It's Not Too Late
For A Winter Holiday
In Europe

This year, why not do something really special for the winter holidays - why not spend them in Europe? It's not too late to make your plans, if you go American.

It'll be the kind of vacation you probably haven't had in a long, long time. Think of spending Christmas on the Continent, for instance, or taking in the Winter Olympics in Switzerland. Or perhaps your idea of the perfect vacation is to soak in the sun on the French Riviera or in Italy for a few restful weeks.

Whatever your holiday ideas may be, you needn't put them off any longer - if you start making your Flagship reservations right now. American's 4-engine beauties cut transatlantic travel time from four and a half days or more to less than a day each way. That means more than an extra week for your vacation pleasure.

You'll find, too, that crossing the Atlantic by Flagship is the smoothest kind of travel there is. For in any season - especially winter - over-water flying is smoother than cross-country flying because there are fewer rising air currents--ocean roughness has no effect on the upper air. Add the comforts and conveniences that are yours as soon as you step aboard a Flagship - and you have transatlantic travel at its luxurious best.

Incidentally, if you've had the idea that there's a good deal of fuss and bother connected with reservations for international travel, we'd like to point out right here that - wherever you are - your nearest airport is a departure point for overseas flight via American Airlines. And once you're across, four Flagship ports - Shannon, London, Amsterdam, and Stockholm - give you excellent connections for direct air service to all Europe.

So, if you've been considering a trip to Europe in the near future, we suggest you stop in at your travel agent's or your nearest American Airlines' ticket office now to discuss arrangements. We think you'll be pleasantly surprised to discover how easy it is to have a European holiday this winter.

Sincerely yours,
