourage dialogue, understanding and respect for others.

The Campaign for TCU is making remarkable progress toward the April public phase kickoff. Last spring, the faculty-staff campaign brought record support of $302,164, boosting the campaign total and providing a sterling example for our alumni and other friends. As of June 30, $117.9 million had been committed toward the working campaign goal of $250 million. That's a remarkable 47 percent of the goal raised with only 30 percent of the campaign time elapsed. Among the high-priority initiatives are scholarships and support for academic programs and faculty. ◆

Margaret Kelly receives the Chancellor's Staff Award at luncheon Friday

MARGARET KELLY (executive director of community projects, marketing & communications) was named the winner of this year's Chancellor's Staff Award at the Opening Luncheon Friday in Daniel-Meyer Coliseum. Chancellor Victor J. Boschini Jr. made the presentation.

This annual honor, originated in 2002, affirms the important contributions that staff make to the mission and vision of the University.

Margaret Kelly is well-known as an exceptional event planner, with scores of dinners, lectures and groundbreakings to her credit each year. In 2007, a long list of new off-campus responsibilities came her way which serve to make her the face of TCU for many organizations in the community which now also rely on her expertise. These include the Edna Gladney Center, the World Affairs Council, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, the Fort Worth Convention and Visitors Bureau and the Kupferle Health Board.

On campus, she continues to enhance our brand and the TCU experience for all. She knows her field and is a master at getting people to work together to create an outstanding environment for our students, prospective students, parents, faculty and staff.

Margaret has said, "What I most enjoy about my role at TCU is working with so many different departments and people to create special events for the University. I am proud to be a part of such a caring, professional group of people who work together to make TCU strong and vibrant. My 10 years at the University have been filled with many exciting challenges. I am also very proud that both of my two children had a great experience as TCU students and are now successful graduates who value being members of the TCU community too."

A photo portrait of Margaret will soon join the gallery display of Chancellor's Staff Award winners outside the Wright Boardroom on the third floor of Sadler Hall. ◆

Theatre TCU taking part in national play festival which spends a week on campus

THEATRE TCU, ALONG WITH SEVERAL OTHER North Texas theatrical companies, has signed on to be part of Pulitzer Prize-winning writer Suzan-Lori Parks' ambitious project titled 365 Days/365 Plays.

Beginning on Nov. 13, 2002, Parks wrote a short play every day for a year, taking inspiration from daily observations, conversations and random thoughts. On Nov. 13, 2006, groups around the country began staging the plays with each theater taking on a week's worth (seven unique ones plus three "constants" that every group does). TCU's piece of the novel project takes place during "Week 44" set for Sept. 10-16 in Buschman Theatre.

You can catch the student performances at 5:30 p.m. Sept. 10-14 and 12:30 p.m. Sept. 15-16. Admission is free. ♦
