Dear Mr. Carter:

Since the brief notice concerning your son appeared in the paper the other day thoughts of him and of you have been continually in my mind. This letter is to express my sympathy in the anguish I know you suffer, and the reasonable hope that forthcoming news may be of an encouraging nature.

I know from bitter experience that in circumstances of this kind little that anyone can say is of any real comfort. I do feel, however, that our boys who are going into this conflict do so with an attitude of mind that those of us who are older find it impossible to recapture. What we see as sacrifice and hardship is to them opportunity and adventure.

Your boy is a fine, upstanding young man. All that I have ever heard of him has been admirable. His ingenuity and sturdy pioneer Texas stock, as well as the life time example set for him by his father, will I am sure stand him in good stead, and will, I trust, bring him through whatever ordeal may fall to his lot.

Sincerest regards,

Gayle Scott
