Amon Carter, Jr., Missing.

FORT WORTH, March 11.—(P)—The adjutant general’s office in Washington today notified Amon Carter, publisher of the Star-Telegram that his son, Amon, Jr., an artillery officer, has been missing in the North African action area since Feb. 14.

He was twenty-three years old last December, a graduate of Culver Military Academy, left the University of Texas in 1941 to enter the artillery and was assigned to Fort Knox. He had been a reserve officer. Before going to Africa, he had been in North Ireland and England.
