Carter freezes official Iranian assets in U.S.

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP)—President Carter Wednesday froze all official Iranian assets in the United States to prevent Iranian authorities from withdrawing several billion dollars from American banks.

In order to do so, Carter called the situation in Iran a threat to the national security, foreign policy and economy and declared a "national emergency" to deal with that threat.

That finding was required in order for the president to invoke the freeze under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act.

Carter acted after the Iranian government announced it would pull out all government assets, which it valued at about $12 billion but which U.S. officials said were worth less than $6 billion.

Meanwhile, State Department spokesman Jack Tuohy said "things are very much unchanged" concerning the 60 or so Americans held hostage since Nov. 4 at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran by Iranians demanding the return of the ousted shah. "We continue our efforts on a number of fronts to secure their release," Tuohy said.

Treasury Secretary G. William Miller told reporters that Thursday's actions should not cause any disturbance in money markets or any similar threat of a pull-out of assets by other governments.

He also said the freeze should not increase the risk of Iranians seizing assets of Americans in Iran, or assets of the U.S. government in Iran. In any case, Miller said, those assets are not large compared to the frozen Iranian assets.

State Department officials estimated that U.S. public and private investments in Iran now total about $400 million. A New York financial analyst said the bulk of the investment was private.

Miller said the freeze does not affect the assets of any private Iranian official. This means the wealth of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and his family foundation, estimated by confidants at no more than $60 million to $90 million, remain unaffected, Miller said.

Miller said the freeze took effect before the Iranians were able to make any substantial transfers of funds.

The treasury secretary said it is unclear how many claims might be made against the Iranian government, but said "any that we know of would be more than amply covered" by the frozen assets.

Current president endorses Teal, Michel

Pam Roach

By MONICA ANNE KRAUSSE
Editor

Pam Roach announced yesterday that she supports Gary Teal for president and Matt Michel for vice-president in today's election of house officers.

Roach, the current house president, had previously declined to endorse any of the three candidates for president. She said she changed her mind after listening to and watching them campaign.

This year's race is not based on issues, Roach said—instead, "the important thing is which of the candidates can make the best use of the house." She said she believes Teal, with more experience in student government, would be the more effective administrator.

Teal and Warren Mackey were the top vote-getters in Tuesday's house elections, and will face each other once more in today's runoff elections.

Though neither candidate received a majority of the 1,019 votes cast Tuesday, Roach said she believed Mackey is ahead in the race so far.

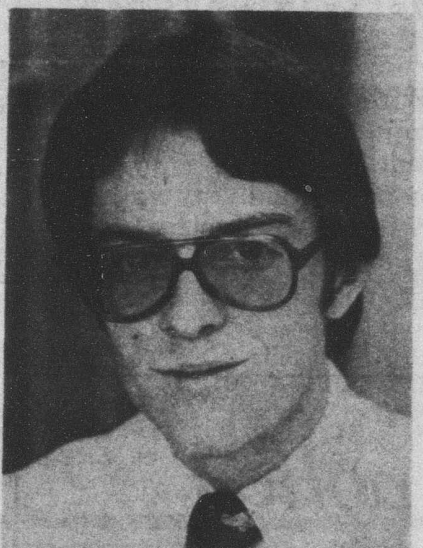

"I'm concerned about the fact that Warren has not had as much experience as Gary has in student government. Gary has been involved in College Republicans, and Brachman—that's more a government-type organization than many on campus.

"It's very easy for the house to sit there and do nothing," Roach said. "It's very easy to pass legislation every Tuesday night that doesn't mean anything, or that will not be acted on by the administration. The bureaucracy around this place can tie you down sometimes."

Teal, a junior computer science major from Abilene, Texas, is currently Student Affairs committee chairman. Mackey, a junior accounting major from Ballwin, Mo., is Roach's administrative assistant.

