Three-Mile Limit
Urged For Building
In Airport Sections

Fort Worth, July 20 (P). — A commission named by the Amon G. Carter airport zoning board will recommend the banning of any structures that might interfere with flying within three miles of the center runway, members said today.

The commission defined the hazard area at a meeting as extending in three miles in any direction from the center runway. Towering structures, bright lights that might blind pilots and equipment which might cause radio interference could be prohibited in the area.
