

Always Neat, Never Flashy

Eisenhower Best Dressed American, Clothiers Say

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 (AP).—General Eisenhower is the best dressed man in America—in or out of uniform—a clothiers group declared Thursday.

That was the consensus at the 33rd annual convention of the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers, President Robert B. Underwood, of Richmond, Va., said.

The convention's list of the "ten best dressed men in America" also included.

Comedian Bob Hope.
New York City Police Commissioner Thomas F. Murphy.
Ed Herlihy, radio and television master of ceremonies.

Phil Rizzutto, of the New York baseball Yankees.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, wealthy sportsman.

Dan Seymour, television producer and master of ceremonies.

Actor Gregory Peck.

Edward Fields, carpet manufacturer.

Comedian Jan Murray.

Eisenhower, the announcement said, was chosen for his "typical American look — always neat, never flashy." He received more first places than all the other candidates for honors combined.

Bob Hope scored with "his outstanding combinations of suits, shirts and ties."

Rizzutto "is the outstanding dresser in the sporting world, looking well dressed even when sliding into second base."

Peck was chosen "for his superb amalgamation of the Eastern and Western style trends."

Civilian Shoe Supply Ample, Executive Says

A shortage of civilian shoes is not expected for the "foreseeable future," a nationally-known shoe manufacturing executive said here Wednesday.

Ample production despite "critical short materials" was predicted by Neill P. Overman, president of the Johnston & Murphy Company, Newark, N. J.

If a shortage does come, it will be because of manpower and material shortages in the industry, not for lack of production facilities, said Overman, here for a one-day visit at the John L. Ashe store.