Matt Michel, a sophomore finance major from Denton, Texas, and Molly Tuttle, a sophomore home economics major from Fort Worth, will also battle for the vice-presidency during today's runoff elections. Students who present their identification cards may vote in the student center or Dan Rogers hall from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. or in the Worth Hills cafeteria until 2 p.m.

NEWS BRIEFS

White House ponders Iran aid

WASHINGTON, D.C.—A White House official said Wednesday the administration has not considered whether to offer any relief aid to Iran as a result of an earthquake that may have killed as many as 500 persons.

The official, embroiled in implementing President Carter's decision to freeze Iranian government assets in the United States, laughed when asked if there had yet been discussions of offering any such aid.

Possible crib death cure found

CLEVELAND, Ohio—Sudden infant death syndrome, the mysterious crib killer responsible for as many as 10,000 infant deaths each year in the United States, can be diagnosed and perhaps prevented, researchers say.

Doctors say the syndrome may now be diagnosed and studied through a technique that reveals abnormalities in the brainstem, which is responsible for breathing and some other automatic functions.

Oil spill cleanup unnecessary

GALVESTON—Scientists monitoring the oil spilling from the burning tanker, Burmah Agate, say it won't be necessary to clean up a four-mile band of oil about a foot wide that washed up on Padre Island.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration scientists had predicted earlier Padre Island would be hit by a giant oil slick produced when the tanker collided with the freighter, Mimosa, 14 days ago.

But Coast Guard spokesman Ray Baker said Tuesday the slick apparently broke up in rough seas during the weekend, and the band of oil that came ashore near Port Mansfield Cut, about 300 miles from Galveston, was just a light sheen.

Texas prepared for rationing

AUSTIN—Texas is prepared to go back to odd-even gasoline rationing but officials do not think it is needed because of the Iran crude oil shutoff, according to Ed Vetter.

Vetter, Texas' chief energy advisor, told reporters Tuesday that the state had no plans to follow California in reinstating odd-even days for gasoline purchasing.

However, that may come later, said Vetter, head of the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Council. "Our November allocation for gasoline is 1 percent below October but we are still getting about 93 percent of what we had last year at this time," Vetter said.

Team blasts burning tank cars

MOLINO, Fla.—Demolition experts who blasted nine derailed tank cars to prevent a runaway explosion said Wednesday the danger was apparently over. But they said federal officials would have to decide when 500 evacuated residents could return home.

"It looks great," said Wayne Rutledge, who led the team that set 360 pounds of explosives around the cars late Tuesday.

The resulting blast sent a mushroom-shaped fireball 2,000 feet into the air that could be seen 20 miles from the Louisville & Nashville Railroad derailment site.

Texans demonstrate against Iran

(AP)—Demonstrators across Texas fanned the fires of anti-Iranian sentiment, burning the Ayatollah Khomeini in effigy, staging a silent vigil for American hostages and threatening Iranian American citizens.

Carrying placards reading "Iran is a four-letter word" and "Let's Play Cowboys and Iranians," demonstrators marched outside the Iranian Consulate for the fifth day Tuesday and burned the Ayatollah Khomeini in effigy.

In Beaumont, about 100 Lamar University students put on white armbands Tuesday, vowing not to remove them until the Americans were freed by Iranian students. The armbands bear the number "62" in red, the number of Americans believed held captive inside the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

University of Texas at Arlington campus police closed off portions of Cooper Street during rush hour traffic Wednesday evening as about 150 demonstrators poured onto the thoroughfare. Cooper Street runs through the middle of the Tarrant County campus.

The protests were mostly peaceful and UTA Police Chief J.D. McGee said the street was blocked "to keep people from getting hurt."

The campus has been the site of many anti-shah demonstrations by Iranian students in recent years, although most of the Iranians watched Wednesday's activities from a good distance.

Assistant communications professor David Groner told four Iranian students at the protest that he would not teach supporters of Khomeini in his classroom.

"As far as I am concerned, if the present conditions continue in Iran, if a supporter of the Ayatollah Khomeini told me he wanted to be a viable member of my class, I would say no," Groner said.

