Publisher Refuses
To Quit Under Fire

FT. WORTH—Amon G. Carter, publisher of the Record and Telegram here, will not resign from the board of directors of the West Texas Technological college, as requested by Gov. Ferguson.

In a lengthy statement issued today he denied the governor's charge that he violated the prohibition law.

He declared he would resign only if demands for such action come from the public or other members of the board.

He asserted the governor's charges were made in an effort "to divert attention from the highway expenditure situation."
