Texas Publisher Meets Freed Son

90
AT THE 83RD DIVISION COMMAND POST, Germany — (AP) — A Texas newspaper publisher and his son, a prisoner of the Germans since Faid Pass, Tunisia, over two years ago, embraced wordlessly here Saturday and then the young soldier announced:

"We've got to go back and get those other fellows."

The reunion took place between Amon Carter, Sr., publisher of the Fort Worth Star Telegram, and his son, Amon, Jr., who was liberated by a special patrol sent to get him from the Luckenwalde prison in time for the event.

The young infantry officer walked up behind his father and said quietly, "Here I am dad." His father turned around obviously overcome with emotion, embraced him and patted him on the back wordlessly.

The lieutenant, overcoming visible embarrassment before the party of army personnel and press representatives, kept saying:

"We've got to go back and get those other fellows. They're worried about the Russian-German fights going on all around them and we've got to get them."

An American army corps commander assured him arrangements were being made to evacuate all the prisoners at Luckenwalde.

The publisher, on a tour with American editors and publishers to view German atrocities, said:

"I find most of these boys of ours who have been in prison camps over here are anxious to get home and have a try guarding our prisoners of war there."

The most surprising phase of his trip, he said, was seeing Germany's "undamaged countryside." He spoke of fat cattle and horses and untouched farm houses and villages.

The younger Carter said he was flown to Capua, Italy, after his capture, and it was there the Italians vented their spite on the American prisoners.

"They spat on us and threw rocks at us," he said, "it was the worst treatment we had from anybody."