House passes bill to study alcohol

BY SUSAN WALKER
House Writer

The House of Student Representatives passed two bills Tuesday at its regular meeting, including one entitled "A Bill to Study Alcohol on Campus," submitted by the Student Affairs committee.

The Executive Board of the House will take applications from the student body and select 10 students for a committee that will study student opinion on alcohol on campus. The committee is to prepare a report by April, 1980.

"A Bill to Support a Survey," presented by the Academic Affairs committee, was also passed unanimously. The committee was given $59.64 for expenses to conduct a campus-wide survey.

Committee chairperson Matt Michel said the survey would help both the administration and the House "get a better feeling for student opinion."

The survey will seek opinions on faculty evaluations, tuition (flat rate vs. per hour rate), the extension of library hours on Saturdays and during finals week and other areas of student concern, Michel said.

The psychology department will study the survey "to make sure the questions aren't biased or misleading," Michel added.

Roach said the House sent a letter to Vice Chancellor Howard Wible regarding the safety inspections by Houston General Insurance Co. Wible said that the insurance company will not be going into student rooms that are unoccupied, Roach said.

Roach also reported that the University Council had considered the possibility of a mid-semester break next fall, but at its Nov. 12 meeting the idea was rejected.

Fate often determined by human flaw, not chance

BY AMY PLUNKETT
Skiff Columnist

Sometimes fate, seems to play an important part in life. Tragedy, joy, and fearsometimes seems governed by the vagaries of chance. And, yet how much of life really is fate and how much is ignorance or stubbornness? Or hope?

A second-grader in Boston, Mass., she was scared that day she went to a strange school but she was scared for a different reason than most second-graders. She was one of many black children being bused to school under a newly enforced Boston intergration law.

When she arrived at that new school, the young girl and her classmates were greeted by thousands of yelling, angry, white "adults." The cry "Go back home! Go back home where you belong," echoed in the streets and into the building.

Later that day, she was taken on a stretcher to a Boston hospital, a very sick little girl. She had what thousands of blacks get every year - sickle cell anemia. Her case, however, was not diagnosed in time. In a couple of days, she died - incoherent, not even recognizing her parents.

When she died, she was not thinking of home. Instead she died repeating the last few words she ever heard - "Go back home! Go back where you belong!"

Chad Green contracted leukemia as an infant. Doctors put Chad on painful chemotherapy or drug treatments in August, 1977. Two months later, Diane and Gerald Green took their son off the treatments and substituted a controversial Laetrile nutritional therapy program. In February, 1978, doctors reported that Chad was suffering from a severe relapse of leukemia.

Dr. John Truman took Chad's case to court and the judge ruled that the young boy should be put back on chemotherapy treatments. The parents refused.

After a court battle first to appeal the original ruling, and then to have Chad's treatment changed to Laetrile, the Greens were ordered to put their son back on chemotherapy.

Shortly after the ruling, Chad's parents took him to Tijuana, where he continued to receive Laetrile treatments at a clinic.

One reporter described Chad's life as a "tug-of-war between his parents, and the medical profession."

Chad died on Friday, October 12,

1979. Cause of death: uncertain.

No one saw the young soldier die. Residents reported hearing shots and the police saw a communist patrol remove "the apparently lifeless body of a young soldier from the vehicle."

He is a nameless East German soldier allegedly shot and killed by fellow guards. When he was shot, he was trying to smash through the 13-foot-high Berlin Wall with a heavy construction vehicle.

No one knows and doubtless will ever know why he was trying to smash through the Wall.

Perhaps he wanted a chance at a kind of freedom of which he had only heard-or dreamed. Perhaps he was only searching for a way out of the life he was living or had to live. Perhaps he got what he was searching for.

Three factual cases totally unrelated except for one thing—the tragedy of the circumstances. Circumstances all caused by fate—or by human ignorance or hope.

