Dear Addison

I am just going to write a few lines to remind you that you have been gone nearly three weeks, you have written home three times, one letter and two cards. I wish you had left Jessy at home, maybe you would find a little time to write. I think you had better make an announcement in the preacher that you haven't time to write to your family, this will save me the trouble of scribbling to the office these long hot days, only to be disappointed. It is not very pleasant to have persons ask me, when did you have a letter from brother Addison; to tell them I have only received one letter since he left. The children are all well, there is some sickness around several cases of Flu. Dr. West and wife, Mr. South, and sister Douglas has been quite sick for several days.

Jesse is very puny, I fear he will be completely worn out before school classes.

Those things we sent to New York for have not come yet - perhaps you had better to them about it.

I will not trouble with any thing more

Affectionately
Sallie
