$1,250,000 STEWARDESS COLLEGE IS LUXURIOUS

BY LLOYD STEEDMAN

The American Airlines Photographic Institute is now ready to open its doors to the public. The college, located in the heart of downtown Dallas, offers an array of courses designed to prepare students for careers in the booming airline industry.

The college's facilities are state-of-the-art, featuring modern classrooms, state-of-the-art equipment, and a variety of hands-on learning opportunities. Students will have access to the latest technology and software, ensuring they are prepared for the demands of the industry.

LAUNDRY—Two Fort Worth stewardees toured the college prior to its dedication. Miss Helen Ruzenni, left, a graduate of the Fort Worth College of Stewardesses, and Miss Helen Ruzenni of Chicago, admit the beauty of the new college.

A SPECIAL GIFT OFFER FOR YOUNG READERS

A Jolly Santa pattern that can be made up at a cost of five cents can be found in this issue. The pattern is designed for children aged 5 to 8.

LAUNDROMAT—The new college has a full-service laundromat that is available to students and faculty. The laundromat features contemporary equipment and a comfortable seating area.

WEATHER BEATER—Miss Mavis Balog, a stewardess at American Airlines, has developed a unique solution to keep her clothes dry. She has created a waterproof coat that can be worn in heavy rain or during snowy conditions.

WALKIN' CLOSETS—Miss Helen Ruzenni started one of the most innovative closet systems in the industry. The system features adjustable shelves and a rotating hanger system, allowing for easy access to clothing items.

The college offers a variety of courses, including stewardess training, aircraft maintenance, and ground operations. Students will have the opportunity to work with industry professionals and gain hands-on experience.

The American Airlines Photographic Institute is located at 123 Main Street, Downtown Dallas. For more information, please visit www.americanairlines.com/photographicinstitute.
Air Stewardess College Previewed by Directors

The new air stewardess college at San Francisco, Calif., which is being opened by the National Air Transport, was previewed by a delegation of the federation of American Airlines on Wednesday. The college, which is to be operated by the federation, will have a capacity of 100 students and will be located in the center of the city. The college will be open to women who have completed a high school education and who are willing to devote their time to the study of air travel. The courses will be taught by experienced air travel agents and will cover the fundamentals of air travel, including the history of air travel, the geography of the world, and the laws and regulations governing air travel. The college will also offer special courses in air travel, such as a course in air travel for business executives. The college will be open to women of all ages and will be open both day and night. The college will be located in a newly constructed building on the campus of the San Francisco College of Commerce. Rayburn Warns That Service, Bickering
Endangers Nation

American airline officials must quit ‘bickering’ if we are to continue the American way of life, House Speaker Rayburn declared Thursday in a dedicatory address at American Airlines’ new $20,000 airfield college near Amon Carter Field.

A strong hand must take hold and say ‘This is the program,’ he said. ‘We must have unity, co-operation, good will and good feeling in the U.S.A. among all people.’

‘This civilization is worth saving. This country we know and love must not be extinguished. It will take every patriotic man, woman and child to preserve, protect and perpetuate this freedom.’

Rayburn said he wouldn’t be honest if he didn’t say that the Christian civilization ‘we know and love stands in greater danger today that we have ever known. There is a kind of peace, but less good will than there ever has been in a time when anyone now living can remember.’

He declared that the minds of men have created ‘agencies of destruction’ which if turned loose on earth might be the undoing of civilization.

‘This is no time for complacency, no time to say everything is all right—because everything is not all right,’ he said.

‘The world is in danger—our civilization faces danger and let nobody tell you they are not,’ he warned.

Rayburn paid tribute to the late Amon Carter as ‘one of the greatest and most serviceable men this country has ever known.

Other speakers included Maybrick McNair and Thornton of Fort Worth and Dallas, respectively.

C. R. Smith, president of American Airlines, said the ceremonies made him memoraible day for American Airlines.

Before the dedication a moment to the Kiwanis Club, a group of former stewdresses, was unrolled.

Fifty-five students arrived from Chicago to become the first wardles in the college.

After the ceremony directors and officers of American viewed the Convair B-36 and 100-member. Thursday night they attended a barbecue at shady Oaks by the American Airlines employees for Amon Carter Jr., a director of the airline.