Perhaps if people were educated and truth was a recognizable thing life would not hold these inevitable tragedies.

And yet, if ignorance were removed, would stubborn hope still remain?

Skiff restates support for effective candidates

Thursday's run-off election for the offices of president and vice president in the Student House of Representatives is no surprise to us. Decisions are tougher to make when there are a number of qualified students running for leadership positions.

What was surprising—pleasantly surprising—was the larger than expected voter turnout. Last year only 300 to 400 students voted in House officer elections. In Tuesday's election more than 1,000 students voted.

We're not saying that apathy is cured—not by a long shot. There are more than 5900 eligible voters. But, we're happy to see the progress.

In Thursday's run-off election we continue to support the two candidates who, we believe, will create not merely a competent student house but a creative, forceful government.

For president, we support Gary Teal.

During his two semesters in the house, Teal has shown ability to take responsible action to solve issues.

The president's main responsibility is to see that house recommendations are not ignored by the rest of the university. Teal understands this aspect of the presidency. His administration would be an effective and responsible one.

For vice president, we support Matt Michel.

Michel has shown himself to work effectively with others—from students to faculty to students.

The vice president needs complete familiarity with the resources available to him. With three semesters on the house, Michel has the experience and administrative ability to best fill that role.

Precious moments escape student

'I took my time away from me'

BY MARTHA KIRBY
Skiff Columnist

Please, smell a flower for me today. Take time to listen to the birds as they converse in their twittering language.

I can't even hear them anymore—the only reason I know they're there is because I remember last year, when I "had the time," I heard them on the way to class and in my dorm room, greeting the day.

Now, as I scurry to class, my eyes are to the ground, trying to make it pass underneath me more swiftly so

I won't be late. I don't see the blades of grass, the acorns on the ground, the squirrels, the fallen leaves or bushes or flowers.

I know they're there, though. I've done it to myself. I work 35 hours a week, am a full-time student, and am involved in a number of extracurricular activities—I took my time away from me. If I have an hour of free time during the day I feel guilty if I'm not studying. Most of the time it seems that all I do is go to class, go to work, study and sleep.

You're probably wondering what brought this on. My sister just got a job. She was ecstatic, and I remembered a time when I, too, was thrilled at my ability to work full-time and be a full-time student.

But soon she will see the carefree days of her college career slipping away. There just won't be enough time to be in all those organizations, meet all those people from across the globe, giggle in the library, or just read a sappy book. Time not spent in class or studying or at work will be spent eating or sleeping.

Suddenly, even weekends don't offer time for rest and recreation. Laura's weekends are spent participating in the organizations she doesn't have time for during the week.

And so it goes. When I wake up in the morning I don't think, "Gee, I'm lucky to be alive." I think, "What do I have to do first, and how little time can I do it in?"

