Eisenhower's 'Living' Museum Will Be Used to Spread Gospel of Democracy

BY MARVIN H. CREAGER.

WICHITA, KANSAS—"I was just a poor boy from the other side of the railroad tracks at Abilene, Kansas. It was not too public at West Point. Everything was happening in the other country. I am going to dedicate the rest of my life to helping people understand the things that they have here.

Getting the word out— "The Eisenhower, who led the Western Allies on D-Day, has seen much of the world, and with Eisenhower home in Abilene, the museum on the site of the old Eisenhower home is to be a place for frills. It is to be a place for the people of Kansas, not to commemorate Eisenhower, but to work for them as an inspiration to young people everywhere.

Plans are changed. The plan had been to build an entire structure designed to hold safe the priceless and significant Eisenhower trophies and the whole world's admiration of the Eisenhower. The old "cow town" of Abilene where Wild Bill Hickok, as the first of the great gunslingers, felt his plan will work, and so

KANSAS IMPRESSED. The gospel of democracy impresses the hardheaded business men of Wichita enough so that they have pledged to raise $1,000,000 of Eisenhower's son, in the searching sun of the plains.
