Dear Amon:

I have been thinking of you this past several days and wondering how I could possibly write you as, I suppose for the first time in my life, words failed me.

I saw C. R. Smith in Washington Saturday and Ralph Damon here today, and heard that you had had more encouraging news about which I am more glad than I can express.

If there is anything in God's world that I can possibly do, you have only to command me.

Do please keep up the magnificent courage and faith that have always been a part of you, and I say this knowing just how you feel.

With every good wish I can think of, please believe me

*As ever,
Victor.*