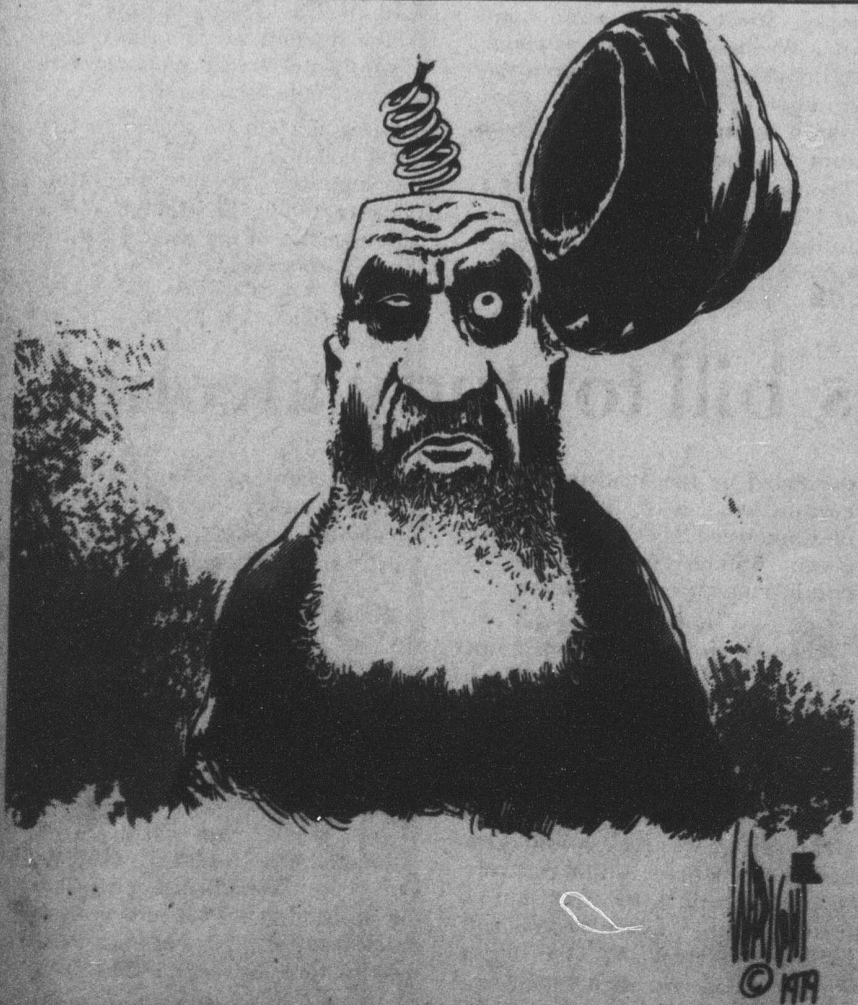

I don't notice the small—but oh, how precious—things in life. The wind is something that blows my hair in my eyes, the grass is something that makes me sneeze, the birds are simply background static, and I... I am caught up in my own little world of hurry, hurry, hurry. Please, don't let this happen to you.

Please. Smell a flower today. For me.

Passive resistance

Dear Editor:

With each passing day since the take-over of the American embassy in Iran, there seems to be growing public demand for some sort of military intervention, as well as increasing numbers of violent outbursts against any and all Iranians living in this country.

I think that neither of these tendencies is likely to accomplish anything except to show that citizens of this country are perfectly capable of stooping to the same irrational, unreasonable, and inhumane level on which the Iranian radicals seem to be.

Any military action to free the American hostages would likely only make their deaths certain, and would almost certainly cause the deaths of many innocent Iranians, including children.

Violent outbursts against Iranians in this country are blatant examples of blind racial hatred, since most Iranians are in the country legally, many oppose the current regime in Iran, and very few have participated in any kind of violent demonstrations against the United States.

If the people of the United States want to react to the Iranian crisis with a show of strength, I think the most appropriate and most effective action would be a spontaneous, voluntary, nationwide conservation effort to meet the petroleum shortfalls we will be experiencing with the loss of Iranian oil.

We would never have had this Iranian crisis if we had not felt dependent upon Iran for our national interest and thus propped up the Shah and ignored his tyranny for nearly three decades.

Now it is time for the American people to prove to themselves and to the world that they are capable of surviving and prospering through their own individual strength, determination, and imagination, without depending on other nations and exploiting other people.

It is easy to ask that some other people be sent to Iran to kill and be killed. It is easy to harass and injure Iranian students in this country when they are hopelessly outnumbered.

It is more difficult for each and every person to take personal responsibility in this crisis and volunteer to significantly reduce consumption of energy while patiently hoping for a solution to the hostage situation which will cost no lives—American or Iranian.

I hope the American people will have the courage and determination to overcome blind hatred and self-centeredness and work together for a peaceful and permanent solution to the Iranian crisis.

Run-off

Officer candidates voice final arguments

Presidential candidate... Warren Mackey

The presidency—the most decisive position of leadership. This is the position that I am seeking in order to lead you, my constituents. It demands enthusiasm, intelligence, experience, knowledge and desire. Vote Warren Mackey for president.

