Dear Amon :

When I saw your photograph and that of your son, Lieut. Amon G. Carter, Jr. in the New York Times of Sunday, May 6, I could not suppress a tear from my eyes.

I just cannot tell you, Amon, how happy I am for you and I know another thing and that is that it proves there is a God.

While you wont be home when this letter reaches Fort Worth, I do want to have it waiting there for you to let you know I just could not be happier for you.

With all the best in the world to you, as ever,

Sincerely,

Victor

AMON CARTER'S SON FREED, MEETS FATHER

WITH THE UNITED STATES EIGHTY-THIRD DIVISION, Germany, May 5 (AP)—Lieut. Amon G. Carter Jr., a prisoner of the Germans since Faid Pass, Tunisia, more than two years ago, was reunited here today with his father, publisher of The Fort Worth (Tex.) Star-Telegram. The elder Carter is making a tour of the front after visiting atrocity scenes.

Lieutenant Carter's first words were, "Here I am, Dad." He promptly started figuring out how to get his buddies out of Luckenwalde prison, from which he was liberated by a special patrol sent to get him in time for the reunion.

Overcoming visible embarrassment before the party of Army personnel and press representatives, he kept saying not only to his father but to the general officers present: "We've got to go back and get those other fellows. They're worried about the Russian-German fights going on all around them and we've got to get them." He was reassured that arrangements were being made to evacuate all Luckenwalde prisoners. His father came to Europe with a group of American editors and publishers to view German atrocities at first hand.

Lieutenant Carter said the worst treatment he had received since his capture came at the hands of Italians during the early phases of the war. After being seized at Faid Pass he was flown to Italy in a German JU-52 and the formation was among those attacked regularly by American fighter planes. From Italy he was taken to Germany, then to Poland, back to Berlin, and finally to Luckenwalde.

Coventry Plans Unity Chapel

LONDON, May 5 (AP)—A special chapel of unity, where members of the free churches and Anglicans can worship together, will be a feature of the reconstructed Coventry Cathedral, it was disclosed today. The new edifice will be constructed of rose-red stone, around the old spire and apse that still stand.
