Got His Deserts.

That Fort Worth newspaper man who was put off the athletic field of the A. & M. College during the big game simply got his deserts. His hurrahs for Moody in the presence of the governor of Texas were insulting. Regardless of what is thought of her, she is the chief executive of Texas, and as such is entitled to consideration and respect due the high office. The publisher who so forgot himself as to try to insult the governor by his invidious remarks is not a credit to the press of the state, none of which can approve of his acts. And this is no brief for Mrs. Ferguson, either.—Terrell Tribune.