First of all, I would like to explain what I see as my foremost qualification. During the past semester, I was appointed to the position of administrative assistant by Student Body President Pam Roach. As administrative assistant, I have had the opportunity to work as Pam Roach's right-hand man—observing, advising, and assisting her and the entire executive board in their daily activities.

I believe I know what it would entail to be president of the TCU student body.

I am the current chairman of the House study committee, which is an office that was appointed to me by Pam Roach. Along with the other members of my committee, I am striving to eliminate the internal and external problems that confront the house.

By looking into possible re-structuring of the House of Student Representatives we will be able to use each member's time to its fullest potential, and also increase the efficiency rate of the House itself.

Extreme caution must be used when students have at their command an annual budget of $100,000. In the past, only the treasurer had any knowledge of what this large amount of money was used for and how to handle it. This is too big of a responsibility for one person.

I am an accounting major with a 3.5 accounting grade point average. I have had a year and a half of treasury experience. And I am chairman of another organization's finance committee. I have also worked with the House of Student Representatives finance committee. This experience will not only allow me to lend a knowledgeable hand to the House treasurer, but I will also be able to bring in new ideas that will help develop the treasury's accounting system to its fullest.

I found out my experience in student government by being an active member in many different committees. These committees are the student-trustee relationship committee, extramural funding committee, student organization committee, special interest group subcommittee, administrative cabinet and the executive board.

Now you know my qualifications and you know how much experience I have already had with the student government, so here I rest my argument. I am the best person for the job, and I would like to see your vote cast today to elect Warren Mackey president of the House of Student Representatives.

Presidential candidate... Gary Teal

The big turnout Tuesday proves that the way students perceive the House is changing. There seems to be a glimmer of hope returning that the House can work for us, meeting our needs and responding to our opinions. Choosing our leadership carefully is an important step. As a freshman at TCU, I was in the marching band, and I also ran for my dorm's seat in the House. Though I lost that race, I was elected Vice President of the TCU College Republicans that semester. I have served a year as that organization's President, and also chaired the Students for Bill Clements committee last year.

Last spring, as a sophomore, I became a House member. Joining the Finance committee allowed me to learn quickly how the House spends our money. As a computer science major with six hours in accounting, I enjoyed working on that committee.

During that semester I worked hard to defeat a reapportionment plan which would have complicated the House structure and guaranteed our nearly 3000 town students only one vote.

This semester I became the Chairman of the student affairs committee of the House. Each week all the committee chairs meet, so I've been able to follow the work of all six of the committees. My own committee hears reports from the Food Service Control Commission, whose work I coordinate. I established the FSCC in conjunction with the Executive Board before the House had even met this semester. We've also been working on getting back the yearbook, an after-dark escort service, and a bill to form a committee to study the possibility of alcohol on campus, which the House passed Tuesday.

I am a committee chair not only in the House, but in the TCU chapter of the Association for Computer Machinery, and the Brachman Living-Learning Community. I am a member of the Trustee-Student Relations community, which met last week, and the House Study Committee. I have attended the University Retreat for two years.

My experience as an orientation counselor and a student admissions counselor has given me the opportunity to speak sincerely and frankly, and still give newcomers a good impression of TCU.

My only promise is that I will use my experience to see that all bills passed by the House are given serious attention by the administration. We have more power than we think as a student body, and I hope to use some of that potential to make the House an effective answer to some of our problems—large and small. You can help me do that by voting today for Gary Teal.

Vice-presidential candidate... Matt Michel

The selection of the officers of the Student House of Representatives is not a matter to be taken lightly. While the voter should look at qualifications and experience when judging a candidate's attitude and approach to their campaign to see if they are taking the office seriously.

The candidates chosen by the voters will be in charge of running the student House, one of the most important, if not the most important student organizations on campus. It is an organization that is the official voice of the students and operates with a budget ranging from $90,000 to $100,000 every year.

