

Schaefer Attends Fete For 'Lucky Lady' Crew

J. E. Schaefer represented the Boeing Company at a dinner given in Fort Worth, Tex., last Thursday evening in honor of Capt. James Gallagher and his crew of the round-the-world Boeing B-50 Superfortress Lucky Lady II.

The dinner, attended by some 400 persons, was sponsored by the Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce with Col. Amon G. Carter, publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, as the official host. Included among the high Air Force officers present were Lt. Gen. Curtis LeMay, commanding general of the Strategic Air Command, and Maj. Gen. Roger Ramey, commanding general of the Eighth Air Force.

Mr. Schaefer attended as the Company representative at the request of President William M. Allen who was unable to make the trip. On his return, the Boeing-Wichita general manager said he had found the AF leaders and B-50 crew members to be extremely enthusiastic in their praise of Boeing design and Boeing workmanship.
