Amidst all the splender and pageantry of the wedding, one honored old custom that is observed at Italian private weddings also was observed at Wednesday's nuptial—the distribution to the guests of little whitecoated candies. Red liveried servants stood on the staircase with immense canisters of the candies and gave a scoopful to each guest after the ceremony. The candies are supposed to have the same happy effect as the American custom of distributing the wedding cake. wedding cake.

Princess Marie Jose, with her father, King Albert, at her right, was the first of the royal party to enter the chapel. Then came King Victor Emanuel with Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, followed by Prince Humbert with his mother, Queen Helena.

Emanue with Queen Helena.

After the wedding Princes Marie Jose with Prince Humbert at her right was the first to leave, followed by King Victor Emmanuel with the Queen of the Belgians and King Albert with Queen Helena. The wedding procession passed first through an anteroom filled with palace servants and then into the great hall of the royal guard where were the Roman aristocracy, the diplomatic secretaries, attaches and their wives, numbering about a thousand. This hall communicated with the chapel and the ceremony could be seen through an open door.

Premier Mussolini was in the wedding procession and during the ceremony took a position to the right of the altar with Marshal Petain of France and the Italian military chiefs. The royal party was at the left of the altar.

Although the wedding ceremony was completed at 10:40 o'clock Wednesday morning it was not until shortly after 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon that the royal couple were able to get away to a belated wedding breakfast. The audience with the pope lasted for half an hour and subsequently the prince and his bride called upon Cardinal Gasparri, the papal secretary of state, and visited St. Peter's where they prayed at the tomb of the aposites.

Cardinal Gasparri, accompanied by the papal nuncio to Italy, Monsignor Borgongini Duca, returned the visit in behalf of the pontiff.

MRS. HOOVER'S SEVERE

COLD KEEPS HER INSIDE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8. — Mrs. Hoover Wednesday remained indoors at the White House because of a severe cold from which she has been suffering for two weeks.

Tuesday night she did not accompany the President to the dinner given by Vice President Curtis or to the reception at the Woman's Congressional Club.

It was said at the White House Wednesday that it was problematical tenance if he had not sufficient means.
(His father, King Victor, is reputed to be the richest man in all Italy).
The nuptial mass was celebrated "according to royal prerogative."
After reading of the Gospel, the celebrant offered the missal to the King of Italy, who kissed it and returned it.

Wednesday that it was problematical whether Mrs. Hoover would attend the reception to the judiciary Thurs-