The newly-elected student leaders will also be the representatives of the TCU student body not only to the university administration, faculty and trustees, but also the alumni, the Fort Worth community and to other student governments across the state.

After three semesters on the House, I've gained a great deal more experience than anyone who has run against me. I am chairman of the House academic affairs committee, a position appointed by House President Pam Roach. I also serve on the administrative cabinet, the House study committee, the trustee-student relations committee, and I am serving on my second university committee.

I am the only candidate running for vice-president who is a member of the administrative cabinet. I am the only candidate who knows how the cabinet is run and consequently the one who knows how to direct and lead it, a major duty of the vice president.

I am the only candidate to attend the 1979 University Retreat, where I served as a group leader. By attending the retreat I gained the knowledge and experience needed to organize and run it, another of the vice president's major responsibilities.

By serving on two university committees and occasionally helping the vice-president in filling vacancies on these committees, I am aware of the problems that occur with this task and the means by which to solve them—more of the vice president's major responsibilities.

I am the only candidate to serve as a chairman of a House standing committee.

I am the only candidate in the run-offs for vice president that has attended every House meeting this semester. In fact, I am the only candidate in the run-offs for vice president that has attended a single House meeting this semester.

As evidenced by my experience and service on the House of Student Representatives, shown by my membership on numerous committees and my chairmanship of the House academic affairs committee, I am the best qualified candidate for the office of vice-president.

Vice-presidential candidate... Molly Tuttle

What if there was a University Retreat and no one came? The office of vice-president needs experience leading people, and the enthusiasm to make it effective.

I have the enthusiasm it took to get Greeks and Independents together for a very successful Christmas activity last year. I am willing to spend time to communicate with you the students, as is evidenced by my campaign. This run-off election has shown me you are ready for action.

I will do more than offer promises to represent all of TCU. My specific plan is to revisit organizations after the election so I can talk to you, on a personal level. You tell me how TCU can better meet your needs—I will speak for you in the student House.

Do you want a vice-president whose experience is limited to the student House? I do have experience in the House of Representatives, but also as a leader, I have three years of experience with other organizations on campus. I feel like this has given me the opportunity to know more of you. Having been on the House of Representatives and the activities committee, I know how to organize. For example I helped with the campaign to get more TEG scholarships at TCU. As a result we were able to send representatives to convince Texas Congressmen to approve the bill. But the House of Representatives is not my only experience. I am on the Student Foundation, working closely with prospective students and alumni. I have been active in Show Girls, Spirit Wranglers, Operation Welcome, concert committee, Fashion Council, Delta Ladies, Student Dietetic Association and Phi Upsilon Omicron.

Who do you want to speak for you? Do you want someone who has a specific plan and is able to represent all types of students at TCU? I believe you, the students are ready for action.

Molly Tuttle is best qualified to work for all of TCU. Your ideas are important to me. Show me your interest by voting Thursday in the run-off election.

Editorial comment—These are the four candidates who have proceeded to the run-off elections. Students will vote for one presidential candidate and one vice-presidential candidate today.

Voting booths will be set up at three different campus locations: the student center lobby, Worth Hills cafeteria and the business building.

Voting will take place between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. And students must present a valid TCU I.D. to cast a ballot.

National League names co-MVP

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Both Willie Stargell, the 38-year-old wonder of the Pittsburgh Pirates, and young Keith Hernandez of the St. Louis Cardinals said they were satisfied with sharing the National League's Most Valuable Player Award for the 1979 season.

But did either one really deserve it outright, or not at all? According to the 24-man voting committee—two from each of the NL's 12 cities—of the Baseball Writers Association of America, there was no separating the two players in total points. In the balloting, announced Tuesday, each received 216 points.

However, the breakdown in the voting was quite curious. Stargell received 10 first-place votes, three seconds, four thirds, one fourth and two sixths. But what is difficult to comprehend is that four writers completely ignored him, meaning they did not think he was even among the 10 most valuable players in the league.

