

Ruell Texas

May 7, 1945.

Dear Mrs Carter:—

I wish to celebrate with you as mother
of fine Bop on Mother's Day. in my heart. I have just read in my paper of your son Amos for meeting his Dad after being liberated from a camp in Lukemalde. and he wouldn't go & leave those men & his first words were (it said) "were 'Dad' were just got to get the rest of those boys out." Bless his heart his heart was big enough to not be selfish & I am sure he long waited liberation. yet had concern for his fellow-men. his Dad assured him "The General will take care of that." (and our Big General over all will take care of all) a mother ^{Mrs Gladys} Quinn —

I pray it wont be long till hes home with you and all other mother sours as well. God Bless you

Mrs Gladys Quinn

Amon Carters Meet After Liberation

WITH THE U. S. 9th ARMY, May 5— (UP) —An American task force of one armored car and four jeeps went to Luckenwalde prison camp to liberate Lt. Amon Carter Jr., son of the prominent Texas publisher, and four other Texas lieutenants, two of them cousins of Jesse Jones, former secretary of commerce.

Carter's liberation coincided with a visit to the 9th Army front by his father, one of the group of editors who visited German death camps on the western front.

Young Carter refused to leave the camp until he was assured trucks were coming to rescue nearly 5,000 men still there.

The first thing he said when he met his father was:

"Dad, we have got to get the rest of those guys right away."

"The General will take care of that," Amon Carter Sr., replied.
