WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (UP)—
A Fort Worth publisher has received the Air Force Exceptional Service Award for what is called his "constant advocacy of the air power."

Publisher Amon G. Carter of the Star-Telegram was presented the award in a ceremony attended by high military and government officials.

A citation accompanying the award had this to say about Carter: "Throughout a most distinguished career which has encompassed outstanding national service during two world wars, he also has — championed the cause of the — Air Force."