Hernandez, on the other hand, was the only player named on all 24 ballots, collecting only four firsts, but eight seconds, seven thirds, two fourths and three fifths.

A first-place vote was worth 14 points, with nine for second, eight for third, etc.

Statistically, the 26-year-old Hernandez far outshone Stargell, except in home runs.

The Cardinals' first baseman played in all but one of his team's 162 games, led the NL in batting with a .344 average, in doubles with 48 and in runs scored with 16 and fifth in runs batted in with 105. He also hit 11 triples and 11 home runs in 610 at-bats.

Stargell, used judiciously by Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner, appeared in 126 games, had 424 at-bats, 60 runs scored, 119 hits, 19 doubles, no triples, 32 homers, 82 RBI and batted .281.

But the Pirates won the NL East Division championship, and Stargell, affectionately nicknamed "Pops," was their inspirational leader and their key man down the stretch when they held off the Montreal Expos. St. Louis finished third, 12 games behind Pittsburgh.

Not coincidentally, the four writers who failed to recognize Stargell on their ballots—Mike Littwin of the Los Angeles Times, Tim Tucker of the Atlanta Journal, Kenny Hand of the Houston Post and Harry Shattuck of the Houston Chronicle—all covered Western

NL co-MVP Willie Stargell

Division teams and did not see the Pirates' slugger play after Aug. 29.

"What are we going to do, break it in half?" asked the happy Stargell, who had finished a close second in the voting to both Joe Torre in 1971 and to Pete Rose in 1973.

Kidding aside, the two-time bridesmaid, the hero of the Pirates' NL playoff and World Series triumphs, said he did not think he would be named MVP this time in the balloting based on regular-season performances.

SPORTS

"I thought it would go to the guys who played every day," confessed Stargell, the captain of the Pirates and considered a sentimental choice by some observers this year. "I'm happy for myself and I am happy for Hernandez. . . I know what kind of a player he is."

Asked about the four writers who overlooked him, Stargell said politely, "I don't want to get into the negative side of it."

"I'm glad we could share it," said the slick-fielding Hernandez. "I figured the sentiment was with Willie and he's deserving. I thought I'd finish second or third. I felt the year I had was deserving of an MVP, but Willie had a great year too, and he's the leader of that ballclub."

"The fact that it's a tie makes it all the better, because Willie's a great man and it's an honor just for me to have my name next to his."

The Pros

Jeff Rutledge, the Rams' rookie quarterback, nearly outgained the Bears' Walter Payton on the ground (28 yards to 41) Sunday, but whether he can pass as well as Payton remains in doubt.

It was Rutledge's two fourth-quarter interceptions that inspired a come-from-ahead 23-27 Los Angeles loss. In the final moments, the Rams almost pulled the game out behind recently signed Bob Lee, generally considered the best passing real estate man in America, but his 50-yard throw was dropped.

Oddly enough, even though the Rams' record is now 5-6, they are no longer leading the NFC West.

Meanwhile, Detroit (1-10) and Seattle (5-6) swapped places in The Bottom Ten in a straight deal involving no draft choices.

Seattle gained 427 yards against Cleveland, 434 yards more than the Seahawks made the previous week against the Rams. Seattle must have found a plumber to unplug its backed-up offense.

Team, Record	Last Week	Next Week
1) Detroit (1-10)	14-16, Tampa Bay	Minnesota
2-5) NFC West (16-28)	Lost 3 of 4	Waivers possible

6) Seattle (5-6); 7) Kansas City (4-7); 8) Cincinnati (2-9); 9) Baltimore (4-7); 10) St. Louis (3-8).

Crummy Game of the Week: Atlanta (4-7) vs. Los Angeles (5-6) (two of NFC West's prime contenders).

Quote Book: New England QB Steve Grogan, who suffered a vicious sacking early in the game: "It wasn't until four minutes left in the half that I knew what was going on. . . they tell me I was calling some plays in the huddle we really shouldn't have."
