SUGAR BOWL

FORT WORTH LIONS CLUB

Fourteenth Annual

FROG DAY

LUNCHEON, Tuesday, December 17, 1935

L. R. MEYER

Head Coach

The man whose genius, strategy, patience, and love for the boys has meant more than anything else in bringing the Frogs to the front.

STRATEGY MAP

END ZONE

Don't let any one get past you here. If they come down open, shake hands with them. Go in and sit down at a table.

DANGER ZONE

Gotta be careful here. No tricky stuff. Use straight fork play only. Watch that cocktail slipping down the vest. Get a pun off on first or second down to relieve the pressure.

RESTRICTED ZONE

Open up a notch here. Don't get too involved. Don't pass up anything. On defensive, watch that chicken wing-back slipping off the end of the plate.

OFFENSIVE ZONE

Feel out the opposition. See if there is a weakness down the middle .Use bread for power plunges. Quick-kick the stuffing out of them.

SCORING ZONE

Pour it to 'em, strong and black. Sugar, but no cream. Three men deep pass should be gravy. Spin off-tackle yarns and block clean. If forced to kick, kick to head waiter in the corner.

ZONE OF GREATEST RESISTANCE

Everything is crowded into small area, but ice cream should knock 'em cold (even if they're expecting it). Try to get it over as soon as possible, so you can enjoy your indigestion while the stands say speeches.

END ZONE

This is where you've been trying to get. Now grab an elevator for Main St.

JIMMY LAWRENCE Sub-Captain

Critics raved about his powerful running. He doubled the effectiveness of the T. C. U. attack.

ALL AMERICAN

SAM BAUGH

The greatest passer in football, and a whale of an all around player. He'll be back in '36.

At the end of each football season, each sports writer retires into a corner and re-reads the mass of mis-information he has written during the fall. He eventually comes forth and, either apologetically or grandiosley, proffers his list of the best players at each position for the dying season. As a usual thing, his selections are wrong and the whole thing must be taken with several pounds of the very best available salt. Nevertheless, they reflect a great deal of ability and a lot of glory, so we were proud to see so many Frogs named or nearly named. No one could agree on which ones, so, in all, the whole team was mentioned.

Lester, of course, was almost unanimous. Sam Baugh, "the greatest passer in the world," was named on most and apologized on the rest. In fact, we got to skipping center and quarterback and seeing what other Frogs were named. While one fellow put Harrison as his first reserve guard, another said Kellow was just about the best. Groesclose had his elbow in several sports writers' eyes. And every one was trying to figure out how three All-American ends could be on one squad. Roach, Meyers and Walls all made different All-Conference teams and got national recognition. (And if you don't think Needham is good, just ask him.) Squarehead Lawrence, "the hardest running back in the country," had every one, including the pickers, wondering why he wasn't chosen on more teams, while Manton set the coast critics on their ear with his ball handling on the spins.

We'd like to suggest our band for some "all" honors. They're tops, from Prof. Sammis, the highstepping Weldon Allen, Director Gon Gillis, right on down to—well, we don't want to mention Wheeler's name.
