

Fort Worth Visitor's $50,000 Bail Is 'Taken Care of'

Writ Granted in Attack Case

Criminal District Judge McGregor Friday granted a writ of habeas Corpus on the application of attorneys for Oscar Burton Wolfe, 44, and set a hearing for 10 a. m. Thursday on the question of permitting bond on a charge of criminal assault.

The delay in the hearing was caused by the fact that Mrs. Opal Allen, 31, victim of the attack in which Wolfe is charged, will be unable to leave her hospital bed to testify before Thursday.

Judge McGregor also explained that a contested case hearing could not be held Saturday because that is the last day of the present term of court, and the necessary papers could not be prepared in time.

The writ was granted at a hearing in chambers at which Garland Flowers represented Wolfe and Assistant District Attorneys Moses and Brown represented the State.

Moses said the State will not agree that the charge is a bondable case, indicating that the death penalty may be sought.

Bonds of $2,500 each have been set in cases of assault to murder and robbery, also filed against Wolfe in connection with the attack on Mrs. Allen Tuesday night.

Prince Obolensky Killed

LONDON, March 29 (AP).—Prince Alexander Obolensky, 24, Russian-born British subject and an international Rugby football star, was killed in a plane accident at a Royal Airforce airdrome. The prince was a pilot officer in the R. A. F.

Henry R. Luce, editor and publisher of Time, arrived in Fort Worth late Friday and immediately was served with a warrant charging him with "looseness with time, life and fortune," and his bail was set at $50,000, which Amon Carter said he "would take care of." New York Publisher Here to See What Texas Is Like

In Texas to see for himself the State of which he has heard so much, Henry R. Luce of New York, editor and publisher of Time, arrived in Fort Worth late Friday.

He also is editor of Life magazine, an editor of Fortune, and a publisher of both.

"I've been sending people to Texas for 10 years," Luce said, "and they all came back telling me it was the greatest State in the world. But they didn't tell me enough."

The noted editor already has visited San Antonio, Austin and Houston, and will stop at Dallas and Amarillo Saturday before returning to New York.

"The most striking thing I've noticed about Texas," he said, "is its contrast with the rest of the country. Down here you are alive, progressive, building and going forward. The rest of the country is stagnant."

Luce said he was surprised to find some Texans who imagined that they had troubles and problems.

"As far as I can see," he declared, "you don't have any troubles here."

While in Austin this week Luce called on Governor O'Daniel who impressed him, he said, as being "a very serious minded fellow with the weight of the world on his shoulders."

Luce declined to discuss national politics, saying that he was "taking in, and not putting out." He recalled, however, that Time was the first national periodical to recognize Vice President Garner as a major presidential possibility in 1940.

Luce is accompanied on his trip by his 15-year-old son, Henry R. Luce III; Brantz Mayor of his New York staff, and Holland McCombs of San Antonio, Texas correspondent of Time, Life and Fortune.

Arriving by plane from Houston, they were met at the airport by Amon Carter and Chief of Police Howard, who served Luce with a warrant charging him with "looseness with time, life and fortune." His bail was set at $50,000, which Carter said he "would take care of," after the visitors had been bundled into the police patrol.

The visitors were guests of Carter at Shady Oak Farm Friday night.

Display of Flag Urged

AUSTIN, March 29 (AP).—Display of the flag on Army Day, April 6, was recommended by Governor O'Daniel Friday. In a proclamation the Governor urged observance of the day, pointing out the Army had served the States and Nation in times of peace as well as war.

City to Invite WPA Checkup

The City Council in private session Friday took inventory of progress on street improvement programs and decided to invite a representative of the Works Progress Administration to come to Fort Worth next week to inspect proposed WPA paving projects.

The problems were those of pre-vailling upon the State Highway Commission to widen and repave Hemphill Street from Magnolia Avenue to Biddison Street, and resurface portions of 53-miles of streets where street car tracks have been removed.

City officials expressed confidence that a WPA engineer would arrive from the San Antonio state office to inspect not only the proposed cartrack paving projects but also a project, covering six miles of streets, which is awaiting approval in San Antonio.

WPA officials have hinted that some of the paving work in connection with car track removal may not be eligible for work projects aid.

City Manager Bothwell reported to the council on the status of the cartrack paving deal and discussed the brief which will be filed with the highway commission on behalf of the Hemphill project.

Bothwell said that property owners were invited to become sponsors of WPA paving projects on any street that needs improving. The manager said the city would agree to the contract plan of paving, under which the property owners would have longer time in which to pay their share of the cost.

While the city prepared to press its claim for Hemphill Street aid,
