Dear Mr. Carter:

Under separate cover I am sending you a copy of the weekly publication of the Houston Chamber of Commerce, describing the formation of the Air Power Club of Houston. There is also a copy of editorial comment from the Houston Post.

I wrote you on February 28 regarding the formation of a state advisory council for the Air Power Clubs of Texas.

In the meantime, contacts have been made and active committees formed for promoting Air Power Clubs in Dallas, Houston, Beaumont and Port Arthur. We are working on an active program that will benefit the individual communities and at the same time build an intelligent, state-wide aviation program.

Where ever we make contacts and explain the program, there is unanimous agreement that it is the most important phase of civic development that can be considered, and that this is the most opportune time to expand the program. In it we must combine the efforts of all aviation organizations.

I realize that your time is in great demand and that it is limited. But if you can spare some time to consider the program of the Air Power Clubs and give us your advice and council, it will be deeply appreciated. I will appreciate an opportunity to visit you in Fort Worth.

Sincerely,

Benjamin F. Blanton
