

Lt. Carter, Liberated, Performs Camp Duty

Lt. Amon G. Carter Jr., son of the publisher of the Star-Telegram, is well and has been liberated by the Russian advance from a German prison camp, according to news dispatches which had been received here today.

Three released U. S. soldiers from Luckenwalde reported that Lt. Carter is remaining at the camp in compliance with orders for men to stay there until arrangements can be made for their departure. They said they saw him Tuesday and that he was in charge of the distribution of Red Cross parcels.

Lt. Carter was reported missing in action in Central Tunisia Feb. 14, 1943. He was reported a war prisoner April 15.
