Lord Rothermere, PERSONAL,
Daily Mail,
London, England.

My dear Lord Rothermere:

The first thing on my return to the office, after about ten days illness at home, is to hasten an acknowledgement of your very delightful letter of February 17th, also to acknowledge receipt of an extremely handsome silver cup carrying inscribed thereon the names of yourself and your party who visited in Fort Worth last January. This remembrance is exceedingly generous of you and your associates and it is impossible for me to adequately express to all of you my sincere appreciation.

The silver cup is now adorning the sideboard at Shady Oak Farm and is a constant reminder of your delightful visit and the envy of all of my friends. Your letter, commenting on your 15,000 miles in seventy days and your statement to the effect that you had found yourself thinking mostly of Fort Worth, has naturally made me very happy and I shall place the letter in my scrap book as a reminder of a most delightful day.

Please express my personal thanks to all of your associates.

Assuring you of my sincere appreciation of both the letter as well as the silver cup, and with the hope that sometime in the future we will have the pleasure of having you with us again, I remain, with best wishes,

Most sincerely,
