Clipper Airplane Reaches Honolulu; Everything Fine

HONOLULU, Oct. 15—The Phillipine Clipper, carrying Juan Trippe, president of the Pan-american Airways, and a party of friends on a "pre-view" flight across the Pacific, arrived here Thursday at 6:18 a. m. local time (10:48 a. m. Central standard time), from Alameda, Calif.

Included in Trippe's guest party are United States Senator William G. McAdoo, Amon Carter, Fort Worth, Roy W. Howard of New York, C. V. Whitney, director of Pan-American; Paul Patterson, Baltimore publisher, and Wallace Alexander, San Francisco shipping magnate.

Several others, including Mrs. Trippe, Mrs. McAdoo and Mrs. Whitney, Edward Swasey, newspaper executive and James Stahlman, publisher of Nashville, Tenn., will join the "pre-view" passenger party aboard the Philippine Clipper at Honolulu and continue on to Manila.

All flights are preliminary to the establishment of commercial passenger service beginning Oct. 21.

The Hawaiian Clipper, Pan-American officials said, made the 1,506-mile hop from Guam to Wake against headwinds in about "average time."

R. B. Elkins globe-girdling New York World-Telegram reporter, who is far ahead of two competitors in a race to New York, is traveling on the Hawaiian Clipper.

The China Clipper, which left here last week on the first preliminary passenger flight, was forced back to Gaum Thursday after attempting to dodge two newly formed typhoons between the island and Manila. She was in the air five hours and 20 minutes.
